

LESBIAN, GAY, BISEXUAL, TRANSGENDER

The LGBTQ Studies program posits sex and sexuality as central analytical categories within many different fields of inquiry. This emerging discipline scrutinizes the cultural production, dissemination, and vicissitudes of sexuality while attempting to decipher the meanings inscribed in the practices and discourses of sex. We may say that LGBTQ Studies does for sex and sexuality what women's studies does for gender. It has grown out of women's and gender studies, cultural studies, and the post-1969 discourse on the politics of sexuality both in the public sphere and the more limited arena of scholarly endeavor.

Faculty

Bill Johnson Gonzalez, PhD
Associate Professor, English and Program Director
Harvard University

Affiliated Faculty

Douglas Bruce, PhD
Assistant Professor, Health Sciences & Public Health

Gary Cestaro, PhD
Associate Professor, Modern Languages

Michael DeAngelis, PhD
Associate Professor, School of Continuing and Professional Studies

Dustin Goltz, PhD
Associate Professor, Communication

Kelly Kessler, PhD
Associate Professor, Communication

Allison McCracken, PhD
Associate Professor, American Studies

Donald L. Opitz, PhD
Associate Professor, School of Continuing and Professional Studies

Francesca Royster, PhD
Professor, English

Ann Russo, PhD
Associate Professor, Women's and Gender Studies

Lourdes Torres, PhD
Professor, Latin American and Latino Studies