PROFESSIONAL COMMUNICATION (MA) ONLINE

The MA in Professional Communication is an accelerated, one-year online master's degree with curriculum formed around the latest industry developments and trends in external and internal communications. The program is designed for busy working professionals whose aim is to assume communication manager, director level and associated leadership positions in communication departments and teams in a range of workplaces, including companies and startups, agencies or consultancies, and non-profit organizations.

Students in this program progress through the innovative online curriculum together as a cohort, taking courses in a pre-set sequence that takes full advantage of the DePaul academic calendar. Taught by award-winning faculty with industry connections and a commitment to student success, the professional communication program begins and ends with weekend virtual or in-person residencies in Chicago, which allow students to further connect with fellow classmates, professors, college alumni and industry professionals.

For the final project in the program, students work on a real-world workplace communication challenge that benefits an organization and its stakeholders. This project also gives the student an opportunity to build their portfolio and further network within the profession. Approved project partners include world-class organizations.
