It surveys the world’s news systems, determinants of international news, development communication, communication and international relations, media responsibilities in international conflicts, communication technology, and the globalization of media.

JOUR 311 | CLIMATE CHANGE COMMUNICATION | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Individuals make up their minds on climate change, energy development, and other issues of pressing public policy importance through a complex set of factors: values, demographics, political ideology, and so on. Journalists, strategic communicators, scientists, and policy analysts need to be able to communicate effectively with diverse public audiences on climate and energy topics. This course is oriented from a science communication perspective and draws on social scientific research on communicating on climate change and energy issues. We will take a human perspective on climate issues and focuses on the social, political, and cultural aspects of climate change. The course covers best practices for promoting and facilitating public dialogue on climate change policy and global energy systems. Topics covered include: climate change public opinion and knowledge, media portrayals of climate change and its societal effects, climate skepticism and denial, psychological factors that contribute to values and beliefs on climate science, journalism and covering climate issues, framing and developing narratives on climate impacts, and climate change in popular culture. Students will conduct original research to analyze and evaluate climate change communication. For the final project, students have the option of completing a major journalistic reporting project, designing an advocacy or marketing campaign, or conducting a research project.

JOUR 316 | SOUND AND VISION | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course introduces students to the unique ways that photography and audio documentary can blend together. The course will combine documentary and experimental production to help students learn to create audio documentary and visual projects and to work in mixed-media contexts.

JOUR 317 | EXPERIENTIAL LEARNING | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Students learn advanced reporting techniques while developing projects under the direction of a faculty supervisor. This course is designed to take learning out of the classroom and enables students to develop portfolio pieces while gaining critical real world experiences in reporting.

JOUR 325 | POLITICS & GOVERNMENT REPORTING | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course teaches skills, resources and institutional context for covering politics, government, elections and other aspects of public affairs in Chicago and elsewhere. Students learn journalistic techniques and immerse in the political culture of Chicago. Topics include how to report on campaigns organized, financed and operated; how elections are covered; how to read polls and campaign finance reports; how and write stories based on records, data and other public affairs information. JOUR 275 is a prerequisite for this course.

JOUR 330 | WRITING FOR BROADCAST | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course introduces students to the writing and formatting requirements of broadcast journalists. Part of this instruction is to give students an understanding of how writing for broadcast differs from writing for print and the awareness it takes to write copy that supports and strengthens the visuals that viewers will be watching. Strong writing is the backbone of broadcast journalism, and this course gives students a firm foundation in the writing skills that produce broadcast stories worth watching. JOUR 275 and 278 are prerequisites for this course.

JOUR 342 | SOCIAL MEDIA & THE NEWS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Journalists use mobile devices and social media in news-gathering, distributing content and engagement with active audiences. This course blends the theory and practice of social media to provide a hands-on introduction to, and practice on, a digital-first approach to journalism. We will analyze and apply a range of social and mobile media tools. This course has a dual purpose. On a skills level, you will be able to hone your professional social media practice and to build your technical skills with social media apps and platforms. By the end of the quarter you should have developed a "voice" on social platforms for your professional self. Secondly, we will put a critical lens to social journalism and the application of journalistic ethics to mobile and social media. The course covers emerging theory on social media, including: social listening, audience engagement and analytics, citizen journalism, visual storytelling, best practices for content curation and covering breaking news events with social tools, as well as verification of social content and ethics. You will develop and implement a professional social media strategy, practice with a variety of mobile journalism and social media tools and curate an online professional brand. JOUR 275 is a prerequisite for this course.

JOUR 343 | JOURNALISM AND THE AMERICAN EXPERIENCE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This seminar analyzes the current condition of American print, broadcast and online journalism in light of their historic past. Journalism’s social responsibilities and its functioning as a business are examined across major periods of American history—the colonial and revolutionary press, the early Republican and penny press, the Civil War press and the press of industrializing America, the rise of the tabloid press, and the role of the press in reporting the development of the United States as a world power during World War II and in its aftermath will be captured. JOUR 349 is a prerequisite for this course.

JOUR 349 | TOPICS IN MEDIA LAW | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This class focuses on selected topics of First Amendment rights, media law, and press freedom. See schedule for description of current topic.

JOUR 350 | RADIO NEWS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Nowhere has the rise of new technologies had a greater impact than in radio reporting. This course gives students opportunities to stream their stories through field and studio productions that connect listeners within communities and around the world. Students will be trained in writing for the ear, and the unique local and international possibilities of radio reporting. JOUR 275 and JOUR 278 are prerequisites for this course.
JOUR 280 is a prerequisite for this class.

JOUR 330 | POLITICAL COMMUNICATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course examines the political communication process, including the press, public opinion, civic life, elections, public policy, civic institutions, and other elements of democratic decision-making. Students study how journalists, politicians, citizens, and political strategists construct, transmit, and understand political messages at all levels of government, including how news, advertising, and entertainment media contribute to the shaping of political perceptions, emotions, and behaviors in a variety of circumstances domestically and internationally. Topics covered include how the political communication is affected by different forms of government and press systems; ownership and regulation economics of journalism; the sociological processes of the news industry; the psychological and sociological effects of news; and technological forces and shifting news consumption patterns.

JOUR 361 | JOURNALISM LAW AND ETHICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course examines legal and ethical issues in journalism with a focus on the First Amendment and the rights and responsibilities of the news media. Students will learn the constitutional rights of all citizens regarding censorship, defamation, privacy, intellectual property, and commercial speech, and will study how technological developments are challenging the courts with how to apply the law to digital media. Those legal aspects are considered in relation to case studies that chronicle journalists’ ethical responsibilities, including protecting sources, balancing professional duties and personal values, sharing and using social media content, and avoiding deceptive reporting practices.

JOUR 362 | THE PRESS AND THE PRESIDENCY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This seminar describes the current and historic relationship between the mass media and the American presidency, focusing on the connections between press coverage to agenda-setting and public opinion in presidential campaigns. Students will analyze conditions in which press-presidential relations are cooperative or adversarial, including the market forces that have shaped that relationship and the news values that have reinforced it.

JOUR 364 | INVESTIGATIVE REPORTING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The course will include discussions and reporting projects that will analyze how investigative story ideas are developed; how decisions are made in the selection and development of investigative stories; how public records and other sources of information are obtained and used in investigative reporting; ethical dilemmas; and the impact of investigative journalism on public opinion and policy, with a particular focus on issues of race, diversity, and urban affairs.

JOUR 275 and 278 are prerequisites for this course.

JOUR 365 | TELEVISION NEWS I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This is a course in electronic newsgathering. Student teams will shoot and edit stand up news packages. To do this, students will learn the basic elements in developing a broadcast news story—from originating the story idea, researching it, illustrating it, doing interviews, and then packaging the story for air.

JOUR 275 and JOUR 330 are a prerequisite for this class.

JOUR 366 | MAGAZINE REPORTING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The digital world of reporting and editing has created unparalleled opportunities to reach specific readers with targeted stories. This course introduces students to the opportunities of magazine writing and the strategies used by magazine writers. Writing assignments will strengthen a student’s grasp of the resources available to modern magazine writers and the techniques of research and interviewing that are the basis of skilled storytelling.

JOUR 275 and JOUR 278 are a prerequisite for this class.

JOUR 367 | INTERNATIONAL REPORTING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is designed as a workshop to introduce students to the practice of international reporting. It provides students with the background, knowledge and techniques needed to cover world affairs. Discussion topics include reporting strategies, challenges and opportunities for foreign correspondence in the light of globalization and technological change. Students are expected to develop cross-cultural sensitivity and critical thinking about international news. As much as possible, the course links global issues to the local community.

JOUR 275 and JOUR 278 are prerequisites for this course.

JOUR 368 | SPORTS REPORTING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Sports reporting is a go-to destination for online, print, and broadcast consumers of sports information. This course gives students an understanding of the social and cultural significance of sports. It trains them to look for themes and details that go beyond the simple score of a contest to the symbolic importance of athletics in the post-modern experience. Students will complete the course with a new appreciation for what makes for strong sports reporting and what accounts for its unique hold on the popular imagination.

JOUR 370 | MULTIMEDIA NEWS PRODUCTION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This advanced course builds on what students learned in Introduction to Online Reporting and Production. The emphasis is on developing a story package that utilizes interactivity and multimedia features to engage the online audience. The class is designed to simulate the workflow in digital newsrooms. Students are expected to develop and manage content for a class project, thereby gaining hands-on learning of the process of multimedia news production.

JOUR 280 is a prerequisite for this class.
JOUR 371 | ADVANCED REPORTING I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Advanced Reporting I combines classroom instruction with hands-on field experience producing professional-quality broadcast reporting. Students select a single topic for the class and participate in the initial research, production, scripting and editing. Some stories may take longer than one quarter to complete, therefore a two-quarter commitment is required. In addition students must have a working knowledge of government at the local, state and federal level. Students will be required to file Freedom of Information Act requests and track campaign contributions. The class is open to a limited number of underclass and graduate students who will need to make application for the class at the Center for Journalism, Integrity and Excellence.
JOUR 275 and JOUR 278 and instructor permission are prerequisites for this class.

JOUR 372 | ADVANCED REPORTING II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Advanced Reporting II is a continuation of the project work started in JOUR 371 and combines classroom instruction with hands-on field experience broadcast reporting. Students continue reporting work on their topics including research, production, scripting and editing. Projects reach completion in the second of the two-course sequence. As in JOUR 371, students must have a working knowledge of government at the local, state and federal level. Students will be required to file Freedom of Information Act requests and track campaign contributions. The class is open to a limited number of underclass and graduate students who will need to make application for the class at the Center for Journalism, Integrity and Excellence.
JOUR 275, JOUR 278, JOUR 371 and instructor consent are prerequisites for this class.

JOUR 374 | COMMUNITY JOURNALISM | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Students will examine the work of major news chains that have begun experimenting with local coverage patterns that are informed by community leaders and community organizations identifying what matters in their community. Supporters of this approach claim it is the future for news organizations attempting to fulfill their social responsibility. Critics claim it undermines the independence of the press.
JOUR 275 and JOUR 278 are prerequisites for this course.

JOUR 375 | LONG FORM JOURNALISM | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This is a project-based television reporting class that emphasizes longer form magazine and documentary journalism. Students will examine and apply story telling methods used in television news magazine programs and documentaries. The course will cover story arcs, character development, timelines, and other form techniques. Students will be in the field producing TV news magazine and mini-documentary reports.
JOUR 365 or instructor permission is a prerequisite for this class.

JOUR 376 | TOPICS IN JOURNALISM | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Focuses on a specific topic related to the field of journalism. See schedule for description of current topic.

JOUR 378 | ADVANCED PHOTOJOURNALISM | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course builds on the introductory lessons of Photojournalism training by helping students gain experience with professional photo equipment and building skills in publishing images professionally. Students will learn about shooting, editing and sharing their work via digital media platforms while developing an understanding of the ethical obligations of photographers in news organizations.
JOUR 276 (or instructor permission) is a prerequisite for this course.

JOUR 379 | LIFESTYLE REPORTING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course gives students the tools to write Lifestyle stories and to think creatively. Assignments will include human-interest stories, health, fitness, design, fashion, food, leisure and social issues. The class concentrates on the tools reporters need to create this kind of work, from good quotes to relevant sourcing.
JOUR 275 and 278 are prerequisites for this course.

JOUR 380 | WRITING FOR THE DEPAULIA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is designed for the serious journalism student who wants on-deadline experience writing for The DePaulia newspaper and web site. Students will cover beats of interest to the DePaul community throughout the quarter and also will receive assignments from DePaulia editors. Stories and beats can be as varied as campus news, sports, the arts or news in the Lincoln Park and South Loop communities. Students may repeat the course once for credit. Not available for DePaulia editors.
JOUR 275 and JOUR 278 are prerequisites for this course.
JOUR 396 | JOURNALISM CAPSTONE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Students connect their journalism skills and knowledge with their learning in liberal studies to contemplate journalism’s societal responsibilities and construct a multimedia reporting project that informs the public about an important issue. Students report for 10 weeks on a subject of societal significance and assemble a digital portfolio of their work from classes, internships, and student media. They analyze, synthesize, and reflect on material that draws interdisciplinary connections to deepen their understanding of journalism’s democratic function, probe professional ethical issues, and improve their ability to articulate complex ideas when reporting the news.
Senior standing and status as either a Journalism or Communication and Media major are prerequisites for this course.

JOUR 398 | JOURNALISM STUDY AWAY/ABROAD | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course exposes students to experiential learning and immersive educational experiences in newsrooms and professional journalism worksites at locations around the nation and world. Sites may vary based on topic but include key locations in the journalism world such as New York City. Students apply concepts from their journalism course work to their experience during the study away/abroad, articulating the impact of the experience on their understanding of how professional news operates, and reflect on how the experience helps them add depth to their understanding of professional journalism ethics and its application to their career goals.
JOUR 275 and JOUR 278 are prerequisites for this course.

JOUR 503 | REPORTING FOR CONVERGED NEWSROOMS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is designed to equip journalists with the techniques needed in assembling and producing stories that can be published and distributed across integrated media platforms. Students will learn to write and edit reports for online media in ways that add value to stories and encourage readers to drill down into these news narratives for information worth knowing. Students will develop an understanding of how newsgathering practices are evolving through digital media and the role of teamwork in disseminating these stories to an informed citizenry.
Status as a College of Communication Graduate Student or department consent is a prerequisite for this class.

JOUR 503 and status as a College of Communication Graduate Student (or department consent) are prerequisites for this course.

JOUR 505 | TELEVISION NEWS REPORTING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will teach students how to be responsible broadcast news reporters, anchors, producers, and editors, who bring added value to stories in today’s converged newsroom environment. Students will learn all aspects of the news gathering and distribution process from story conception to the research, interviewing, reporting, writing, shooting, editing, and producing that goes into a successful, must-see story.
Status as a College of Communication Graduate Student or department consent is a prerequisite for this class.

JOUR 506 | NEWSCAST PRODUCING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will teach the skills necessary to become a television newscast producer, one of the most important jobs in a news department. Students will learn which stories should go into a newscast, how much time to give those stories, and what order the stories should run in during the program. They will also learn about some of the key elements of a newscast: deadlines, teases, transitions into sports and weather, and end pieces. Finally, the course will cover many of the ethical and philosophical issues a producer will face on a daily basis.
Status as a College of Communication Graduate Student or department consent is a prerequisite for this class.

JOUR 507 | VISUAL COMMUNICATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course gives students a theoretical and practical grounding in the digital world of photo-journalism. Students will be introduced to the wide array of tools available to reporters in illustrating content from their stories on the web. This includes the hardware and software packages now available in digital story-telling and how citizens use the information in interpreting the news of the day.
Status as a College of Communication Graduate Student or department consent is a prerequisite for this class.
JOUR 509 | JOURNALISM LAW AND ETHICS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course examines the philosophical roots of the First Amendment and how free speech jurisprudence impacts the journalism profession. Students will learn how legal and moral issues arise when newsgathering and free speech conflict with other constitutional and common law rights, and how developments in technology and economics are creating new challenges for journalists and the courts.
Status as a College of Communication Graduate Student or department consent is a prerequisite for this class.

JOUR 510 | SPORTS REPORTING | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)

The course has three major sections: an analysis of the news media as a political and economic institution; an examination of the ways in which political actors try to shape the messages transmitted through the media; and an investigation of the effects media have on citizens. (Cross-listed with PSC 321 Mass Media and American Politics)
Status as a College of Communication Graduate Student or department consent is a prerequisite for this class.

JOUR 542 | SOCIAL MEDIA AND THE NEWS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Journalists use mobile devices and social media in newsgathering, distributing content and engagement with active audiences. This course blends the theory and practice of social media to provide you with a hands-on introduction to, and practice on, a digital-first approach to journalism. We will analyze and apply a range of social and mobile media tools. This course has a dual purpose: on a skills level, you'll be able to hone your professional social media practice and to build your technical skills with social media apps and platforms. By the end of the quarter you'll have an online professional portfolio and should have developed a "voice" on social platforms for your professional self. We will put a critical lens to social journalism and the application of journalistic ethics to mobile and social media. The course covers emerging concepts on social media, including: networked gatekeeping, social listening as applied to journalism, audience engagement and analytics, citizen journalism, visual storytelling, best practices for content curation and covering breaking news events with social tools, as well as verification of social content and ethics. You will develop and implement a professional social media strategy, practice with a variety of mobile journalism and social media tools.
Status as a College of Communication Graduate Student or department consent is a prerequisite for this class.

Latin 115 is the continuation of Latin prose with some Latin composition. Students concentrate on reading large sections of text in an effort to derive meaning and historical significance. Continued drill on forms and reading for comprehension are the tools used by students. Students will be expected to read through passages of Latin with relative dexterity, and they will begin to parse through the texts in class in order to inculcate the skills of navigating entire narratives. Students begin to develop an affinity for specific authors from the poetic tradition of the Romans. The active skill of composition doubly reinforces translating abilities. Latin 103 or equivalent, including placement test or permission of instructor, is recommended.

LAT 204 | THE ARTISTRY OF LATIN LITERATURE: OVID | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Latin 116/204 adds to the skills students gained in 113-115 by incorporating methodologies of close reading and literary analysis rather than simple translation of texts. The textbook, Ovid: A Legamus Reader will give the student a review of grammar and forms along with reading exercises. In addition to refining our knowledge of Latin poetry through translation, we will seek to understand the text within its historical, cultural and literary/artistic context. Our methodology will be close reading of authentic Roman texts supplemented by readings in English to provide context and background. Students will be expected to demonstrate their understanding of the text by synthesizing the primary text and supplemental readings in papers written in English and by completing analyses of Ovid’s use of meter and literary devices in a given passage in addition to participation in class discussion and translation.

Latin American & Latino Studies (LST)

LST 113 | LATINO RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE IN THE UNITED STATES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
An examination of the diverse nature of Latino religion, from its indigenous roots to its institutional forms, within the social and political context of American culture. Cross-listed with REL 113. Formerly LST 290.

LST 121 | LATIN AMERICA TO C. 1765: PRE-COLUMBIAN SOCIETIES AND THE COLONIAL PERIOD | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A survey of Latin American history that offers a continental approach to the colonial period. Special attention is given to Native American societies before 1492, to the Spanish conquest of Mexico and Peru, to the trade in African slaves (Spanish and Portuguese colonies), and to issues of race, class, and gender during the colonial period. Cross-listed with HST 121.

LST 122 | LATIN AMERICA, 1765-1914: THE LONG 19TH CENTURY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
One of the main goals of this course is for students to determine whether the long 19th century was an era of revolution and social change or a continuation of colonial institutions and policies. To address this broad question, the course focuses on the Bourbon Reforms, the Wars of Independence, the problems associated with nation building, and the neo-colonial order. Through the analysis of some individual countries (for example Mexico, Argentina, and Brazil) students will study key issues like slavery, the "India question," race relations, class formation, social inequalities, authoritarianism, Church-State relations, liberalism, subaltern resistance, and North-South relations. Cross-listed with HST 122.

LST 123 | LATIN AMERICA, 1914-2010 | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This is an introductory course designed to provide students with a basic and general knowledge of Latin American history from the 1910s to the present. The course highlights the challenges and failures the new republics faced. Due to the diverse historical experiences, cultures, and economic and political systems, the course will focus on the main social, political, and economic issues that shaped Latin America during the 20th century (democracy, social revolution, social justice, political violence, and repression). Cross-listed with HST 123.

LST 145 | ARTS OF THE AMERICAS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This is an introduction to major developments in art from the ancient indigenous cultures of the Americas (especially those of Meso- and South America), through the period of European colonialism (especially Spanish and English), to the modern art movements across the newly sovereign nations, including the United States and Canada. The broad chronology and geography necessitates a sampling of artistic forms across times, with issue-oriented lectures and occasional discussion. Cross-listed as HAA 145.

LST 200 | FOUNDING MYTHS AND CULTURAL CONQUEST IN LATIN AMERICA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course challenges students to connect the cataclysmic formation of the Latin Americas from the cultures of Europe, Africa, and the Native (indigenous) peoples with the processes that inform our modern world. Colonialism, social stratification and forms of conflict and rebellion all played pivotal roles in the formation of Latin America from origins to the 18th century. The history and culture of the region is presented from many perspectives and across many disciplines.

LST 201 | STRUGGLE AND RESISTANCE IN LATIN AMERICA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Latin America is more than a geographical reality. This interdisciplinary course asks how Latin America has been forged through local and global struggles for economic sovereignty, political self-determination, social and cultural identities in the 19th, 20th, and 21st centuries. Students will be introduced to the histories of economic dependence after the dawn of political independence, the intertwined dynamics of U.S. interventionism and Latin American resistance, the making of indigenous movements, as well as the interrelated issues of gender, race, and sexuality.

LST 202 | CONSTRUCTING LATINO COMMUNITIES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is an interdisciplinary introduction to Latino Studies. It explores the socio-historical background of the major Latino groups in the United States, and the economic, political, and cultural factors that converge to shape Latino group identity. This course examines contemporary issues affecting Latinos including the evolution of Latino ethnicity, immigration, transnationalism and the formation of Latino communities, activism, and media representations of Latinos.

LST 203 | MEDIA AND CULTURAL STUDIES ACROSS THE AMERICAS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
LST 203 is an introduction to media and cultural studies with a specific focus on cultural transactions in the American hemisphere, particularly as they reflect the relationship of the U.S. to Latin America, Central America, Mexico, and the Caribbean. This course studies the history of national and cultural identities and social struggle, especially with regard to a north/south relationship, imperialism, revolution and social change, tourism, globalization, postcolonialism and the construction of gender, sexuality, race, and ethnicity. Students examine how relationships across the Americas have been depicted in popular culture and the social and political meanings of these representations.

LST 204 | FILM AND LATIN AMERICAN HISTORY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
An inquiry into the way film portrays historical events in Latin America. Cross-listed with HST 204.

LST 205 | MEXICO AFTER INDEPENDENCE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This survey covers the history of Mexico from 1821 to the present. It will examine the difficulties of nation-building during the 19th Century, the Mexican Revolution (1910-1940), and the success and failure of the "Mexican Miracle." Cross-listed with HST 200.
LST 206 | MEXICO: FROM THE OLMECS TO INDEPENDENCE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course surveys the history of Mexico from the rise of the Olmec Civilization to Mexican Independence in 1821. It will examine the rise, fall, and continuities of Mesoamerican civilizations, the Spanish conquest, and the creation of the colonial order. Cross-listed with HST 206.

LST 207 | AFRO-CARIBBEAN AND AFRO-LATIN AMERICA: PEOPLES, CULTURES, IDEAS AND MOVEMENTS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course introduces students to the study of peoples of African descent in the Caribbean and Latin America through lenses of history, politics, and culture. Students will learn how racial identities are constructed and interpreted in the Americas and the ways these identities have shaped Latin American and Caribbean cultures, politics, and societies. This course will explore broad patterns, changes, and continuities in the history of the African Diaspora in the hemisphere through an analysis of various topics such as conquest, colonization, slavery, independence struggles, nation-building, imperialism, neo-colonialism, revolution, violence, social movements, and inter-American relations. Cross-listed with ABD 206.

LST 208 | JEWISH EXPERIENCES IN THE AMERICAS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is about Jewish History in the Americas since 1492 until the late 1800s. It combines colonial/national periods and covers different regions, including North America, Central America, South America, and the Caribbean. Cross-listed with HST 202.

LST 209 | LATINOS/AS AND THE CRIMINAL LEGAL SYSTEM | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The objective of this course is to examine the relationship between Latinos/as and the criminal legal system. Throughout the course, we will ask (1) what distinguishes Latinos/as from other racial and ethnic groups in the criminal legal system (2) and what Sociological/Criminological theories can help us understand the causes of these differences and inequalities. The course will examine key variables such as historical context, ethnic and race relations, and current criminal justice policy regarding Latinos/as in the United States. Cross-listed with CRIM 208.

LST 217 | WORK IN A GLOBALIZED WORLD | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The purpose of this course is to make a direct connection between the needs and strategies of individuals, companies, industries, and nations regarding work, and how they interact to create specific work environments and work outcomes for individuals in a globalized world. The course emphasizes how globalization, by creating an international labor market and an environment of competition between nations to attract jobs, has deeply transformed the work experience of individuals and the quantity and quality of jobs available in the United States, Latin America, Asia, and the rest of the world. Cross-listed with SOC 217.

LST 218 | SPAIN AND PORTUGAL | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A geographical exploration of Spain and Portugal’s history, culture, politics and society. This course focuses on critical periods, events, and socio-political forces that substantially influenced these countries and demonstrate their role as one of Europe’s key links to Latin America and Africa. Cross listed with GEO 218.

LST 243 | MAYA ART AND ARCHITECTURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The “Classic Period” Maya (circa 0-900CE) are the source of modern interest for their graceful naturalism in a wide range of art forms and for their impressive architecture whose ruins today are found scattered across Southern Mexico, the Yucatan Peninsula, Guatemala, Belize, and Honduras. This class will explore the political, social, economic and religious imperatives behind the soaring temples, intriguing ballcourts, stately public sculptures, delicately painted vases, complex manuscripts and much more. We will situate the art of the Maya relative to other Mesoamerican cultures, particularly those of the Olmec, Teotihuacan and Aztec, and with respect to the Spanish colonial invasion. Other themes include aesthetics, materiality, gender, interpretive methodologies, and the impact of hieroglyphics and calendrics on the study of Maya art. Cross-listed with HAA 243.

LST 244 | ART OF MESOAMERICA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This survey of art of the ancient Mesoamerica (circa 1000BC-1520AD) focuses on the most artistically significant civilizations of Middle America and some of the difficulties encountered in studying them. Lectures explore visual traditions as diverse as the people they reflect; cultures to be covered include the Olmec, Maya, Teotihuacan, and Aztec. We consider the relationship between form and content, and the relationship between art and its social context, as much as we can understand it; however, especially because of the scarcity of primary source texts for the material, the class will also regularly raise questions of methodology in what is often identified as “pre-Columbian” scholarship. Cross-listed with HAA 244.

LST 245 | ART OF THE ANDES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This survey of art of the ancient Andes (circa 1000BC-1530AD) focuses on the most artistically significant civilizations of South America and some of the difficulties encountered in studying them. Lectures explore visual traditions as diverse as the people they reflect; cultures to be covered include the Nazca, Moche, Tiwanaku, Wari and Inca of Peru. We consider the relationship between form and content, and the relationship between art and its social context, as we much as we can understand it; however, especially because of the scarcity of primary source texts for the material, the class will also regularly raise questions of methodology in what is often identified as “pre-Columbian” scholarship. Cross-listed with HAA 245.

LST 246 | ART IN THE SPANISH AMERICAN EMPIRE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course offers a critical survey of the art of colonial Latin America (circa 1520s-1820s), from the Caribbean to Mexico, Central America, and South America. Framed by the Spanish Conquest of the 16th century and Independence in the early 19th century, lectures will survey state-sanctioned arts of the Iberian colonizers, including the foundations of the Catholic Church across the "New World" landscape. Race will be a frequent issue of discussion as we consider both indigenous American and African participation in social realities and artistic practice in this colonial context. Cross-listed with HAA 246 and CTH 250. Formerly LST 248.
LST 247 | ART OF THE ANCIENT AMERICAS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This class surveys the art of the ancient Americas (circa 1000 BCE-1520 AD), with a focus on the most artistically significant civilizations of Mesoamerica and South America, and some of the difficulties encountered in studying them. Lectures will explore visual traditions as diverse as the people they reflect; cultures to be covered include the Olmec, Maya and Aztec of Mesoamerica, and the Moche and Inca of Peru. Since most of these cultures did not use the written word, the class will also regularly raise questions of methodology in pre-Columbian scholarship.

LST 249 | MODERN LATIN AMERICAN ART | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This lecture class is a survey of Latin American art created since the Wars of Independence which helped to create the modern nations in the 19th century (i.e. 1820s through the present). Lectures consider the struggle of artists to articulate newly sovereign identities through visual production, even as complicated relationships with Europe and increasingly, the United States, continue. Topics covered include Latin American modernism, surrealism, radical arts, and social realism, with a special consideration of post-revolutionary Mexican mural painting. Cross-listed with HAA 247.

LST 252 | LATIN AMERICAN POLITICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
An examination of the history of Latin America and the major institutions, social sectors, and actors that shape the political life of the region. The course focuses on the development of revolutionary regimes and movements as well as military regimes and their demise during the transition to democracy. Cross-listed with PSC 252.

LST 268 | MEXICAN ART | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This survey situates the art of Greater Mexico in its rich historical context, from the territory on the eve of the Spanish Conquest to the early decades of the 21st century. From Aztec imperial art to colonial works, to efforts at nation-building through visual forms, the story of Mexican art is characterized by political and social change. Readings, lectures and discussion will touch on critical issues of race, class and gender, and will encompass themes such as miscegenation, indigenism, nationalism, and Mexico's place in the global art world. We will study famous works, such as the Aztec Calendar Stone, the Catholic image of the Virgin of Guadalupe, the post-revolutionary murals of Diego Rivera and the more intimate paintings of Frida Kahlo, but we will also consider less familiar art that has been equally important in the construction of Mexico and its identities. Cross-listed with HAA 248.

LST 285 | AFRO-HISPANIC LITERATURE IN TRANSLATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In this 200-level course in literature (for credit in the Arts and Literature learning domain of the Liberal Studies Program), we will seek to determine what distinguishes the Afro-Hispanic novel, short story, drama or poetry from other works in these genres. We will read works that have been translated into English from their original Spanish versions and analyze how the use of language, imagery and narrative voice reflect the experience of people of African descent in the Spanish-speaking world as seen (or heard) in the text and context of these works. In addition, we will explore how race, class, politics and culture interact and find expression in Afro-Hispanic literature. Cross-listed with ABD 285.

LST 290 | LATINO/A LIBERATION TRADITIONS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
What does liberation mean in the context of the Americas today? How have people of Latin American descent – both in Latin America and the United States – connected conceptions of liberation to related ideas of liberty and freedom, as well as to notions of political revolution, cultural identity, and prophetic forms of religious faith? This course examines how these questions have been theorized across the Latino/a Americas, especially as they relate to questions of religion. Topics include liberation philosophy, critical pedagogy, prophetic religion, cultural praxis, Latina feminism, and decolonial thought. Cross-listed with REL 290.

LST 291 | LOOKING FOR GOD IN LATIN AMERICA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
An examination of religious traditions such as Catholicism, indigenous religions, and Protestantism in Latin America, with special focus on how these traditions have been transplanted and reshaped upon entry into varied Latino communities in the United States. Historical analyses of the Latin American roots of these traditions will provide contextualization for the ongoing examination of transnational religious cultures in the U.S. Cross-listed with REL 291.

LST 297 | IMPERIAL SPAIN, 1469-1808 | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Analysis of Spain and Spanish empire between 1468-1808. During this period, Spain united and became a leading global power with enormous consequences for Western and world history. Emphasis on the political, economic, socio-cultural history of Iberian society. Cross-listed with HST 297.

LST 300 | SPECIAL TOPICS IN LATIN AMERICAN STUDIES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
SPECIAL TOPICS IN LATIN AMERICAN STUDIES.

LST 303 | BORDER MATTERS:LITERATURE & CULTURE IN THE LATINO/A BORDERLANDS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In this course we will study the values and dynamic that is promoted in different Latino communities in the United States. In order to give context to the present situation of Latinos in the U.S. we will study some of the social issues in the countries of origin which have resulted in immigration and their encounter with borderlands. The notion of a Latina and Latino cultural "borderlands" has proven a ubiquitous and powerful conceptual paradigm in recent years, organizing distinct ethnic groups (Cuban American, Mexican American, Central American, Puerto Rican, etc.) according to the rubrics of pan-ethnic identity labels (Hispanic, Latina/Latino, etc.) and transnational geographies (Latin America, the Americas, etc.). This course will examine a wide range of Latino/a literary expressions produced in the Latina/Latino borderlands, particularly in areas of cultural contact and conflict. While the most obvious focus will be the Texas-Mexico border region, including ongoing efforts to establish the public meaning of the Alamo, additional borderlands, literal and figurative, will be considered. The Latina and Latino borderlands have also inspired critics and theorists to imagine postmodern, post national subject formations, in which questions of ethnicity, gender, and sexuality are shifted from the margins to the center of critical discourse. We will therefore investigate the use and limits of recent "border theory".

LST 305 | LATINO COMMUNITIES AND SOCIAL ENGAGEMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In-depth, critical examination of different Latino communities. Topics include: Mexican-American Community, Puerto Rican Community and Cuban-American Communities.
LST 306 | LATINO COMMUNITIES IN CHICAGO | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course studies Latino Communities, focusing on their cultural and historical constructions from a community based learning experience.

LST 307 | GROWING UP LATINO/LATINA IN THE U.S. | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
A critical as well as a community based examination of the experiences of growing up as a Latino/Latina person in the United States.

LST 308 | MOTHERHOOD IN LATINO COMMUNITIES | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This is an intellectual, as well as a community based exploration of motherhood in Latino communities and the theories of motherhood in feminist criticism throughout Latin America. Other topics: fatherhood, the extended family and the community as family.

LST 309 | SOCIAL ENGAGEMENT AND LATINO FAMILIES | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Social Engagement And Latino Families.

LST 310 | SPECIAL TOPICS: LATINOS IN THE U.S. | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
SPECIAL TOPICS: LATINOS IN THE U.S.

LST 311 | CONTEMPORARY ISSUES AND SOCIAL ENGAGEMENT | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Contemporary Issues And Social Engagement.

LST 312 | LATINA/O SEXUALITIES | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
In this course the construction of sexuality as experienced by Latina/as will be examined through the analysis of recent interdisciplinary scholarship, literary selections and other popular cultural forms. We consider how gender and sexuality are constructed, enacted, represented, and communicated in a range of Latino/a communities and subcultures. Our analysis of readings/films/music will allow us to understand the changing and contested meanings of gender and sexuality within Latino/a culture.

LST 321 | GLOBALIZATION IN THE AMERICAS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
In this course, we examine the processes of globalization in the Americas. The world seems to be a smaller place--accessible through the internet and global markets--and national borders seem to be more porous than ever before. Various agents--corporations, people, political organizers and organizations--are able to work on a global scale. Many critics argue that globalization has created a larger division between the wealthy and the poor. How has globalization affected the way we live our lives? In this course, we discuss the many debates around globalization and the political situation in Latin America, North America, and the Caribbean as well as the global justice movements that address inequity and injustice. You will become familiar with these debates and their histories, particularly with the growing anti-globalization position taken by many political leaders in Latin America. In this course, you will take a position regarding this contemporary political arena and become well-acquainted with various trends, policies, and activist movements around globalization. You will analyze your place in this political arena and determine how you will negotiate your position. We discuss the impact of various international organizations and trade agreements, from IMF, the World Trade Organization, the UN, the Organization of American States, NAFTA, and the Free Trade Area of the Americas. We will analyze the protest movements in Cancun and Seattle. We look at the increasing tourist apartheid in different parts of the Americas, particularly in the Caribbean. We discuss the impact and organization of international activism from anti-globalization movements to global justice movements. We will discuss and debate strategies for resistance. We access many of these issues through cultural productions (film, tv, advertisements, etc) that address the difficult dilemmas of neo-liberalism (rule of the market).

LST 322 | MEXICAN CINEMA | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
In this course we analyze the history and practice of a national cinema in relation to government film policy, filmmaking practices and programs, intellectual and cultural context, and national and popular concerns. We study various facets of Mexican cinema from conceptions of race/gender/sexuality, major figures of cinema, and the current conditions of Mexican Cinema. We will explore Mexican Cinema in relation to other film industries of the Americas, especially in relation to the United States and Hollywood and to the oppositional political practices of the New Latin American cinema of the sixties and seventies.

LST 323 | URBAN LATIN AMERICA: LABOR, HOUSING, ENVIRONMENT AND GENDER | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course examines global, national, and local economic, political, and social structures and processes impacting urban individuals in Latin American societies. For example, it examines economic globalization and the opening of borders to foreign goods and its impact on industries and employment of individuals. It also examines the influence of global and local real estate market on the ability of urban individuals to obtain affordable housing. The resulting segregation leads to an unequal urban society with certain neighborhoods gaining access to adequate public services. This course will not however only look at urban problems and their structural causes but also on how individuals and groups of individuals are working to solve these problems caused by both local and global political and economic institutions. The solutions sought may differ from country to country due to different cultural understandings, local structures, historical legacies, and actors involved. This course will explore case studies of urban communities in a variety of Latin American countries including, but not limited to, Brazil, Argentina, Mexico, and Ecuador.
LST 330 | LATINOS IN EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course examines historical and current issues related to the education of Latinos in the US that range from PK-12 to higher education. The course explores the sociolinguistic, historical, sociocultural, legal and political contexts that shape the educational experiences of Latinos in the US, paying particular attention to policy and the current state of affairs in the education of Latinos. The Latino Diaspora will also be explored.

LST 336 | EXPERIENCING MEXICAN ART | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
The history of Mexican art in the Modern era. Some sections of this course will engage students in studio problems that address specific issues in the history of Mexican culture.

LST 338 | COLONIAL LATIN AMERICAN ART | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course will survey painting, sculpture, architecture, and the decorative arts in the Americas from contact with Europe up through independence movements of the 19th century. Special attention will be given to the intersection of artistic production with broad social, economic and political trends.

LST 348 | INDIGENOUS POLITICAL STRUGGLES | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course explores the struggles for social justice and the right to have rights by indigenous peoples. It emphasizes contemporary cases and the cultural contexts in which indigenous political strategies have developed and transformed. It uses historical data to understand the issues faced by indigenous peoples. Students conduct research on indigenous struggles and their connections to other social movements at the local, national, and international levels.

LST 358 | REVOLUTIONS AND PEASANT REBELLIONS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Analyzes the most important revolutions and peasant rebellions of the twentieth century as well as the most relevant cases from previous periods, such as the French Revolution. Cross-listed with SOC 358 and INT 319.

LST 375 | MEXICO CITY (WORLD CITIES) | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
From its origins as Tenochtitlan, the preordained capital of the Aztec Empire, through its identification as a “new Rome” dominated by the Spanish Crown in the Viceregal period, to its status as the largest metropolitan area in the Western Hemisphere (and the second largest in the world), Mexico City was born to impress the imagination. This class explores the development of the great city of Mexico in light of major historical events and cultural expressions. Discussions will focus especially on urban planning, key architecture, outdoor sculpture, and public spectacles over the centuries. Cross-listed with HAA 375.

LST 389 | LATIN AMERICAN PHILOSOPHY | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
What does it mean to speak of Latin American philosophy? What is the difference between merely doing philosophy in Latin America and doing Latin American philosophy? These are issues that some thinkers in Latin America grapple with. This course will explore the history and nature of Latin American philosophy. Moreover, we shall examine some of the reasons why, in sharp contrast to the European and Anglo-American philosophical traditions, questions of the very existence of an autochthonous Latin American philosophical tradition are heatedly debated both in Latin America and beyond. Cross-listed with PHL 389.

LST 390 | SENIOR SEMINAR | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
A capstone course that integrates the student’s prior course work and experiences by allowing the student to define a final culminating project. The seminar functions as a coordinated independent study course with extensive participation of Latin American and Latino Studies Program faculty.

LST 392 | INTERNSHIP | 1-4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
INTERNSHIP.

LST 394 | THESIS | 1-4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
THESIS.

LST 395 | TRAVEL/STUDY | 1-4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
TRAVEL/STUDY.

LST 399 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 1-4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
INDEPENDENT STUDY.

Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender, Queer Studies (LGQ)

LGQ 150 | INTRODUCTION TO LESBIAN, GAY, BISEXUAL, TRANSGENDER, QUEER STUDIES [SSMW] | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The purpose of this course is to introduce you to psychological and social issues relevant to lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender (LGBT) individuals and communities. You will be exposed to a variety of key psychological concepts including: heterosexism/homophobia, identity development, “coming out,” relationships, families, youth, religion/spirituality, reparative/conversion therapy, diversity, and advocacy. Learning goals for this course include increasing one's understanding of the LGBT community and some of the unique experiences and issues that are experienced by many, but not all, members of the LGBT community. Identify and analyze pertinent psychological concepts relevant to LGBT communities. In addition, this course will provide you with learning experiences that you can use to evaluate your own limitations and strengths in terms of cultural sensitivity in regards to working with LGBT communities, thus improving your competence in working effectively with the LGBT community if you choose to at a later point in life. Cross-listed with PSY 213.

LGQ 213 | INTRODUCTION TO LGBT PSYCHOLOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The purpose of this course is to introduce you to psychological and social issues relevant to lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender (LGBT) communities. It will also help prepare students for study in the various fields covered by the electives required for the minor. The course will be taught by faculty from a variety of disciplines and thus undoubtedly shift emphases somewhat with every offering. Topics will include: introduction to and definition of LGBTQ Studies as a field; historical roots of LGBTQ communities in the US and elsewhere; theoretical models of sexuality and gender; contemporary issues in LGBTQ politics and culture.

LGQ 236 | GAY MEN'S HEALTH MATTERS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The purpose of this course is to introduce students to health issues applicable to gay men's health. We will explore effects of minority status, heterosexism and homophobia on gay men's health, including but not limited to STD/HIV/AIDS, substance use and mental health. Students will review epidemiological data, theoretical frameworks, and community-based health promotion approaches in order to gain a broad perspective on risk and resilience factors, health indicators, and strategies for self-care applicable to gay men's health.
LGQ 250 | LGQ FRENCH HISTORY: OLD REGIME TO THE PRESENT | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course studies male and female same-sex affection in France roughly from the Enlightenment through the early twenty-first century. It examines the representations of homosexuality over more than two centuries taking into account a variety of often contradictory images that have been current in French society, representations that range, among males, from the diabolical criminal of the nineteenth century Romantics to today’s trend-setting (and all too domesticated) gay male, and, among females, from elegant salon figures to contemporary feminist militants. Special attention is focused on the history of homosexuality since WWII because the French gay and lesbian community’s progress since that time is impressive and particularly rich in its implications for the American civil rights struggle. Additional readings from French writers on homosexual themes compliment most of the readings from the textbooks.

LGQ 280 | LGBTQ LITERATURE FROM THE ANCIENT WORLD TO THE RENAISSANCE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course looks at constructions of queer desire in texts of the Western tradition from ancient Judea, Greece, and Rome through the European Middle Ages and into the English Renaissance. We will also learn to perform “queer readings” on texts that may not at first glance seem all that queer. The course will range across many linguistic and cultural traditions. We will read non-English texts in translation, but we may consult the originals in class and certainly knowledge of an ancient tongue or modern Romance language will be useful (but not required—don’t worry!). As the title implies, the course will proceed historically, but we will be returning throughout to some basic questions: in what sorts of contexts do we find queer resistance to heteronormative assumptions? do some literary genres seem more hospitable than others to representations of queer desire? how do representations of sexuality relate to larger notions of gender and social class? how do the constructions of queer desire we find here differ from modern lesbian and gay identities? This is a great opportunity to think about queer identity while reading and discussing some amazing texts.

LGQ 282 | INTRODUCTION TO LGBTQ LITERATURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is an introduction to LGBTQ literature. It can count as an elective for the LGBTQ Studies minor at DePaul and is approved in the Arts and Literature domain of the Liberal Studies Program. We will use the word “queer” as it has been deployed in recent academic and activist discourse to talk about people whose sexual and/or gender identity does not conform to mainstream definitions. Most of the texts we will read this quarter are interested in various forms of same-sex desire, female-female and male-male, but at the same time we will consider the ways in which sexual identity always implicates gender identity. We will be interested in a number of closely inter-related questions: how can we define “queer literature” and is there a tradition, or history, of queer letters? what are its main characteristics and shared themes? does a writer who identifies as queer automatically produce a queer text? can a straight woman or man write a queer book? how do our primary concerns (sexual/gender identity) intersect with other modes of personal identity such as race and social class?

LGQ 319 | QUEER PIONEERS: CULTURE, GENDER, AND POLITICAL ACTIVISM | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course examines some of the historical roots and contemporary realities of lesbian and gay politics in the United States through the biographies of pioneering individuals whose lives and work shaped an ongoing struggle for civil rights and social justice. Conventional wisdom holds that the modern lesbian and gay movement was born in 1969 with the Stonewall riots in New York City, although recent scholarship traces the movement’s roots to the mid-nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. More than thirty years after what began at Stonewall as an angry and disorganized appeal for basic human dignity, lesbians and gays have today begun to enter the mainstream of U.S. politics. Within this context, the biographies of individuals who, as activists and artists, rose to challenge the conventions of culture, gender, and political exclusion will be studied in-depth to both illuminate the politics of social movement and suggest how these diverse individuals and experiences may influence present and future efforts for cultural and political change. This course fulfills an elective in the WMS, AMS, or PSC majors, an elective in the LGQ minor.

LGQ 332 | CREATING CHANGE: CONTEMPORARY GLBT POLITICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course explores the historical roots and contemporary realities of gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgendered (GLBT) politics, nationally and internationally. GLBT groups and individuals are gaining political recognition, challenging institutions, and creating change by asserting claims to rights and protections under law. Such issues as hate crimes, marriage, AIDS, and ballot initiatives over non-discrimination law and policy have entered the political mainstream since the 1970’s. This course examines the GLBT movement, its political and social strategies, conflicts and issues, and the political roles played by its members as participants in political culture. Cross-listed with WGS 332 & PSC 312.

LGQ 338 | SEXUAL JUSTICE: LESBIANS, GAYS AND THE LAW | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course explores the historical roots and contemporary realities of lesbian, gays, and the law in the U.S., focusing on the intersections of power, sexuality, and identity with issues of sexuality-based discrimination. It focuses on case law, along with social science and legal literature, seeking out a diversity of voices and experiences. Primary emphasis will be on cases that have come before the U.S. Supreme Court since the mid-1950’s, with particular attention paid to how groups and individuals have reached out to the court system for redress of injustice and how these groups and individuals have exercised or failed to exercise power within the legal process. The U.S. legal system has reflected a complex set of social and institutional arrangements with regard to sexuality. This course explores the evolution and current construction of these arrangements, how power is allocated and adjudicated, and how law may be used to resist and dismantle pervasive discrimination. Cross-listed with WGS 338.
LGQ 362 | INTRODUCTION TO TRANSGENDER STUDIES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This class explores the interplay of political, social, economic and aesthetic factors in feminist autobiography from a transnational perspective. We examine the ways that women’s autobiography is being used to write themselves into history. Story is integral in the process of healing and building solidarity and coalitions for gender based organizing. Further, autobiography creates a space for the "alter-history" to be told: the absence of testimony and experience is created for others to gain hope, strength, and deeper understanding of others and themselves. Various forms and critiques of feminist autobiographies are explored, and how each impacts the political possibilities for readers. Cross-listed with WGS 362.

LGQ 388 | QUEER THEORY: AN INTRODUCTION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will look at some of the central texts of queer theory, tracing its ambivalent relationship to the "normal" ideals of mainstream culture. We will begin by discussing current issues of normativity as it relates to gay and lesbian assimilation. We will then look at theories of embodiment, sexual identity, and power, consider the relationship of gender to sexuality, and finally, look at surgical sex reassignment and debates around the politics of intersex and transgender identity. Requirements: class presentation, several short response papers, longer final paper. The authors we will be reading include Michel Foucault, Judith Butler, Eve Sedgwick, Audre Lorde, Sigmund Freud, Anne Fausto-Sterling, and Michael Warner. Topics will include historicizing queerness, butch/femme, the politics of camp, and the transgender and intersex movements. Cross-listed with WGS 388.

LGQ 397 | SPECIAL TOPICS IN LGBTQ STUDIES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
See course schedule for current offerings.

LGQ 399 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 1-8 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Variable credit.

Liberal Learning Seminars (LLS)

LLS 410 | AGENCY EFFECTIVENESS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Seminar sections in this domain aim to explore various dimensions/ dynamics associated with knowing, developing and engaging oneself as an agent? in one's experience and contribution. Central questions include: Who am I and/or who am I having myself be? Who am I becoming and/or who am I having myself become? What habits of mind, attitude and behavior am I choosing and reinforcing versus becoming victim to and stuck within? Am I living my life or is my life living me? etc. Embedded in these questions are core concepts regarding personal efficacy, empowerment and accountability.

LLS 410B | BUILDING & ENGAGING RESILIENCE (IN ADULT LIFE) | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
An ancient proverb reads: "Fall down seven times. Stand up eight." But how? What’s involved in such flexibility, adaptability, tenacity, hardiness and resilience? What understandings, values and skills help? How does one develop these and nurture them across an adult lifetime? Through this seminar, participants will explore various concepts, models and "best practices" for growing, rebounding and self-guarding one’s resilience—given the challenges and uncertainties of adult life.

LLS 410C | VOICES AND IDENTITY IN WRITING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
The course will examine the power of the written word and the ways in which modern writers from various outlets (including mass-media) from diverse communities and fields represent their cultures, styles and passions for writing through their works. Students will explore these modern writers and examine some of their favorites as well as lesser-known authors while being challenged to understand and apply their own voice, identity and writing in multiple styles - with conventions and boundaries of academic style and without those boundaries. Students will analyze and identify and apply various styles, processes and motivation which keeps a writer going. This course will challenge students to use the learning and framework to build their own diverse writing portfolio.

LLS 420A | ENGAGING SOCIAL MEDIA | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Social Media is essentially communication to the world. For the first time in the history of human communication, an individual has the ability—using the latest channels—to connect with anyone and everyone in the world. There have been many examples of the power of this media as we witnessed the events of the Arab Spring. This course will empower you to engage with the most important channels at your disposal to maximize your social media experience. We will investigate many questions including: What’s in it for me? But, more importantly, how will this help me in my future business endeavors and personal life.

LLS 420B | ENGAGING PLAY ON PURPOSE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
A growing body of scientific research indicates that "play" is an essential element of both learning and expression across the lifespan. This course examines the role of play in adult life, the science and research behind play, and selected techniques for fostering healthful play. Participants will explore an established improvisational play practice called InterPlay?, involving guided movement, story-telling and vocal activities. By examining play through the lenses of both experiential learning and current research, participants will deepen their understanding of what it means to "engage play on purpose" as a means of further enhancing their interpersonal effectiveness.

LLS 420C | COMMUNICATING (MORE) EFFECTIVELY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Being a better communicator and a more self-aware individual can lead to better performance on teams and to enhanced relationships in both professional and personal life. This seminar will explore ways for an individual to become more self-aware and more effective in a variety of settings. In particular, this awareness will contribute to better team interaction—whether the team is formal or informal—as well as better interpersonal dynamics overall. Basic characteristics of high-performing and dysfunctional teams will be explored, as well as various models of followership.
LLS 430 | ORGANIZATIONAL EFFECTIVENESS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This domain includes the larger systemic contexts within which individuals function. As the world grows increasingly complex and interconnected, the ability to understand and navigate people-in-groups (organizational, societal, and global) becomes increasingly critical. In this domain, students broaden and deepen their capacity to make a difference at ever-widening levels of system. Central questions include: How do we engage as organizational resources, community participants, members of society and global citizens? How do we get along? How do we get work done? How do we both fit-in and remain unique? Seminar sections in this domain might include such topics as project management, leadership, organizational culture, career management, performance improvement, context scanning, global citizenship, trend analysis, cross-cultural agility, future visioning, etc.

LLS 440A | UNDERSTANDING AND FLEXING MINDSETS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
A mindset is a set of mind - a mental aggregate - that fixes thinking into a narrowed range of perceiving and behaving. Our expectations then conform and we indulge behaviors that align with those expectations. The mindset then sets the mind. Through this seminar we will explore both how mindsets (e.g. a fixed mindset vs a growth mindset) form and their benefits and liabilities. We will also consider dynamics and strategies involved in shifting/managing mindsets in order to develop/engage new approaches to learning, decision making, problem-solving and optimizing positive influence in various spheres of impact (personal, interpersonal, organizational and societal).

LLS 440C | TRAVEL, VALUES & IDENTITY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Sit at the gate at any airport waiting for a flight and you may find a vacationer, a business traveler, a commuter, and an immigrant heading toward a new home - all about to board the same plane. Stand in the immigration line after disembarking, and each of these travelers might have a very different experience. This seminar explores the concept of 'travel' and the deeper significance behind our own and others' choices concerning physical movement from place to place. We will consider topics ranging from 'enjoying the view,' curiosity, and the mundane to ideas of the exotic, expectations, conflict, privilege, and choice versus forced removal - all within the context of travel. While this is not a travel course, experiential travel components will be built into some class sessions. Through in-class activities, selected readings, written assignments, and participant/observer field trips, students will be asked to reflect on their own and others’ travel experiences. The goal is that students will emerge with an expanded awareness of travel not just as journey and destination, but also as mindset and learning experience; in turn, this can inform one's identity, choices and relationships as global citizens.

LLS 450A | FINDING & ASSESSING INFORMATION | 2-4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This domain includes methods and processes of systematic inquiry regardless of domain. Adults must be able to engage in self-directed inquiry in order to understand and act effectively in their personal, professional, social, and civic lives. In this domain, students learn methods for systematically and strategically exploring questions, problems, ideas, and experiences. Central questions include: How do I formulate viable questions? What information do I need to understand a problem and what is the best way to obtain it? What are different ways to analyze an idea? How can I make sense of what I have experienced? Seminar sections in this domain might address topics such as strategies and methods for generating and utilizing primary research, gathering and managing information, analyzing and presenting data, pursuing targeted methods of inquiry, etc. (2 quarter hours)

LLS 450B | APPLYING SYSTEMATIC INQUIRY (IN PROFESSIONAL PRACTICE) | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
The two required sections in this domain, LLS-450a & LLS-450b, aim to explore various dimensions/dynamics associated with investigating sources of information and conducting primary research. Central questions include: How do I formulate incisive questions? How do I find and gather relevant and credible information? How do I assess/analyze information and its sources, including my own experience as a source? How do I make sense of confirming and disconfirming information? How do I differentiate knowledge from opinion from reasoned judgment? Embedded in these questions are core concepts regarding the authority of systematic observation/inquiry and evaluated experience.

Liberal Studies in Education (LSE)

LSE 201 | DIVERSE VALUES AND VOICES IN EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course explores the interaction of societies and their education efforts/designs within a multicultural context. Case studies are used to examine various cultural groups within their own environment, the interactions of people from different cultures, and various cultural phenomena. Educational experiences leading persons from a monocultural perspective to a more multicultural perspective are explored. Students are asked to consider culture as learned behavior/perspective. They will explore their own cultural experiences/development and those of others. The goal is a realization of culture as a respected framework within the context of education. This course satisfies the self, society, & modern world requirement.

LSE 210 | MULTICULTURALISM AND EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course will engage students in an examination of issues of diversity and multiculturalism within educational contexts in the United States. It includes an investigation of the historical and experiential perspectives of different cultural groups as well as an analysis of issues of access, inequality, power, and the distribution of resources. Students should gain an understanding of individual, group, inter-group, and intra-group perspectives, behaviors, and socialization practices regarding identity, relationships, values, ways of knowing, and world views. The central objective of the course is the development of a critical perspective regarding the meaning of multiculturalism and the significance of its role in educational settings.
LSE 300 | EDUCATION AND LITERATURE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course is designed to engage students in critical reflection, commentary, and evaluation of literature, informed by theoretical as well as aesthetic considerations. Literary works will be interpreted and analyzed regarding interactions between form and content, as well as effects of authors’ treatment of material upon the construction of meaning. Primary goals are the enhancement of understanding, appreciation and enjoyment of literature. Social and cultural dimensions of literature will also be addressed within the context of examining educational issues such as: what it means to become educated in culturally diverse contexts; construction of identity; the development of values and world views; the individual in relationship to community and/or society; and relationships among artistic works, human experiences and education. This course satisfies the arts and literature requirement.

LSE 310 | CONTEMPORARY ISSUES IN EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This is a variable topics course which examines the way current, significant issues affect, and are affected by education. Each quarter the course will focus on a contemporary problem or question with broad social, political, or cultural implications and will examine it from a multicultural perspective. Examples of topics are: homelessness, immigration and public education, privatization and corporate involvement in schools, youth culture and education, or the use and misuse of measures of achievement and ability. The course will explore the topic from multiple perspectives and draw on multiple disciplines. This course satisfies the Social, Cultural, and Behavioral Inquiry requirement.

LSE 354 | CULTURE, CONTEXT AND LEARNING | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course is based on the premise that learning is situated in the context of dynamic interpersonal relationships through which critical thinking may be fostered and ideas challenged. Students will examine the intellectual, emotional, and intrapsychic processes by which knowledge is constructed and shaped by cultural meanings which validate particular forms of thought and structures of knowledge. Various theories of learning will be discussed as they inform educational practices and their underlying assumptions will be examined. In addition, this course will engage the cultural nature of all human activity, cognitive processes, and bodies of knowledge. Attention will be given to their historical role of race and class as they determine what bodies of knowledge and processes of learning are validated within the dominant culture. Students will engage in self-reflective experiences, theoretical analyses, and community based activities to examine the various meanings constructed as people learn within social and cultural contexts. This course satisfies the self, society, & modern world requirement.

LSE 355 | INTERNATIONAL STUDIES IN EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course focuses on a variety of key educational issues in countries or regions outside of the United States. Through a comparative approach, possible issues that will be examined include: aims and purposes of education and schooling; economic, political, social and cultural contexts of educational policies and practices; similarities and differences in organization and structure of educational systems; equity and social justice; relationships between home, community and educational institutions; education, development, and issues of social change; and dynamics at the global level that affect education in local environments. This course satisfies the self, society, & modern world requirement.

LSE 358 | EDUCATION AND SOCIAL JUSTICE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course is designed to examine education within a philosophical framework which focuses upon the relatively great potential of education as an agent for social justice and change. Through the examination of current issues and concerns, students are expected to engage in critical analysis, reflect upon theoretical frameworks, examine public policies and values, and consider ways in which schools and educators can promote the development of social justice. The course will focus on one or several of the following topics: gender, ethnicity, language and culture, and social class and economic opportunity. Attention will be given to the issues of institutional responses to differences, equity, access and outcomes. This course satisfies the Self, Society, & Modern World requirement.

LSE 362 | IDENTITY AND EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This variable topics course will focus on how individuals and groups take on identities and how education and schooling affect the process. It will use multiple perspectives and a variety of contexts (such as family, community, nation, and international communities) to analyze how notions of self are developed, forged, and named and how these notions change over time. It will also examine how identities are constructed in relationship to issues such as ethnicity, class, gender, sexual orientation, language, religion, culture, age, and ability and their interconnections in the lived experience of individuals and groups. This course satisfies the self, society, & modern world requirement.
LSE 380 | PHILOSOPHICAL STUDIES IN PEDAGOGY, CULTURE AND GLOBALIZATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is a philosophical inquiry into the relationship of pedagogy to culture and globalization. In this course students explore this relationship from different philosophical perspectives about globalization that emerge from the Global North and the Global South. Specifically, the course examines how and why these perspectives have resulted in different conceptions of teaching, learning, culture, language, human development and worldmaking. Students will consider how these varied conceptions and practices enable alternative forms of knowledge and habits of knowing and worldmaking pedagogies that correspond to other ways of living and existing in the world. The course also examines how and why these conceptions of teaching, learning, culture, language, human development and worldmaking suggest different philosophies and theories of emancipation and possibilities for global and local futures. The course readings include philosophical literature from critical, postcolonial, decolonial and indigenous traditions.

LSE 404 | CHILD REARING ACROSS CULTURES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Study of child-rearing practices, the effects of culture on cognitive development and the implications for teaching strategies for the child whose first language is not English.

LSE 420 | COMPARATIVE EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is devoted to the study of historical and contemporary issues related to comparative education-with an emphasis upon early childhood, elementary, and secondary levels. Through a comparative study of educational public policy, we will examine assumptions about the aims and purposes of education and schooling in terms of economic, political and social dimensions. Major topics and issues addressed will include the following: examining what it means to be educated; examining similarities and differences in the ways developed and developing countries educate children and youth; the organization and structure of educational institutions; disconcerting implicit and explicit values in different approaches to teaching and learning; relationships between schools and communities; education and the issues of change and social justice.

LSE 430 | EDUCATION AND SOCIAL JUSTICE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
A variable-topics course designed to examine education within a philosophical framework which focuses upon the relatively great potential of education as an agent for social justice and change. Through the examination of current issues and concerns, students are expected to engage in critical analysis, reflect upon theoretical frameworks, examine public policies and values, and consider ways in which schools and educators can promote the development of social justice. Each time the course is offered it will focus on one of the following topics: gender; ethnicity; language and culture; or social class and economic opportunity. For each topic, attention will be given to the issues of institutional responses to differences, equity, access and outcomes. (CROSS-LISTED with LSE 258)

LSE 438 | GENDER AND EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
A variable-topics course designed to actively engage students in examination of the literature and issues related to gender and education. Curriculum, teaching and learning, achievement, and the organization structure and culture of schools are among the key concerns. Gender will be addressed as it intersects with other forms of inequality and difference: race, ethnicity, class, etc. Each time the course is offered it will focus on a particular topic, but for each topic attention will be given to issues about institutional responses to inequality and differences.

LSE 450 | DYNAMICS OF AFRICAN-AMERICAN CULTURE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is intended for those interested in cultural and human relations in order that they may examine the contributions of the black person to American Culture; gain a functional understanding of the social, economic and political development of the black person on America itself. (Cross-listed with SOC 490).

LSE 460 | INTERNATIONAL STUDIES IN EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This variable-topics course will focus upon educational issues in a particular country or region outside of the United States. Through comparative study, a number of issues will be addressed: aims and purposes of education and schooling; economic, political, social and cultural contexts of educational policies; similarities and differences in organization and structure of educational systems; relationships between home, community and educational institutions; education, development and issues of social change.

LSE 461 | INTERNATIONAL STUDIES IN TEACHING AND LEARNING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This variable-topics course will focus upon aspects of curriculum, teaching and learning in a particular country or region outside of the United States. It requires work in the chosen country or region under the guidance of teachers familiar with its educational practices. The course will examine how curriculum is organized, developed and implemented in classrooms and schools with concentration on particular subjects or levels. From a comparative perspective, particular attention will be paid to the values and assumptions underlying curriculum and teaching.

LSE 462 | INTERNATIONAL FIELD EXPERIENCES IN EDUCATION | 2-8 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Through clinical experience outside of the United States, students will observe, participate in and reflect upon teaching and learning in cultural settings that differ from their own. This field experience abroad provides an opportunity to develop an understanding of what it means to be educated in the context of another society or culture. The intent of this experience is to add more global perspective to one’s own professional knowledge and practice. (2 credit hours)
Liberal Studies Program (LSP)

LSP 110 | DISCOVER CHICAGO | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Discover Chicago courses acquaint first-year students with the metropolitan community, its neighborhoods, cultures, people, institutions, organizations, and issues. Students also learn about university life, resources, and strategies for academic success. Learning is accomplished through a variety of means including first-hand observation, active participation, personal discovery, reflection, discussion, and encounters with Chicagoans both in the classroom and on excursions. The course begins with Immersion Week one week prior to the official start of the Autumn Quarter, then continues through the first eight weeks of the quarter. Students select from a variety of Chicago-related topics. First-year students must register to take either LSP 110 (Discover Chicago) or LSP 111 (Explore Chicago) during their first quarter at DePaul. Students will receive credit for only one section of Chicago Quarter (Discover or Explore). Courses are offered during the Autumn Quarter and are available to first-year students only. Formerly ISP 103. (Honors students take HON 110.)

LSP 111 | EXPLORE CHICAGO | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Explore Chicago courses acquaint first-year students with the metropolitan community, its neighborhoods, cultures, people, institutions, organizations, and issues. Students also learn about university life, resources, and strategies for academic success. Learning is accomplished through a variety of means including first-hand observation, active participation, personal discovery, reflection, discussion, and encounters with Chicagoans both in the classroom and on excursions. Students select from a variety of Chicago-related topics. First-year students must register to take either LSP 110 (Discover Chicago) or LSP 111 (Explore Chicago) during their first quarter at DePaul. Students will receive credit for only one section of Chicago Quarter (Discover or Explore). Courses are offered during the Autumn Quarter and are available to first-year students only; limited additional sections are offered later in the year. Formerly ISP 102. (Honors students take HON 111.)

LSP 112 | FOCAL POINT SEMINAR | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Focal Point Seminars provide first-year students with the opportunity to learn how to closely examine a single topic, such as a significant person, place, event, text, idea, or issue. Students discover the complexity of a subject by studying it from the perspectives of multiple disciplines and different fields of inquiry, and by reading and writing extensively about it. Because the class is a seminar, students also debate the topic through lively class discussions. Students select from a variety of topics. Students will receive credit for only one section of LSP 112. Courses are offered during the Winter and Spring Quarters and are intended for first-year students. WRD 103 or HON 100 is a prerequisite for this class.

LSP 120 | QUANTITATIVE REASONING & TECHNOLOGICAL LITERACY I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course provides a mathematical foundation for students to become confident and critical users of quantitative information of all kinds: numerical, graphical, and verbal. Students analyze data from a wide variety of fields, making and critiquing quantitative arguments. Mathematical topics include proportional reasoning and rates, the making and interpretation of graphs, linear and exponential models, logarithms, and finance. The course is taught in a hands-on laboratory environment where students are introduced to computer tools for data analysis and presentation. PREREQUISITE(S): MAT 100, MAT 101, or demonstrating readiness via the math placement test taken at matriculation. As an alternative to taking LSP 120, this requirement can be met by passing a separate LSP 120 Proficiency Exam (see qrc.depaul.edu). A student whose major requires calculus is exempt from this requirement. Formerly ISP 120.

LSP 121 | QUANTITATIVE REASONING AND TECHNOLOGICAL LITERACY II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course provides more advanced mathematical and computational methods in the analysis and interpretation of quantitative information. Topics include databases, descriptive statistics, measures of association and their interpretation, elementary probability theory, and an introduction to algorithms and computer programming. The course is taught in a hands-on laboratory environment where students are introduced to advanced computer tools for data analysis, including databases and a professional statistical software package. PREREQUISITE(S): LSP 120 or a passing score on the LSP 120 Proficiency Exam. As an alternative to taking LSP 121, this requirement can be met by passing a separate LSP 121 Proficiency Exam (see qrc.depaul.edu). A student whose major requires calculus is exempt from this requirement. Formerly ISP 121.

LSP 130 | TRANSFER SUCCESS SEMINAR | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course provides new transfer students an introduction to DePaul’s mission and resources and provides guidance for reflection on their academic paths, purpose exploration, and career preparation. Students will reflect on past experiences at other institutions and consider how to apply what they have learned moving forward. This course is open to all new transfer students but is especially directed towards those who have between 30 and 88 credits.

LSP 199 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Permission of instructor and of First-Year Program Director required before registration.
Ultimately, we will design and implement a social media plan to raise awareness of different social movements. We will analyze how these movements have been effective and how they have been ineffective. Activists, politicians, and concerned individuals increasingly utilize social media tools to facilitate social and political change. In this class, we will explore contemporary civic engagement as it happens on social media education and their applicability in the wider world. This course also provides a space for students to share their experience as transfer students. As such, a transfer student mentor contributes to this class.

LSP 201 | TRANSFER CAREER SEMINAR | 1 quarter hour
(Undergraduate)
This course, exclusively for transfer students, considers career preparation in the context of the college of Liberal Arts and Social Sciences. Students will be made aware of LAS's academic, institutional and co-curricular resources as they pertain to future career success. Discussion and reading will center on values and skills learned in liberal arts education and their applicability in the wider world. This course also provides a space for students to share their experience as transfer students. As such, a transfer student mentor contributes to this class.

LSP 320 | PEER EDUCATION THEORY AND PRACTICE | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is designed to introduce students to the principles and practices of how to mentor first-year students into the academic, intellectual and social life of the University. The course also prepares students to serve, if selected, as peer educators for incoming students in the upcoming autumn quarter. Formerly ISP 320.

LSP 321 | PEER EDUCATION THEORY AND PRACTICE II | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is designed to support students chosen to serve as peer educators with the principles and practices of how to mentor first-year students into the academic, intellectual and social life of the University. Formerly ISP 321.

Lifelong Learning (LL)

LL 125 | SOCIAL MEDIA FOR SOCIAL CHANGE | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Can we change the world with Social Media? Others already have. Let’s see what’s been done and take action for our own communities. #SMSCsnl Trending topics on Twitter and other social media sites might seem short lived, but the effectiveness of movements like the Arab Spring, Occupy Wall Street and Black Lives Matters illustrate how social media can be used to raise social consciousness and enact social change. Activists, politicians, and concerned individuals increasingly utilize social media tools to facilitate social and political change. In this class, we will explore contemporary civic engagement as it happens on social media. We will look at how social media facilitates messages and organization of different social movements. We will analyze how these movements have been effective and how they have been ineffective. Ultimately, we will design and implement a social media plan to raise social awareness for a social issue emerging from our own communities.

LL 200 | SEMINAR ON MULTICULTURALISM IN THE UNITED STATES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course provides the opportunity for students to learn about some dimension of multiculturalism relevant to the United States, as considered in the context of the global community. Multiculturalism includes questions of ethnicity, race, class, gender, language, religion, and sexual orientation. Courses pay attention to the history of multiculturalism; examine the experiences and perspectives of at least three distinct cultural groups; develop a critical perspective about meanings of multiculturalism; and investigate the historical roots of inequalities related to differences in class, ethnicity, gender, age, language, religion, ability, and sexual orientation. Topics of seminars vary and students select a course that interests them. Students can complete only one course numbered LSP 200. Formerly ISP 200.

At least Sophomore Standing is a prerequisite for this course.

LL 201 | REFLECTIVE LEARNING | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In this class, you will use a variety of strategies to surface and articulate knowledge you have gained outside of the formal college environment. Reflecting on past learning, you will use several methods for uncovering "tacit" knowledge and making it "explicit" to demonstrate and transfer skills to others in the workplace or other learning environments. 2 credit hours.

LL 205 | QUANTITATIVE REASONING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course provides an introduction to various topics in quantitative reasoning that most adults will be exposed to throughout their university coursework, their careers, and their daily lives. You will be introduced to different approaches to problem solving, how numbers are used in the real world, how to manage your personal finances, basic concepts in statistics and how they are applied in everyday settings and, finally, how money and populations grow and decay. Using mathematical models to understand real-world phenomena and to make predictions is an important component of the course. 4 credit hours.

LL 206 | ADVANCED MATH FOR PROFESSIONAL STUDIES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This class covers college algebra concepts that professionals can apply in the workplace to solve problems and interpret data. Core topics include: exponential and logarithmic functions, inverse functions, and polynomial and rational functions. Students will use graphing software extensively to investigate how these functions represent patterns of and relationships between variables. The class will also allow students to review the prerequisite algebra needed to manipulate and solve more advanced equations.

LL 240 | PUBLIC SAFETY & DEFINING PROFESSIONAL IDENTITY | 3-6 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In this professional seminar, students use the tools of experiential learning and competence-based skill-articulation to investigate the degree concentration area: Public Safety & Security Management. Learning focuses on the assessment of each student’s professional experience within the context of the degree concentration. Preparation for professional growth and development, and an assessment of relevant occupational areas are key aspects of the course. (6 hours)

LL 251 | ESSAY WRITING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In this course, students develop their ability to use writing to explore ideas as well as to communicate what they have learned in a variety of contexts. The principles and skills students learn are widely applicable and will improve their communication in business and personal settings as well as at school. This course focuses particular attention on writing to thrive in a writing-intensive curriculum. Students learn strategies for combining experience with analysis and reflection in essay writing, managing the writing process, and writing persuasively. Particular emphasis is given to the process of revision. 4 credit hours.

LL 270 | CRITICAL THINKING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In this course, students are introduced to the basic concepts behind the skills of effective listening, dynamic thinking, and persuasive argumentation and have an opportunity to practice these skills within an active and experiential context. Through peer and small group activities, problem-based exercises, and self-evaluation skills, students will develop effective habits of thinking that can be employed in subsequent learning experiences.
LL 280 | LIBERAL ARTS IN ACTION | 2-6 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course directs students to analyze an engaging topic from multiple perspectives in the liberal arts. Students strengthen their problem-solving skills by drawing upon the ideas and methods of at least three different liberal arts disciplines. The learning activities clarify how the liberal arts can be put into action to solve problems. The course strengthens students development of critical thinking and academic writing across the curriculum. 2-6 credit hours.

LL 290 | RESEARCH WRITING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Research writing allows writers to present credible and persuasive evidence and ideas to a variety of audiences. Research writing includes finding sources, evaluating their credibility, and smoothly integrating them into academic and non-academic texts. This process can lead writers to strengthen, expand, challenge, and/or change their beliefs based on their findings. Students will produce both academic and non-academic texts. Academic texts will include an annotated bibliography and a literature review using APA or MLA style. Non-academic texts might include a multi-modal blog or a series of persuasive memos. Completion of Research Writing is a prerequisite for LL300 Research Methods. 4 credit hours.

(LL 260 or LL 261 or LL 153 or LL 264 or LL 157 or LL 104 or PLA L4) and (LL 270 or DCM 310 or LL 105 or PLA L5) are prerequisites for this class.

LL 300 | RESEARCH SEMINAR | 6 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Research Seminar is a required course in research design. The course advances the development and application of critical thinking skills while exploring methods of formal inquiry as preparation for academic and lifelong research. Research Seminar is taught under a general theme selected by the instructor or alternatively as an open topic format. A research proposal is the primary document produced and assessed in Research Seminar. This course satisfies a residency requirement. (6 credit hours)

(LL 260 or LL 261 or LL 153 or LL 264 or LL 157 or LL 104 or PLA L4) and (LL 270 or DCM 310 or LL 105 or PLA L5) and LL 250 are prerequisites for this class.

LL 301 | RESEARCH METHODS | 6 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course introduces you to research methods and their application across liberal and professional studies as preparation for lifelong inquiry. Emphasis is on qualitative and quantitative research approaches, experimental design, sampling, measurement, analysis, ethics in research, and research communication. You will be introduced to and utilize basic statistical methods. A comprehensive research proposal in your area of interest is the primary document produced and assessed in Research Methods. Prerequisite: Research Writing. LL 290 is a prerequisite for this class.

LL 302 | EXTERNSHIP | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Externship is a required course in which SNL students design and execute an independent study project, guided by their academic committees, which engages them in learning under new conditions and in reflecting on the methods of independent learning used. Externship is offered in two modes: as a service learning course or as a course completed individually with your faculty mentor. To register for Externship as a service learning course, use Campus Connect. This course satisfies a residency requirement.

(LL 260 or LL 261 or LL 153 or LL 264 or LL 157 or LL 104 or PLA L4 or WRD 103 or WRD 104) and (LL 270 or DCM 310 or LL 105 or PLA L5) and (LL 250 or status as a BAPS student) are prerequisites for this class.

LL 305 | ACTIVE CITIZENS: MAKING A DIFFERENCE IN THE COMMUNITY, WORKPLACE WORLD | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Americans are known for active participation in organizations that strengthen our communities. We coach our kid’s sports teams, take meals to members of our congregations, work for candidates that we believe in and join marches to support or oppose government action. With all these activities, we engage with other members of our community and workplace to make it better for ourselves and our families and to promote social justice. In this class, we will develop the knowledge and practice skills that enhance civic engagement. (4 quarter hours)

LL 390 | SUMMIT SEMINAR | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This required course is the final requirement completed by SNL students to earn their degree. Primary purposes are to 1) bring appropriate and reflective closure on the SNL experience; 2) enable students to celebrate and share their work with others who have accomplished goals and projects; and, 3) reflect upon the overall SNL experience, its developmental effect, its contribution to lifelong learning, and the transferable skills, attitudes, etc. that were developed as a result of the SNL experience. This course satisfies a residency requirement. (FA 303 or FA 304) and LL 302 are corequisites for this class.

Master of Public Health (MPH)

MPH 101 | THE SCIENCE OF PROTECTING THE PUBLIC’S HEALTH | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course examines the philosophy and process of conducting health research for the purposes of protecting the health of the public. Public health research is responsible for many of the laws, policies, and best practices that guide how we prevent disease. Public health research moves beyond conjecture and opinion to provide sound evidence about the risks of ill health and disease. The course employs a series of case studies to evaluate evidence, make sense of correlations, and understand the risks of disease.

MPH 501 | INTRODUCTION TO PUBLIC HEALTH | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course introduces students to the basic tenets of public health, its focus on the prevention of disease and illness, and the promotion of the health and well-being of all people. The course provides a brief history of public health, an introduction to the five core disciplines of public health (epidemiology, biostatistics, environmental health, social and behavioral health, and health policy and management), and an overview of the field’s core functions such as assessment, policy development, and assurance.

MPH 502 | INTRODUCTION TO EPIDEMIOLOGY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course will focus on the theories and methods used in the field of epidemiology to study the occurrence, distribution and determinants of infectious and non-infectious diseases, other forms of illness (particularly those impacted by social and environmental forces), and injury in human populations. The focus will be on determining the impact, magnitude, and patterns of disease/illness/injury frequency so that causal agents can be identified and effective prevention, treatment and control measures can be designed and implemented. The course will explore variations of disease/illness/injury in relation to such factors as age, sex, race/ ethnicity, occupational and social characteristics, place of residence, social inequality, susceptibility, exposure to specific agents, and other pertinent characteristics. Also of concern will be the temporal distribution of disease, examination of trends, cyclical patterns, and intervals between exposure to causative factors and onset of disease.

MPH 503 | INTRODUCTION TO ENVIRONMENTAL HEALTH | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Study of the environment factors that influence health. Topics include air and water pollution, global population and local community dynamics, toxicology, infectious and chemical agents, radiation, and management.

MPH 511 | HEALTH AND BEHAVIOR THEORY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course will examine various theories and models that have been developed to identify the range of psychosocial factors that impact participation in both health-threatening and health-enhancing behaviors, and provide guidance for the modification of such behaviors. The theories and models will be explored from multidisciplinary perspectives and will be applied to an array of health issues. Practical applications of these theories to the development and implementations of theory-based public health interventions that can be applied with multiple populations (e.g., women, adolescents, elderly, people of color) within multiple settings (e.g., communities, schools, health care settings) at various levels of change (e.g., individual, community, social, policy) will also be explored. Cross-listed with PSY 511.
MPH 512 | RESEARCH METHODS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will provide a critical examination of the relative strengths and limitations of various research designs, data collection methods, and types of existing data. Students will develop an understanding of (a) the relative contributions of a mixed-methods approach to public health research, (b) basic issues related to the measurement of public health concepts, and (c) the relative strengths and limitations of various analytic approaches to studying public health problems. Students will familiarize themselves with peer-reviewed journals, how to search for material on specific topics, how to develop a critical reader's eye, and how to summarize and draw evidence-based conclusions from multiple studies.

MPH 513 | PUBLIC HEALTH ADMINISTRATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course considers the conceptual and theoretical foundation underlying managerial decision-making. The course introduces students to such basic managerial tools as basic accounting, cost-benefit analysis, budgeting, and marketing. Principles of strategic planning and forecasting are examined. The course goes on to examine the legal framework that governs public health practice, organizations, human resources, research activities, and community as well as individual patient intervention efforts.

MPH 515 | PUBLIC HEALTH ETHICS AND POLICY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is designed to analyze the ethical basis in which public health practice is grounded. It reviews concepts and ideas developed by a number of disciplines including philosophy, law, political science, and economics.

MPH 522 | PROGRAM DEVELOPMENT AND GRANT WRITING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is designed to provide students with the background and skills to develop and evaluate community public health programs in a variety of settings. Students will work individually and as members of teams to design measurable goals, objectives, action plans, timelines, and evaluation indicators of community-based public health programs. Application of methods to logic modeling, proposal writing, budget planning, project management, and data management will be examined throughout the course.

MPH 525 | PROGRAM EVALUATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will provide students with a comprehensive theoretical, methodological and ethical foundation for conducting public health program evaluation. Students will experience the practice aspects of evaluation including communicating and negotiating with stakeholders, conducting an evaluability assessment, developing logic models and evaluation questions, identifying appropriate data collection methods, gathering reliable and valid evaluation data that are appropriate to the selected design and analysis methods, analyzing data, reporting evaluation results, and ensuring evaluation use. The instructor will facilitate a learning and skill-building environment, drawing on personal experiences and the expertise of others in the field.

MPH 530 | SOCIAL EPIDEMIOLOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course examines conceptual approaches and empirical findings related to the social and structural determinants of health. Students are introduced to the history and development of social epidemiology as a field of study, with emphasis on the tension between problem-focused and solution-focused research. Topics include the health effects of income inequality, racism/discrimination, and neighborhood effects, including social capital.

MPH 531 | DATA ANALYSIS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course explores how statistical methods are used in the contemporary literature, focusing on the most part on social epidemiology. The course builds from an understanding of univariate and bivariate statistics and examines a range of multivariate strategies: ordinary least squares (OLS) regression, logistic, ordinal, and multinomial models, and hierarchical (multilevel) regression. The course revolves around a close reading of the research literature and hands-on application of statistical analysis; as such, the emphasis is on critically evaluating published work and setting up/interpreting analyses.

MPH 541 | BIOSTATISTICS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will provide a critical examination of the relative strengths and limitations of various statistical tools and methods. Students will develop statistical analysis to test theories and aid in the development of interventions to improve community health and reduce health inequities.

MPH 531 is a prerequisite for this course.

MPH 532 | DATA ANALYSIS II | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course focuses primarily on regression models, with an emphasis on understanding the effects of compositional and contextual variables. Students develop statistical analysis to test theories and aid in the development of interventions to improve community health and reduce health inequities.

MPH 531 is a prerequisite for this course.

MPH 535 | PROGRAM DESIGN AND EVALUATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will provide a theoretical, conceptual, methodological, and ethical foundation for designing health-based programs and evaluating these programs using qualitative methods. The course will be practically-focused, and you will learn to carry out a qualitative evaluation of a health program in small steps, including: selecting a qualitative approach, developing instruments, sampling, collecting and managing qualitative data, developing codebooks and establishing inter-observer reliability, ensuring credibility and trustworthiness of data, using qualitative software, and reporting findings.

MPH 541 | BIOSTATISTICS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course emphasizes the application of statistical methods to problems of human health and disease. It covers parametric and nonparametric statistical inferential methods for univariate and bivariate situations using SPSS. Specific topics include but are not limited to the following: Interpretation of graphic and descriptive statistics for both quantitative and categorical data, confidence interval estimation and hypothesis testing methods, linear and multiple regression logistic regression, analysis of categorical data and ANOVA. Course emphasizes the statistical interpretation of the literature and analytic projects based on large data sets from published studies, the internet, or the student's workplace.
MPH 551 | GLOBAL HEALTH INEQUITIES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course examines theories and data surrounding global health. Topics include epidemiologic transition, the burden of chronic non-communicable diseases in the global south, neglected tropical diseases, and access to medicines. Sociological and anthropological perspectives are explored to understand the structural causes of health inequalities around the world.

MPH 552 | MATERNAL AND CHILD HEALTH | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will utilize a life course perspective to examine contemporary health issues affecting women and children. Students will examine health disparities and social determinants of health, and engage in discourse on a variety of health topics from a social justice framework. Course exercises and assignments will focus on building skills in community assessment, program planning, evaluation, advocacy and policy development, as they apply to maternal and child health.

MPH 553 | PUBLIC HEALTH AND FORCED MIGRATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is an overview of key public health issues for populations undergoing forced migration. The course emphasizes the contextual factors relevant to the physical and psychosocial challenges faced by displaced populations. Using a community public health approach the course will address: the challenges of health promotion, health care access and delivery; the everyday contexts that affect health; strategies for conducting public health research; and interventions for addressing health outcomes.

MPH 554 | GLOBAL PUBLIC HEALTH PRACTICE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course introduces students to the concepts, principles, tools, and frameworks fundamental to further study in the field of global public health. The course is global in scope but emphasis will be on low and middle income countries. It explores health systems issues and their impact on the health of populations. It outlines theories and models used in interventions to change health behavior and provides an overview of key actors and organizations working to advance health around the globe.

MPH 555 | EPIDEMIOLOGY IN A GLOBAL CONTEXT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will focus on the theories and methods used in the field of epidemiology to study the occurrence, distribution and determinants of infectious and non-infectious diseases, other forms of illness (particularly those impacted by social and environmental forces), and injury in human populations. The class examine epidemiology in various global contexts. The focus will be on 95 determining the impact, magnitude, and patterns of disease/illness/injury frequency so that causal agents can be identified and effective prevention, treatment and control measures can be designed and implemented. The course will explore variations of disease/illness/injury in relation to such factors as age, sex, race/ethnicity, occupational and social characteristics, place of residence, social inequality, susceptibility, exposure to specific agents, and other pertinent 100 characteristics. Also of concern will be the temporal distribution of disease, examination of trends, cyclical patterns, and intervals between exposure to causative factors and onset of disease.

MPH 556 | WOMEN'S HEALTH | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
An examination of women's health throughout the life cycle, with special emphasis placed on women's structural and societal roles within systems of health and in communities at large, which emphasizes on-going and emerging issues in women's health, such as sexual and reproductive health, contraception, gender-based violence, and chronic diseases, in order to address health disparities and redress health inequalities.

MPH 557 | ENVIRONMENTAL EPIDEMIOLOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Environmental epidemiology is the science of identifying the role the environment has on the distribution of chronic and infectious disease. In this course, students will learn the practical techniques to identify health disparities and the associated environmental factors including the physical, chemical, biological, and socio-cultural determinants of health. Specific topics will include risk assessment, exposure estimation, and epidemiological study design demonstrated through case study analysis, critical review of the literature, data collection, and interpretation.

MPH 558 | QUALITATIVE METHODS IN PUBLIC HEALTH | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course introduces students to the theory and application of qualitative inquiry. The course covers a variety of qualitative approaches including depth interviewing, focus groups, and photo voice. It also guides students through the process of designing a qualitative study, including: developing data collection instruments, managing data collection, analyzing qualitative data, and disseminating findings.

MPH 559 | VIOLENCE AND PUBLIC HEALTH | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course explores violence from a public health perspective. It will examine various forms of violence, including: Interpersonal violence (e.g., community, family/partner violence), self-inflicted violence (e.g., suicide and self-harm) and collective violence (e.g., social violence and structural violence). It will also examine theories to explain violence and public health policies, programs, and community-based practices to address and prevent violence.

MPH 559 | SPECIAL TOPICS IN PUBLIC HEALTH | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Special courses will be offered as students and faculty affiliated with the MPH program identify selected topics of common interest.

MPH 599 | INDEPENDENT STUDY IN PUBLIC HEALTH | 1-4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course can be taken in consultation with a supervising faculty member.

MPH 600 | PREPARATION FOR PUBLIC HEALTH PRACTICE | 1 quarter hour
(Graduate)
This year-long course includes a series of skills-based workshops designed to introduce students to the specialized skills and competencies needed in the public health workplace. These workshops are designed to complement the core MPH curriculum and are selected based on regular feedback from faculty, public health practitioners, and students.

MPH 602 | COMMUNITY HEALTH ASSESSMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is the first of a three-course sequence. Students are expected to use multiple methods to obtain and synthesize data pertaining to their practicum organization and the communities served. They will apply these skills to community health practice in their practicum agency, and to the development of preliminary chapters in the academic capstone.
MPH 603 | COMMUNITY HEALTH PROJECT DESIGN | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This is the second course of the three-course sequence. Students are expected to describe and distill outcomes from their practicum project, and synthesize the meaning of these outcomes within a broader public health context. They will produce the final chapters of the academic project, submit the finalized capstone for review, and create a professional poster presentation.
MPH 602 and MPH 603 are prerequisites for this class.

MPH 605 | SOCIAL EPIDEMIOLOGY PROJECT DESIGN | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is the first part of a three-course capstone sequence. This course focuses on the first two parts of the capstone and is designed to provide the student with the practical experience needed to apply skills learning in Social Epidemiology to the practice of Community Health Assessment and Organizational Assessment.
MPH 600 is a prerequisite for this course.

MPH 606 | SOCIAL EPIDEMIOLOGY PROJECT IMPLEMENTATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This class examines the practical application of social sciences theories to the creation of effective epidemiological analysis and the presentation of findings. Using your practicum as a framework, we examine the scientific literature to assess current best practices and benchmarks for your proposed capstone product through a systematic review of the literature. We apply this scholarly knowledge, in concord with your work for MPH 605, to craft and conduct an appropriate epidemiological analysis for your capstone. We will review the analytical tools needed in the capstone and we will identify techniques to disseminate the findings of the project in a comprehensive, concise, and appropriate results section.
MPH 605 is a prerequisite for this course.

MPH 607 | CAPSTONE SEMINAR IN SOCIAL EPIDEMIOLOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This is the third course of the three-course capstone sequence. This course focuses on the final production of the capstone and poster presentation at the MPH Graduate Public Health Forum. The capstone demonstrates students’ ability to integrate knowledge and skills obtained throughout their MPH training and practicum placement to a social epidemiology issue and setting – and to express this integration in two structured, academic formats: capstone and poster.
MPH 606 is a prerequisite for this course.

MPH 698 | CAPSTONE THESIS COMPLETION | 0 quarter hour
(Graduate)
Students may register for this class if they are engaged in work on their capstone thesis. Registration requires certification by the chair that the student is engaged in writing. The course does not apply to completion of an IN in a class. This is a zero-credit course.
MSW 421 | INTRODUCTION TO SOCIAL WORK RESEARCH | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course presents the conceptual foundations and methods of research needed in order to assist students with integrating research knowledge and professional social work practice. It presents social justice as an overarching paradigm in the study of social work research. MSW 421 presents the conceptual foundations and methods of research in order to assist students with integrating research knowledge with professional social work practice and ethics. The course focuses on the quantitative and qualitative methods. The course covers the research process from problem identification through the conceptualization of research questions, sampling, design, measurement, data collection, analysis, and dissemination of findings. Additionally the course pays specific attention to ethics in research and issues of race, class, gender and sexual orientation. As an alternative to the quantitative research method, the course touches briefly on qualitative methods. The course makes use of examples and readings that focus on conducting research with individuals, families, and communities in urban environments. Students engage in a critical analysis of the quantitative research method and consider alternative methods of developing knowledge as it pertains to social work. Additionally, the course provides a basic coverage of data analysis using both the quantitative and qualitative research methods with the goal of developing student’s conceptual understanding and ability to critically interpret research findings.
Status as a MSW degree seeking student is a prerequisite for this class.

MSW 431 | SOCIAL WELFARE POLICY I | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This foundation-level course is designed to provide students with the entry-level knowledge of social work ethics and values, policy formation and analysis, and practice skills necessary to impact and interpret the rules and regulations surrounding social welfare. Emphasis is placed on understanding political processes at the agency, local, regional and federal level and attention is given to economic considerations as well as the unique role of social welfare policy in regulating the lives of clients, particularly those from historically oppressed groups. This course is the first of two required social welfare policy courses for MSW degree candidates.
Status as a MSW degree seeking student is a prerequisite for this class.

MSW 432 | ADVANCED SOCIAL WELFARE POLICY II | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This is the second of two required Social Welfare Policy Courses in the MSW curriculum. This concentration course focuses on policy practice (including advocacy) skills in agencies and organizations. While including a review of analytical techniques, there is emphasis in this course on the human interactions which shape policy review and implementation. Only students who have successfully completed MSW 431 and the Foundation Practice and Field Education Sequence (MSW 481 thru 483 and MSW 491 thru 493) can be enrolled in this course.
MSW 431 or advanced standing is a prerequisite for this class.

MSW 450 | SPECIAL TOPICS IN SOCIAL WORK | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
See schedule for current offerings. Graduate standing required.
MSW 492 and department permission are prerequisites for this course. This course is the second course in a three-part field education sequence. This course requires simultaneous enrollment in MSW 482 as well as enrollment in an approved foundation field work placement. Students will be provided with the opportunity to apply the beginning skills and knowledge needed to professionally aid individuals and families using the bio-psycho-social model and the empowerment approach, and introduce key components of field work and working with community organizations and social service agencies. MSW 491 is a prerequisite for this class.

MSW 493 and department permission are prerequisites for this course. This course is the third course in a three-part field education sequence. This course requires simultaneous enrollment in MSW 483 as well as enrollment in an approved foundation field work placement. Students will be provided with the opportunity to apply the beginning skills and knowledge needed to professionally aid individuals, families, and groups using the bio-psycho-social model and the empowerment approach, and introduce key components of field work and working with community organizations and social service agencies. MSW 492 and department permission are prerequisites for this course.

MSW 494 and department permission are prerequisites for this course. This course requires simultaneous enrollment in MSW 484 as well as enrollment in an approved foundation field work placement. Students will be provided with the opportunity to apply the beginning skills and knowledge needed to professionally aid individuals, families, and groups using the bio-psycho-social model and the empowerment approach, and introduce key components of field work and working with community organizations and social service agencies. MSW 493 and department permission are prerequisites for this course.

MSW 494 and department permission are prerequisites for this course. This field education course is required for all Advanced Standing students and may be taken as an elective (with its co-requisite course, MSW 494) with permission of the Instructor. This course is designed to equip students with the basic theoretical knowledge, analytical skills, practice skills, and values needed to prepare for advanced, community practice in social work. The course is grounded in the empowerment model with an emphasis on social justice and other Vincentian values. Additionally, it gives particular attention to the importance of diversity, including race/ethnicity, gender, economic class, disability, and sexual orientation in the context of social work macro practice. This course is to be taken concurrently with MSW 494 (Advanced Standing Foundation Field Education). (MSW 483 and MSW 493) or MSW advanced standing is a prerequisite for this course.

MSW 491 | FOUNDATION FIELD EDUCATION I | 4 quarter hours (Graduate) This course is the first course in a three-part field education sequence. This course requires simultaneous enrollment in MSW 481 as well as enrollment in an approved foundation field work placement. Students will be provided with the opportunity to apply the beginning skills and knowledge needed to professionally aid individuals and families using the bio-psycho-social model and the empowerment approach, and introduce key components of field work and working with community organizations and social service agencies. Declared MSW student and department permission are prerequisites for this course.

MSW 492 | FOUNDATION FIELD EDUCATION II | 4 quarter hours (Graduate) This course is the second course in a three-part field education sequence. This course requires simultaneous enrollment in MSW 482 as well as enrollment in an approved foundation field work placement. Students will be provided with the opportunity to apply the beginning skills and knowledge needed to professionally aid individuals and families using the bio-psycho-social model and the empowerment approach, and introduce key components of field work and working with community organizations and social service agencies. MSW 491 is a prerequisite for this class.

MSW 493 | FOUNDATION FIELD EDUCATION III | 4 quarter hours (Graduate) This course is the third course in a three-part field education sequence. This course requires simultaneous enrollment in MSW 483 as well as enrollment in an approved foundation field work placement. Students will be provided with the opportunity to apply the beginning skills and knowledge needed to professionally aid individuals, families, and groups using the bio-psycho-social model and the empowerment approach, and introduce key components of field work and working with community organizations and social service agencies. MSW 492 and department permission are prerequisites for this course.
MSW 561 | FORENSIC SOCIAL WORK PRACTICE I | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Using select theoretical approaches, this course equips students with the advanced skills and knowledge needed to practice at the intersections of human services organizations and legal systems. This course prepares students to work directly with adults and juveniles who are involved in the justice system as well as victims of crime and their families across a range of community-based and institutional settings. The course emphasizes the intersections of race, poverty, gender, and other factors to prepare students to work effectively in a range of settings to promote humane treatment and social justice. After an initial emphasis on clinical and risk assessment, this course begins to introduce students to major evidence-based treatment models for treating individuals involved in the justice system and victims of crime. Students explore ethical issues unique to forensic social work. It is required that this course be taken concurrently with MSW 571 (Forensic Field I).
MSW 483 and MSW 493 are prerequisites for this class. MSW 571 is a co-requisite for this class.

MSW 562 | FORENSIC SOCIAL WORK PRACTICE II | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Using select theoretical approaches, this course equips students with the advanced skills and knowledge needed to practice at the intersections of human services organizations and legal systems. The course emphasizes the intersections of race, poverty, gender, and other factors to prepare students to work effectively in a range of settings to promote humane treatment and social justice. This course expands the focus on learning and applying major evidence-based treatment models for treating individuals involved in the justice system and victims of crime. Students will also develop skills in evaluating programs and practices, along with examining relevant ethical considerations.
MSW 561 and MSW 571 are prerequisites for this class.

MSW 563 | FORENSIC SOCIAL WORK PRACTICE III | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Using select theoretical approaches, this course equips students with the advanced skills and knowledge needed to practice at the intersections of human services organizations and legal systems. The course emphasizes the intersections of race, poverty, gender, and other factors to prepare students to work effectively in a range of settings to promote humane treatment and social justice. In this course students utilize knowledge gained in the pre-requisites and in their internships to develop a project scenario in which they feature a client (e.g., someone accused, an offender, a victim’s family, etc.) and describe treatment approaches as well as related ethical, legal, and multicultural factors that may impact treatment. Students also consider and discuss professional identity and goals.
MSW 562 and MSW 572 are prerequisites for this class.

MSW 571 | FORENSIC FIELD I | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course is the first course in a three-part field education sequence. This course requires simultaneous enrollment in MSW 561, as well as enrollment in an approved field agency placement specializing in Forensic Practice. The course is designed to assist students processing the theoretical, analytical, and practical skills needed to practice Forensic Social Work. Attention is also paid to the unique considerations of women and representatives of other historically-marginalized groups through required learning objectives and tasks.
Status as an MSW degree-seeking student is a prerequisite for this class and MSW 561 is a co-requisite for this class.

MSW 572 | FORENSIC FIELD II | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course is the second course in a three-part field education sequence. This course requires simultaneous enrollment in MSW 562, as well as enrollment in an approved field agency placement specializing in Forensic Practice. The course is designed to assist students processing the theoretical, analytical, and practical skills needed to practice Forensic Social Work. Attention is also paid to the unique considerations of women and representatives of other historically-marginalized groups through required learning objectives and tasks.
MSW 561 and MSW 571 are prerequisites for this class. MSW 562 is a co-requisite for this class.

MSW 573 | FORENSIC FIELD III | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course is the third course in a three-part field education sequence. This course requires simultaneous enrollment in MSW 563, as well as enrollment in an approved field agency placement specializing in Forensic Practice. The course is designed to assist students processing the theoretical, analytical, and practical skills needed to practice Forensic Social Work. Attention is also paid to the unique considerations of women and representatives of other historically-marginalized groups through required learning objectives and tasks.
MSW 562 and MSW 572 are prerequisites for this class. MSW 563 is a co-requisite for this class.

MSW 571 | COMMUNITY PRACTICE I | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Using select theoretical approaches, including empowerment practice, this course equips students with the advanced skills and knowledge needed to practice in community-serving agencies and organizations. The emphasis in this course, which represents the first of three consecutive, required (advanced) practice courses, is on leadership and management of human service organizations. This course introduces students to the knowledge, skills and professional values essential to the leadership of community-based or community-serving programs and organizations. This course covers leadership theories, styles, and techniques; supervision and facilitation; and the critical role(s) leadership play(s) in agency and program administration. Special attention is paid to the unique considerations of people with diverse backgrounds (and representatives of other marginalized groups) in leadership positions as well as working towards the promotion of social and economic justice. It is required that this course be taken concurrently with MSW 591 (Advanced Field Education I). (MSW 483 or MSW 484) and (MSW 493 or MSW 494) are prerequisites for this course.
MSW 582 | COMMUNITY PRACTICE II | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Using select theoretical approaches, this course equips students with the advanced skills and knowledge needed to practice in community-serving agencies and organizations. The emphasis in this course, which represents the second of three consecutive, required (advanced) practice courses, is on program planning. This course introduces students to the skills and knowledge needed to plan and design programs in community-based, people-serving organizations, starting with problem analysis and needs assessment. Related topics such as understanding the multiple dimensions of social problems, operationalizing concerns, and the importance of collaboration and addressing diverse groups’ needs within a community practice framework are also addressed. Measures for accountability and effectiveness, especially for professional social workers, are also addressed. Attention is also given to the needs of historically-marginalized groups and planning for full social and economic justice. It is required that this course be taken concurrently with MSW 592 (Advanced Field Education II).

MSW 583 is a prerequisite for this class

MSW 583 | COMMUNITY PRACTICE III | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Using select theoretical approaches, this course equips students with the advanced skills and knowledge needed to practice in community-serving agencies and organizations. The emphasis in this course, which represents the final of three consecutive, required (advanced) practice courses is on resource development and marketing. This course continues facilitation in planning and designing programs in community-based or community-serving organizations while also providing students with opportunities to integrate fund development, program evaluation, and effective stewardship of resources to leverage lasting social change, especially on behalf of historically-oppressed communities. Additional related topics include analysis of organizational change, partnerships, strategic planning, and quality assurance. It is required that this course be taken concurrently with MSW 592 (Advanced Field Education III).

MSW 582 is a prerequisite for this course

MSW 591 | COMMUNITY FIELD EDUCATION I | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is the first course in a three-part field education sequence. This course requires simultaneous enrollment in MSW 581 as well as enrollment in an approved field agency placement specializing in Community Practice. The course is designed to assist students processing the theoretical, analytical, and practical skills needed in Community Practice. Attention is also paid to the unique considerations of women and representatives of other historically-marginalized groups in organizational leadership roles through required learning objectives and tasks.

Status as an MSW degree-seeking student is a prerequisite for this class and MSW 581 is a corequisite for this class.

MSW 592 | COMMUNITY FIELD EDUCATION II | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is the second course in a three-part field education sequence. This course requires simultaneous enrollment in MSW 582 as well as enrollment in an approved field agency placement specializing in Community Practice. The course is designed to assist students processing the theoretical, analytical, and practical skills needed in Community Practice. Attention is also paid to the unique considerations of women and representatives of other historically-marginalized groups in organizational leadership roles through required learning objectives and tasks.

MSW 581 and MSW 591 are a prerequisite and MSW 582 is a corequisite for this class.

MSW 593 | COMMUNITY FIELD EDUCATION III | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is the third course in a three-part field education sequence. This course requires simultaneous enrollment in MSW 583 as well as enrollment in an approved field agency placement specializing in Community Practice. The course is designed to assist students processing the theoretical, analytical, and practical skills needed in Community Practice. Attention is also paid to the unique considerations of women and representatives of other historically-marginalized groups in organizational leadership roles through required learning objectives and tasks.

MSW 582 and MSW 592 are a prerequisite and MSW 583 is a corequisite for this class.

MSW 599 | CANDIDACY CONTINUATION | 0 quarter hour
(Graduate)
This class is intended for students who experience disruption in their MSW course of study. Students may register for this class if they are engaged in work associated with their academic or field-placement-based work. Registration requires certification by the chair that the student is engaged in academic or placement-based work. The course does not apply to completion of an IN in a class. This course may be taken at most 3 times. It carries the equivalent of half-time enrollment status, for financial aid purposes. Zero-credit.

MLS 478 | THE PSYCHOLOGY OF WOMEN | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
A review of research and theory on women including sexist biases and methodology, feminist therapy, violence against women, and gender differences in the development of power and sexuality. Cross-listed as PSY 561 and WGS 470.

MLS 479 | WRITING POETRY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Writing Poetry: Cross-listed as ENG 493.
MLS 480 | MAJOR AUTHORS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
An examination of major writers in the English and American literary traditions. Topics vary; see schedule for current offerings.

MLS 481 | SPECIAL TOPICS IN ART HISTORY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Explorations in the history of art from ancient Egyptians to contemporary art. Topics vary.

MLS 482 | ECOLOGY, SPIRITUALITY AND ETHICS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course explores the ecological crisis from a religious/ethical perspective, examining the dangers posed for humanity and the planet. It considers the new cosmology developing from science, especially physics, and its dialogue with philosophy, myth and religion. Cross-listed as REL 320.

MLS 483 | CULTURAL PERSPECTIVES ON HEALTH AND DISEASE | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
A multidisciplinary examination of the cultural factor that help form notions of the well and sick states of the human body. Included will be such topics as the social/religious history of epidemics, healing in Western and non-Western medicine, etc. Sources will be drawn from the history of medicine, anthropological and sociological works, philosophy and literature. Cross-listed as REL 320.

MLS 484 | ZEN MIND | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course examines the philosophy, art, literature and religious practice of Zen Buddhism. It explores Zen’s influence in both Japan and America. Cross-listed as REL 342.

MLS 485 | INEQUALITY IN AMERICA | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course examines the nature and extent of inequality in American society and explores various psychological, political, social and economic theories which attempt to explain the existence of this phenomenon. Cross-listed as PSC 324.

MLS 486 | TOPICS IN POPULAR CULTURE | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Examines a specific dimension of popular culture using interdisciplinary theories and methods. Possible topics include Food in Film, The Ideology of Romance, or perhaps the popular culture of a decade like the 1950s or 1960s. Topics vary.

MLS 487 | SPECIAL TOPICS IN HISTORY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Topics vary.

MLS 488 | TOPICS IN WORLD RELIGIONS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Topics in World Religions.

MLS 489 | TOPICS IN SOCIOLOGY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Various topics in the field of sociology.

MLS 490 | SPECIAL TOPICS AND CONTROVERSIES | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Occasional offerings of particular contemporary relevance by visiting professors. Topics vary.

MLS 491 | TOPICS IN SOCIOLOGY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Topics in World Religions. Various topics in the field of sociology.

MLS 492 | ECOLOGY, SPIRITUALITY AND ETHICS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course explores the ecological crisis from a religious/ethical perspective, examining the dangers posed for humanity and the planet. It considers the new cosmology developing from science, especially physics, and its dialogue with philosophy, myth and religion. Cross-listed as REL 320.

MLS 493 | CULTURAL PERSPECTIVES ON HEALTH AND DISEASE | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
A multidisciplinary examination of the cultural factor that help form notions of the well and sick states of the human body. Included will be such topics as the social/religious history of epidemics, healing in Western and non-Western medicine, etc. Sources will be drawn from the history of medicine, anthropological and sociological works, philosophy and literature. Cross-listed as REL 320.

MLS 494 | ZEN MIND | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course examines the philosophy, art, literature and religious practice of Zen Buddhism. It explores Zen’s influence in both Japan and America. Cross-listed as REL 342.

MLS 495 | INEQUALITY IN AMERICA | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course examines the nature and extent of inequality in American society and explores various psychological, political, social and economic theories which attempt to explain the existence of this phenomenon. Cross-listed as PSC 324.

MLS 496 | TOPICS IN POPULAR CULTURE | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Examines a specific dimension of popular culture using interdisciplinary theories and methods. Possible topics include Food in Film, The Ideology of Romance, or perhaps the popular culture of a decade like the 1950s or 1960s. Topics vary.

MLS 497 | INDEPENDENT STUDY [NON-CAPSTONE] | 1-4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Independent study in an area that does not lead directly into the thesis or capstone. Students may also register for this course on a topic indirectly related to their thesis or capstone if they will subsequently take MLS 498, in which the student directly prepares to write the Integrating Project/The Thesis. The MALS and IDS Program requires that students taking independent studies follow a specified format of meeting frequency, activities, and scholarly production. This format is available on the program web site or from the MALS and IDS office. Registration is by permission of the Director of the MALS and IDS Program and the instructor of the independent study.

MLS 498 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 1-8 quarter hours (Graduate)
Independent study undertaken as preparation for thesis or practicum capstone options. This course is optional preparation for MLS 499, Capstone. The MALS and IDS Program requires that students taking this course follow a specified format of meeting frequency, that they produce a review of literature related to their thesis or practicum, an annotated bibliography, and the required Formal Proposal for the thesis or practicum. Registration is by permission of the Director of the MALS and IDS Program and the permission of the instructor who serves as the thesis or practicum director.

MLS 499 | CAPSTONE | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Capstone for students doing a thesis, practicum or enhanced portfolio essay. Students may register for this course after the Formal Proposal for the thesis or practicum, or the Enhanced Portfolio Essay Proposal, has been approved. Students are normally expected to complete their capstone projects within the quarter in which they take this course. This course carries four hours of credit. Registration is by permission of the Director of the MALS and IDS Program and the permission of the instructor who serves as the student’s capstone director.

A seminar offered occasionally to guide groups of students working on their capstone projects.

MLS 501 | CANDIDACY MAINTENANCE | 0 quarter hour (Graduate)
This 0-credit hour course is available to graduate students who are not registered for a course in a given quarter but need to maintain active university status. Enrollment in this course is limited to three quarters and requires permission of the graduate director. Enrollment in this course allows access to the library and other campus facilities. This course does not carry an equivalent enrollment status and students in it are not eligible for loan deferment or student loans. This course is not graded. (0 credit hours)

MLS 502 | CANDIDACY CONTINUATION | 0 quarter hour (Graduate)
This 0-credit hour course is available to master's degree candidates who are actively working toward the completion of a thesis, project, or portfolio. Enrollment in this course is limited to three quarters and requires thesis/project advisor and graduate director approval and demonstration to them of work each quarter. Enrollment in this course allows access to the library and other campus facilities. This course carries and requires the equivalent of half-time enrollment status. The student may be eligible for loan deferment and student loans. This course is graded as pass/fail. (0 credit hours)
MAT 110 | BASIC ALGEBRA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The objective of this course is to increase the students’ competence in working with ordinary arithmetic, using a large variety of practical problems and situations from basic sciences as motivation. Formerly WRC 104.

MAT 95 | INTRODUCTORY ALGEBRA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
An introduction to functions, linear equations, linear inequalities, absolute values, systems of linear equations, exponents, and polynomials. Formerly WRC 204.

MAT 100 | INTRODUCTION TO QUANTITATIVE REASONING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
An introduction to the algebra needed for quantitative reasoning with a focus on functions and modeling. This course emphasizes the applications of elementary algebra and the use of functions to model and analyze real-world situations. Topics include functions from graphical, tabular, and symbolic points of view and models using linear, quadratic, power, exponential, and logarithmic functions. Graphing technology is used extensively. This course is prerequisite to LSP 120 and is intended for students continuing on to LSP 120. This course is not recommended for students whose plan of study includes calculus.

MAT 101 | INTERMEDIATE ALGEBRA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Functions, factoring, rational expressions, roots, radicals, quadratic equations, quadratic inequalities. Course meets for an additional 1 hour lab session each week for enrichment and problem solving.

MAT 101 or LSP 120 or equivalents or placement by test is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 110 | FOUNDATIONS OF MATHEMATICS FOR ELEMENTARY SCHOOL TEACHERS I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course gives students a deeper understanding of the foundations of elementary mathematics. Topics include problem solving, number systems, the decimal system, the number line, rounding, fractions, percentages, addition and subtraction.

MAT 101 or LSP 120 or equivalents or placement by test is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 111 | FOUNDATIONS OF MATHEMATICS FOR ELEMENTARY SCHOOL TEACHERS II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course gives students a deeper understanding of the foundations of elementary mathematics. Topics include problem solving, fractions, percentages, addition, subtraction, multiplication, and division.

MAT 110 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 112 | GAMBLING AND GAMES, PROBABILITY AND STATISTICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Students with very little mathematical background and little or no computing background will be given a brief introduction to the use of Microsoft Excel for mathematical purposes. This will be followed by a brief discussion of chance, gambling, and probability. Several popular games (such as lotteries, roulette, craps, and poker) will be considered both from a theoretical point of view and by means of very simple computer simulation. At the end, we will discuss briefly topics from game theory such as zero-sum games and game with cooperation.

MAT 094 or placement is a prerequisite for this course.

MAT 115 | MATHEMATICS FOR ELEMENTARY SCHOOL TEACHERS III | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Continuation of Math 110-111.

MAT 111 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 130 | PRECALCULUS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Functions and their graphs, exponential and logarithmic functions, inverse functions, polynomial and rational functions.

MAT 101 or placement by test is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 131 | TRIGONOMETRY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Trigonometric functions, inverse trigonometric functions, trigonometric identities, laws of sines and cosines, polar coordinates and complex plane.

MAT 130 or equivalents or placement by test is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 135 | BUSINESS CALCULUS I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Differential calculus of one or more variables with business applications. A grade of C- or better in MAT 130 (or equivalent) is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 136 | BUSINESS CALCULUS II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Integral calculus, matrix algebra, and probability theory with business applications. A grade of C- or better in MAT 135 (or equivalent) is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 137 | BUSINESS STATISTICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Basic concepts of statistics and applications; data analysis with the use of Excel; theoretical distributions; sampling distributions; problems of estimation; hypothesis testing; problems of sampling; linear regression and correlation. A grade of C- or better in MAT 130 (or equivalent) is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 140 | DISCRETE MATHEMATICS I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Combinatorics, graph theory, propositional logic, singly-quantified statements, operational knowledge of set theory, functions, number systems, methods of direct and indirect proof.

MAT 130 or above or equivalents or placement by test is a prerequisite for this class.
MAT 141 | DISCRETE MATHEMATICS II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Methods of direct and indirect proof, set theoretic proofs, sequences, mathematical induction, recursion, multiply-quantified statements, relations and functions, complexity.
MAT 140 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 147 | CALCULUS WITH INTEGRATED PRECALCULUS I | 6 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Limits, continuity, the derivative, rules of differentiation, derivatives of trigonometric and logarithmic functions and their inverses, and applications, with precalculus review included for each topic. The full MAT 147-8-9 sequence covers all the material of MAT 150-1-2 plus additional precalculus material. (6 quarter hours)
MAT 130 or equivalents or placement by test is a prerequisite for this course.

MAT 148 | CALCULUS WITH INTEGRATED PRECALCULUS II | 6 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Extrema, curve sketching, related rates, definite and indefinite integrals, applications of the integral, with precalculus review included for each topic. (6 quarter hours)
MAT 147 (or MAT 150 or MAT 155 or MAT 160 or MAT 170) is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 149 | CALCULUS WITH INTEGRATED PRECALCULUS III | 6 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Techniques of integration, L'Hopital's rule, improper integrals, Taylor polynomials, series and sequences, first-order differential equations, with precalculus review included for each topic. (6 quarter hours)
MAT 148 (or MAT 151 or MAT 161 or MAT 171) is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 150 | CALCULUS I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Limits, continuity, the derivative, rules of differentiation, derivatives of trigonometric and logarithmic functions and their inverses, applications of the derivative, extrema, curve sketching, and optimization. This course meets for an additional 1-hour lab session each week for enrichment and problem solving.
MAT 131 or placement by test is a prerequisite for this course.

MAT 151 | CALCULUS II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Definite and indefinite integrals, the Fundamental Theorem of Calculus, applications of the integral, techniques of integration. This course meets for an additional 1-hour lab session each week for enrichment and problem solving.
MAT 150 or MAT 155 or MAT 160 or MAT 170 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 152 | CALCULUS III | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
L'Hopital's rule, improper integrals, sequences and series, Taylor polynomials. This course meets for an additional 1-hour lab session each week for enrichment and problem solving.
MAT 151 or MAT 161 or MAT 171 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 155 | SUMMER CALCULUS I | 6 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Limits, continuity, the derivative, rules of differentiation, derivatives of trigonometric and logarithmic functions and their inverses, applications of the derivative, extrema, curve sketching, and optimization. Definite and indefinite integrals, the Fundamental Theorem of Calculus, applications of the integral. (6 quarter hours)
MAT 131 or placement by Mathematics Diagnostic Test is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 156 | SUMMER CALCULUS II | 6 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Further applications of the integral, techniques of integration. L'Hopital's rule, improper integrals, sequences and series, Taylor polynomials. (6 quarter hours)
MAT 148 or MAT 151 or MAT 155 or MAT 161 or MAT 171 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 160 | CALCULUS FOR MATHEMATICS AND SCIENCE MAJORS I | 5 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Limits, continuity, the derivative, rules of differentiation, derivatives of trigonometric and logarithmic functions and their inverses, applications of the derivative, extrema, curve sketching, and optimization. This course meets for an additional 1.5-hour lab session each week for enrichment and problem solving. (5 quarter hours)
MAT 131 or placement by test is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 161 | CALCULUS FOR MATHEMATICS AND SCIENCE MAJORS II | 5 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Definite and indefinite integrals, the Fundamental Theorem of Calculus, applications of the integral, techniques of integration. This course meets for an additional 1.5-hour lab session each week for enrichment and problem solving. (5 quarter hours)
MAT 150 or MAT 155 or MAT 160 or MAT 170 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 162 | CALCULUS FOR MATHEMATICS AND SCIENCE MAJORS III | 5 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
L'Hopital's rule, improper integrals, sequences and series, Taylor polynomials. This course meets for an additional 1.5-hour lab session each week for enrichment and problem solving. (5 quarter hours)
MAT 151 or MAT 161 or MAT 171 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 170 | CALCULUS FOR LIFE SCIENCES I | 5 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The course covers the following topics using examples from the sciences: Functions as models, logarithmic scale graphing, exponential growth and decay, difference equations and limits of sequences, geometric series, functions and limits, trigonometric functions and their limits, continuity, limits at infinity, the derivative, differentiation rules, derivatives of trigonometric and exponential functions, related rates, derivatives of inverse and logarithm functions. Course meets for an additional lab session each week during which time students will work on applied mathematics projects based on the topics covered in the course. Students majoring in the sciences should consult with their major department to decide between the 160 and 170 sequences. (5 quarter hours)
MAT 131 or placement by test is a prerequisite for this class.
MAT 171 | CALCULUS FOR LIFE SCIENCES II | 5 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The course covers the following topics using examples from the sciences: Applications of the derivative including approximation and local linearity, differentials, extrema, and the Mean Value Theorem, monotonicity and concavity, extrema, inflection points, graphing, L'Hopital's Rule, optimization, and the Newton-Raphson method, antiderivatives, the definite integral, Riemann sums, the Fundamental Theorem of Calculus, area, cumulative change, average value of a function, and techniques of integration: substitution rule and integration by parts. Course meets for an additional lab session each week during which time students will work on applied mathematics projects based on the topics covered in the course. Course meets for an additional lab session each week during which time students will work on applied mathematics projects based on the topics covered in the course. (5 quarter hours)
MAT 150 or MAT 155 or MAT 160 or MAT 170 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 172 | CALCULUS III WITH DIFFERENTIAL EQUATIONS | 5 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is designed for students in the life sciences and covers some topics from MAT 152, differential equations and an introduction to the Calculus of functions of several variables. Specific topics are as follows. Numerical integration, partial fraction expansions, Taylor approximations of a function, differential equations, separation of variables, slope fields, Euler's existence theorem, polygonal approximations to solutions of differential equations, the logistic equation and allometric growth models, equilibria of differential equations and their stability, applications of stability theory, functions of several variables, partial derivatives, directional derivative and the gradient. Course meets for an additional lab session each week during which time students will work on applied mathematics projects based on the topics covered in the course. (5 quarter hours)
MAT 151 or MAT 161 or MAT 171 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 207 | HISTORY OF PROBABILITY AND STATISTICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
History Of Probability And Statistics.

MAT 215 | INTRODUCTION TO MATHEMATICAL REASONING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
An introduction to basic concepts and techniques used in higher mathematics courses: set theory, equivalence relations, functions, cardinality, techniques of proof in mathematics. The emphasis is on problem solving and proof construction by students. The department recommends that students take this course no later than the spring quarter of the sophomore year.
MAT 149 or MAT 152 or MAT 156 or MAT 162 or MAT 172 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 216 | FOUNDATIONS OF ADVANCED MATHEMATICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Introduction to abstract mathematics: congruences, modular arithmetic, the Euclidean algorithm, proofs involving manipulation of inequalities and estimation, sequences and their limits. The department recommends that students take this course no later than the spring quarter of the junior year.
MAT 215 (or MAT 141) is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 220 | APPLIED LINEAR ALGEBRA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Systems of linear equations, matrices and matrix algebra, determinants, diagonalization and matrix factorization with MATLAB/Maple, with applications to linear programming and graph theory.
MAT 141 or MAT 148 or MAT 151 or MAT 155 or MAT 161 or MAT 171 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 242 | ELEMENTS OF STATISTICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Descriptive statistics, elements of probability, the binomial and normal probability models; large and small sample hypothesis testing, correlation and regression analysis. Use of computer packages. This course does not count toward mathematics major credit. Cross-listed with SOC 279.
(MAT 095 and MAT 100) or MAT 101 or placement are prerequisites for this class.

MAT 260 | MULTIVARIABLE CALCULUS I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Vectors, dot and cross products, parameterizations of lines and planes in space, functions of several independent variables, partial derivatives, tangent planes and linear approximations, the chain rule, directional derivatives and the gradient vector, extreme values, Lagrange multipliers, double integrals and their applications.
MAT 149 or MAT 152 or MAT 156 or MAT 162 or MAT 172 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 261 | MULTIVARIABLE CALCULUS II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Surface areas, triple integrals, vector functions and space curves, derivatives of vector functions, arc length and curvature, vector fields, line integrals, Green's Theorem, parametric surfaces, surface integrals, curl and divergence, Stokes's Theorem, the Divergence Theorem.
MAT 260 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 262 | LINEAR ALGEBRA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Systems of linear equations and matrices; vectors in n-space; vector spaces: linear combinations, linear independence, basis; linear transformations, change of basis, eigenvalues and eigenvectors.
MAT 260 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 301 | HISTORY OF MATHEMATICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
History of mathematics with problem solving.
A grade of C-minus or better in MAT 215 or MAT 141, or instructor permission is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 302 | COMBINATORICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Methods of counting and enumeration of mathematical structures. Topics include generating functions, recurrence relations, inclusion relations, and graphical methods.
A grade of C-minus or better in MAT 215 or MAT 141, or instructor permission is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 303 | THEORY OF NUMBERS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A study of properties of integers: divisibility; Euclid's Algorithm; congruences and modular arithmetic; Euler's Theorem; Diophantine equations; distribution of primes; RSA cryptography.
A grade of C- or above in MAT 216 (or instructor permission) is a prerequisite for this class.
MAT 304 | DIFFERENTIAL EQUATIONS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Linear equations, systems with constant coefficients, series solutions, Laplace transforms, and applications. Formerly MAT 338.
MAT 260 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 309 | TEACHING AND LEARNING SECONDARY SCHOOL MATHMATICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
SE 364 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 310 | ABSTRACT ALGEBRA I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The first quarter of a 3-quarter sequence. Topics in the sequence include the integers; abstract groups, rings, and fields; polynomial rings; isomorphism theorems; extension fields; and an introduction to Galois theory.
A grade of C-minus or better in MAT 216, or instructor permission, are prerequisites for this class.

MAT 311 | ABSTRACT ALGEBRA II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A continuation of topics from MAT 310: Groups, rings, fields, polynomial rings, isomorphism theorems, extension fields, and an introduction to Galois theory.
A grade of C-minus or better in MAT 310 or instructor permission is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 312 | ABSTRACT ALGEBRA III | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A continuation of topics from MAT 311: Groups, rings, fields, polynomial rings, isomorphism theorems, extension fields, and an introduction to Galois theory.
A grade of C-minus or better in MAT 311 or instructor permission is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 320 | GEOMETRY I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Incidence and separation properties of planes; congruences; the parallel postulate; area theory; ruler and compass construction.
A grade of C-minus or better in MAT 215 or MAT 141, or instructor permission is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 321 | GEOMETRY II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Introduction to solid geometry and noneuclidean geometry (hyperbolic and spherical models); other special topics.
A grade of C- or better in MAT 320 is a prerequisite for this course.

MAT 322 | DATA ANALYSIS AND STATISTICAL SOFTWARE I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Computing with a statistical package. Introduction to data analysis, elementary statistical inference, regression and correlation. This course does not count toward mathematics major credit.
MAT 130 or placement by test is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 323 | DATA ANALYSIS & STATISTICAL SOFTWARE II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Advanced features and applications of the statistical package used in MAT 322.
C- or better in MAT 323

MAT 324 | SAMPLE SURVEY METHODS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
MAT 349 or MAT 353 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 328 | DESIGN OF EXPERIMENTS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Linear models and quadratic forms. Single, two and several-factor experiments, incomplete designs, confounding and fractional factorial experiments. Response surfaces and partially balanced incomplete block designs.
MAT 349 or MAT 353 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 330 | METHODS OF COMPUTATION AND THEORETICAL PHYSICS I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Computational and theoretical methods in ordinary differential equations, complex numbers, systems of equations, phase plane analysis, and bifurcations. Applications to damped, driven oscillators, and to electronics.

MAT 331 | METHODS OF COMPUTATION AND THEORETICAL PHYSICS II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Computational and theoretical methods in ordinary differential equations, complex numbers, systems of equations, phase plane analysis, and bifurcations. Applications to damped, driven oscillators, and to electronics.
MAT 261 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 335 | REAL ANALYSIS I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Real number system, completeness, supremum, and infimum, sequences and their limits, lim inf, lim sup, limits of functions, continuity.
(MAT 149 or MAT 152 or MAT 156 or MAT 162) and (a grade of C-minus or better in MAT 216) are prerequisites for this class.

MAT 336 | REAL ANALYSIS II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Properties of continuous functions, uniform continuity, sequences of functions, differentiation, integration. To follow 335 in the Winter Quarter.
A grade of C- or better in MAT 335 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 337 | COMPLEX ANALYSIS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Complex functions; complex differentiation and integration; series and sequences of complex functions.
MAT 215, MAT 261 and MAT 335 (or instructor permission) are prerequisites or this class.

MAT 340 | TOPOLOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
An introduction to point-set topology: metric spaces, topological spaces, continuity, connectedness, and compactness.
Grades of C- or above in MAT 215 (or MAT 141) and MAT 335 or instructor permission are prerequisites for this class.
MAT 260 | PROBABILITY AND STATISTICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Joint probability distributions and correlation; law of large numbers and the central limit theorem; sampling distributions and theory of estimation.
A grade of C-minus or better in MAT 351 or instructor permission is a prerequisite for this class.
MAT 353 | PROBABILITY AND STATISTICS III | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Principles of hypothesis testing; most powerful tests and likelihood ratio tests; linear regression; one-way analysis of variance; categorical data analysis, nonparametric statistics.
A grade of C-minus or better in MAT 352 or instructor permission is a
prerequisite for this class.
MAT 354 | MULTIVARIATE STATISTICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The multivariate normal distribution. Hypothesis tests on means and variances including the multivariate linear model. Classification using the linear discriminant function. Principal components and factor analysis.
PREREQUISITE(S): MAT 353 and 262, or consent of instructor. (CROSS-LISTED WITH MAT 454)
MAT 262 and MAT 353 are a prerequisite for this class.
MAT 355 | STOCHASTIC PROCESSES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Discrete Markov chains and random walks, birth and death processes, Poisson processes, queuing systems, and renewal processes. Cross-
listed with MAT 455.
MAT 353 is a prerequisite for this class.
MAT 356 | APPLIED REGRESSION ANALYSIS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Simple linear, multiple, polynomial and general regression models.
Selection of best regression equation and examination of residuals for homoscedasticity and other diagnostics. Use of statistical software.
Cross-listed with MAT 456.
MAT 262 and MAT 353 are a prerequisite for this class.
MAT 357 | NONPARAMETRIC STATISTICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Inference concerning location and scale parameters, goodness of fit tests, association analysis and tests of randomness using distribution free procedures. Bootstrap techniques. Smoothing methodologies. Cross-listed with MAT 457.
PREREQUISITE: MAT 349 or 353
MAT 358 | APPLIED TIME SERIES AND FORECASTING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Development of the Box-Jenkins methodology for the identification, estimation, and fitting of ARIMA, and transfer-function stochastic models for the purpose of analyzing and forecasting stationary, non-stationary, and seasonal time series data. The course emphasizes practical time-series data analysis using computer packages and includes applications to economic, business, and industrial forecasting. Cross-listed with MAT 512.
(MAT 341 and MAT 353) or (MAT 356) are prerequisites for this class.
MAT 359 | SIMULATION MODELS AND MONTE CARLO METHOD | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Techniques of computer simulation of the classical univariate and multivariate probability distribution models, and such random processes as random walk, Markov chains, and queues. Cross-listed with MAT 459.
MAT 341 and MAT 353 are a prerequisite for this class.
MAT 360 | GENERALIZED LINEAR MODELS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Applications of generalized linear models. Topics include generalized linear models for non-normal continuous response, models for binary and multinomial response data, models for count data, and analysis of variance and covariance. The class of generalized linear models contains the models most commonly used in statistical practice. (CSC 324 or DSC 323 or MAT 341) and (MAT 349 or MAT 351) are prerequisites for this class.

MAT 361 | THEORY OF INTEREST | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Theory and applications of compound interest to annuities, amortization schedules, sinking funds, bonds, and yield rates. MAT 149 (or MAT 152 or MAT 156 or MAT 162) is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 362 | LIFE CONTINGENCIES I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Basic Contingencies: The theory and applications of contingency mathematics in life and health insurance, annuities, and pensions from both a probabilistic and a deterministic viewpoint. Topics include survival distribution and life tables, life insurance, and life annuities. A grade of C-minus or better in MAT 361 or instructor permission is a prerequisite and MAT 352 is a corequisite for this class.

MAT 363 | LIFE CONTINGENCIES II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Advanced Contingencies: A continuation of Mathematics 362. Topics include net premiums, net premiums reserves, multiple life functions, multiple decrement models, and valuation theory for pension plans. A grade of C- or above in MAT 352 and MAT 362 or instructor permission is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 364 | LOSS MODELS I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Severity and frequency models, aggregate models, coverage modifications, risk measures, construction and selection of parametric models. Cross-listed with MAT 464. MAT 353 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 365 | LOSS MODELS II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Bayesian credibility, Buhlmann credibility, insurance and reinsurance coverages, pricing and reserving. Cross-listed with MAT 465. MAT 364 is a prerequisite for this course.

MAT 366 | MATHEMATICAL DEMOGRAPHY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Introduction to demography; mortality table construction and methods of population and demographic analysis. MAT 353 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 367 | CREDIBILITY THEORY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Credibility theory and loss distributions with applications to casualty insurance classification and finance. Cross-Listed as MAT 467. MAT 352 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 368 | MATHEMATICS FOR FINANCE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The course covers the mathematics of financial derivatives, investment strategies, arbitrage, put-call parity, binomial models for European options and interest rates, Black-Scholes formula, hedging, lognormal models for asset prices, exotic options, valuation using Monte-Carlo, and embedded options in annuity products. MAT 260 and (MAT 220 or MAT 262) and (MAT 349 or MAT 353) are prerequisites for this class.

MAT 370 | ADVANCED LINEAR ALGEBRA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Vector spaces, basis and dimension; matrix representation of linear transformations and change of basis; diagonalization of linear operators; inner product spaces; diagonalization of symmetric linear operators, principal-axis theorem, and applications. Cross-listed MAT 470. MAT 262 and (a grade of C-minus or better in MAT 215 or MAT 141) or instructor permission is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 372 | LOGIC AND SET THEORY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Topics in axiomatic set theory, formal logic, and computability theory. A grade of C-minus or better in MAT 215 or MAT 141, or instructor permission is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 381 | FOURIER ANALYSIS AND SPECIAL FUNCTIONS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The course covers the basic principles of discrete and continuous Fourier analysis and some of its applications currently used in scientific modeling. Students will use the computer to implement the computational algorithms developed in the course. Some of the topics covered will include Fourier transforms and their application to signal and image processing, discrete Fourier series, the fast Fourier transform algorithm and applications to digital filtering, and the Radon transforms and its applications to tomography. MAT 262 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 384 | MATHEMATICAL MODELING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Modeling of real world problems using mathematical methods. Includes a theory of modeling and a study of specific models, selected from deterministic, stochastic, continuous, and discrete models. Cross-listed with MAT 484. MAT 262 (or MAT 220) is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 385 | NUMERICAL ANALYSIS I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Use of a digital computer for numerical computation. Error analysis, Gaussian elimination and Gauss-Seidel method, solution of non-linear equations, function evaluation, cubic splines, approximation of integrals and derivatives, Monte Carlo methods. Cross-listed with MAT 485. MAT 262 and a programming course required as part of the Math Core Curriculum or consent of the instructor are prerequisites for this class.

MAT 386 | NUMERICAL ANALYSIS II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Theory and algorithms for efficient computation, including the Fast Fourier transform, numerical solution of non-linear systems of equations. Minimization of functions of several variables. Sparse systems of equations and corresponding eigenvalue problems. (CROSS-LISTED WITH MAT 486 & CSC 386/486) A grade of C-minus or better in MAT 385 or instructor permission is a prerequisite for this class.
MAT 387 | OPERATIONS RESEARCH: LINEAR PROGRAMMING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Linear programming, integer programming and LP relaxation, the duality theorem, simplex algorithm, interior point methods, applications to industrial engineering. Students should take an introductory computer programming course before taking this course. (CROSS-LISTED AS MAT 488)
MAT 260 and MAT 262 are prerequisites for this class.

MAT 388 | OPERATIONS RESEARCH: OPTIMIZATION THEORY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Convex optimization, quadratic optimization problems, Lagrange multipliers and generalization to inequality constraints, alternating direction method of multipliers (ADMM), unconstrained minimization, applications to industrial engineering including machine learning. Students should take an introductory computer programming course before taking this course. (CROSS-LISTED AS MAT 488)
MAT 260 and MAT 262 are prerequisites for this class.

MAT 389 | TOPICS IN OPERATIONS RESEARCH | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Advanced topics in operations research and optimization theory. A grade of C-minus or better in MAT 388 or instructor permission is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 390 | MATHEMATICS READING AND RESEARCH | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The course provides students with a hands-on experience about research in mathematical sciences. Students attend seminars and research colloquia, and actively participate at discussions about the topics presented. Students reflect on the connections between various areas of modern mathematics, the challenges of structuring and solving problems, and the personal experience of doing mathematics. As a final project, each student prepares and presents a mathematical expository paper describing a current area of research, emphasizing its relevance to mathematics in general and its connections to real world problems. This course may be used to satisfy the junior-year experiential learning (JYEL) requirement.

MAT 391 | STUDIES IN DEMOGRAPHY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The course introduces students to the study by statistical methods of human populations in terms of type of data sources, population composition, growth, fertility, mortality, morbidity, health, migration, and urbanization. In addition, the course has a major component that emphasizes the study of current characteristics of the populations of developing countries in comparison with some developed countries including the United States of America. Students are required to present and submit a research project with comparative analysis of demographic statistics obtained on several developing and developed countries.

MAT 395 | TOPICS IN MATHEMATICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Consult course schedule for current offerings. Course may be repeated for credit when title and content change. Variable credit allowed.

MAT 396 | SENIOR THESIS RESEARCH | 2-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A thesis option is available to mathematics majors who wish to pursue an extended independent project related to a theoretical or applied focus of the program. Students would work under the guidance of a faculty mentor. A total of 4 credits must be completed over the one or two quarters prior to the thesis submission. Interested students are strongly encouraged to enroll in MAT 390 during their junior year. (2 quarter hours)

MAT 397 | MATHEMATICAL PEDAGOGY: THEORY & PRACTICE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Introduction to current theories and practices in college mathematics instruction; helps undergraduate mathematics majors develop a deeper understanding of fundamental mathematical concepts and an awareness of how people learn mathematical ideas, and prepares them to work as consultants in mathematics instruction. Mathematical tutoring practicum is required. Four credit hour course offered over a two quarter span during the autumn and winter quarters only. See instructor for further information. This course maybe used to satisfy the junior experiential learning requirement, but it does not count toward mathematics major or minor credit. Cross-listed with MAT 697.

MAT 398 | SENIOR CAPSTONE SEMINAR | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Topics vary from year to year. This course does not count toward the mathematical major or minor credit.

MAT 215 (or MAT 140 and 141) and MAT 262, or instructor permission are prerequisites for this class.

MAT 399 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 1-8 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
(variable credit)

MAT 400 | APPLIED ABSTRACT ALGEBRA I | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Applied Abstract Algebra I.

MAT 401 | APPLIED ABSTRACT ALGEBRA II | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Applied Abstract Algebra II.

MAT 400 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 421 | BASIC BIOSTATISTICS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course includes both data analysis and experimental design, up to and including survival analysis such as used in the analysis of clinical trials. The course will be supplemented by standard topics with application areas relevant to drug development, including pharmacokinetics, clinical trials, bioequivalence, and pharmacoepidemiology.

MAT 453 or instructor consent is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 424 | ADVANCED BIOSTATISTICS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
The overall objective is the development of statistical literacy and skills in the analysis of biological and medical data including: generalized linear models, analysis of repeated measures, log-linear models, clinical trials and computer applications.

MAT 421 is a prerequisite for this class.
MAT 425 | SURVIVAL ANALYSIS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Basic quantities and models in survival analysis, types of censoring and truncation data, estimation for various survival models, nonparametric estimation of hazard and survival functions, comparing survival times between different groups, the proportional hazard and accelerated lifetime models for regression analysis with failure-time data and model checking methods. Appropriate background is one semester of applied statistics or equivalent.

MAT 426 | GENERALIZED LINEAR MODELS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Applications of generalized linear models. Topics include generalized linear models for non-normal continuous response, models for binary and multinomial response data, models for count data, and analysis of variance and covariation. The class of generalized linear models contains the models most commonly used in statistical practice.
(DSC 324 or DSC 323 or MAT 448) and (MAT 349 or MAT 451) are prerequisites for this class.

MAT 434 | TOPOLOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
An introduction to point-set topology: metric spaces, topological spaces, continuity, connectedness, and compactness.
(ECO 435 or MAT 335 or MAT 680 or a transfer equivalent) is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 435 | MEASURE THEORY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This is a course in Lebesque integration; the study of measure spaces and measurable functions; the basic theorems of Lebesque integration; Egoroff's theorem, the monotone limit theorem, the Lebesque dominated convergence theorem; an introduction to $L_p$ spaces, Hölder's inequality, Minkowski's inequality; Fubini's theorem.
MAT 336 or MAT 434 is a prerequisite for this course.

MAT 436 | FUNCTIONAL ANALYSIS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is an introduction to the basic theory of functional analysis. Students will study normed, Banach, and Hilbert Spaces and the theory of bounded linear functionals and operators acting on them. The contraction mapping and the fixed point theorem are also studied with applications to sequence and function spaces.
MAT 434 and (MAT 370 or MAT 470) is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 437 | COMPLEX ANALYSIS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Course topics: Complex functions; complex differentiation and integration; series and sequences of complex functions. Cross-listed with MAT 337.
(MAT 335 or MAT 434 or MAT 680) is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 441 | APPLIED STATISTICS I | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Parametric and non-parametric statistical inferential methods for the univariate and bivariate situations using SAS. Specific topics include classical and exploratory graphical & numerical methods of data descriptions; inference about means, medians, and associations including analysis of variance and linear regression. Data analytic projects are an integral part of the course.

MAT 442 | APPLIED STATISTICS II | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
A continuation of MAT 441. Repeated measures design, association, analysis of covariance, and multivariate relationships. Diagnostics and model building. Methods of categorical data analysis. Logistical regression and log-linear models. Data analytical projects using SAS are an integral part of the course.
MAT 441 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 443 | APPLIED STATISTICS III | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
A continuation of MAT 442. The course material generalizes univariate methods of inference to multivariate situations using SAS. Specific topics include canonical correlation, discriminant analysis, principal component analysis, factor analysis, and multivariate analysis of variance. Emphasis in the course is on data analytic projects.
MAT 442 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 448 | STATISTICAL METHODS USING SAS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)

MAT 449 | STATISTICAL DATA MANAGEMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Students learn data organization and structures, design of statistical databases, statistical software analysis, basic structure of relational databases, SAS Macros, Python and R functions, complex SQL statements, and advanced data manipulation techniques. MAT 441 (or MAT 448) is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 450 | ADVANCED STATISTICAL COMPUTING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Advanced statistical computing methods used in modern scientific investigation. Topics include data management, random number generation, resampling methods, numerical optimization, Markov Chain Monte Carlo, smoothing methods, data mining: clustering and classification.
MAT 441 and MAT 451 are prerequisites for this class.

MAT 451 | PROBABILITY AND STATISTICS I | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
MAT 452 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 452 | PROBABILITY AND STATISTICS II | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
MAT 451 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 453 | PROBABILITY AND STATISTICS III | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
A continuation of MAT 452. More on hypothesis testing, most powerful, uniformly most powerful, and likelihood ratio tests. Introduction to the analysis of variance; linear regression; categorical data analysis, and nonparametric methods of inference.
MAT 452 is a prerequisite for this class.
MAT 454 | MULTIVARIATE STATISTICS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
The multivariate normal distribution. The general linear model. Multivariate regression and analysis of variance; discriminant analysis; principal component and factor analysis; applications and use of statistical software. Cross-listed with MAT 354.
MAT 453 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 455 | STOCHASTIC PROCESSES | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)

MAT 452 is a prerequisite or a co-requisite for this class.

MAT 456 | APPLIED REGRESSION ANALYSIS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Simple linear, multiple, polynomial and general linear regression models. Model diagnostics; Model selection and Validation. Cross-listed with MAT 356.

MAT 453 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 457 | NONPARAMETRIC STATISTICS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Inference concerning location and scale parameters, goodness of fit tests, association analysis and tests of randomness using distribution free procedures. Bootstrap techniques. Smoothing methodologies. Cross-listed with MAT 357.

MAT 453 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 458 | STATISTICAL QUALITY CONTROL | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
History; Deming guide to quality; graphical techniques of process control; Shewhart’s control charts for means, ranges, standard deviations, individual measurements, and attributes; process capabilities and statistical tolerance; cumulative-sum charts. Product liability; acceptance sampling; product and process design; applications and case studies.

MAT 455 | SIMULATION MODELS AND MONTE CARLO METHOD | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Techniques of computer simulation of the classical univariate and multivariate probability models, and such random processes as random walks, Markov chains, and queues. Cross-listed with MAT 359.

MAT 453 is a prerequisite or a co-requisite for this class.

MAT 460 | TOPICS IN STATISTICS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
One of the following topics: Clinical trials; Reliability and life testing; Categorical data analysis; Bootstrapping; Data Mining; Response Surface Methodology; Meta analysis; Survival Models.

MAT 453 or instructor consent is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 461 | ACTUARIAL SCIENCE I: THEORY OF INTEREST | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Theory of Interest: Theory and application of compound interest to annuities, amortization schedules, sinking funds, bonds, and yield rates. Cross-listed as MAT 361.

MAT 462 | ACTUARIAL SCIENCE II: BASIC CONTINGENCIES | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Basic Contingencies: The theory and applications of contingency mathematics in life and health insurance annuities and pensions, from both a probabilistic and a deterministic viewpoint. Topics include survival distribution and life tables, life insurance and life annuities. Cross-listed as MAT 362.

MAT 461 is a prerequisite for this class and MAT 452 is a corequisite for this class.

MAT 463 | ACTUARIAL SCIENCE III: ADVANCED CONTINGENCIES | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Advanced Contingencies: A continuation of MAT 462. Topics include net premiums, net premium reserves, multiple life functions, multiple decrement models, and valuation theory for pension plans. Cross-listed with MAT 363.

MAT 462 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 464 | LOSS MODELS I | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Severity and frequency models, aggregate models, coverage modifications, risk measures, construction and selection of parametric models. Cross-listed with MAT 364.

MAT 453 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 465 | LOSS MODELS II | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Bayesian credibility, Buhlmann credibility, insurance and reinsurance coverages, pricing and reserving. Cross-listed with MAT 365.

MAT 464 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 466 | MATHEMATICAL DEMOGRAPHY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Introduction to demography, mortality table construction and methods of population and demographic analysis.

MAT 453 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 467 | CREDIBILITY THEORY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Credibility theory and loss distributions with applications to casualty insurance classification and ratemaking.

MAT 462 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 468 | MATHEMATICS FOR FINANCE | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
The course covers the mathematics of financial derivatives, investment strategies, arbitrage, put-call parity, binomial models for European options and interest rates, Black-Scholes formula, hedging, lognormal models for asset prices, exotic options, valuation using Monte-Carlo, and embedded options in annuity products. Cross-listed with MAT 368. MAT 451 is a co-requisite for this course.

MAT 451 is a co-requisite for this course.

MAT 469 | STOCHASTIC CALCULUS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
The course introduces students to the mathematical tools and techniques used in modern Financial Theory. Topics include Brownian motion and Ito’s lemma, stochastic integrals, stochastic differential equations, jump processes, applications to option pricing and interest rate models.

MAT 455 and MAT 468 are prerequisites for this course.
MAT 470 | ADVANCED LINEAR ALGEBRA | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Vector spaces, basis and dimension; matrix representation of linear transformations and change of basis; diagonalization of linear operators; inner product spaces; diagonalization of symmetric linear operators, principal-axis theorem, and applications. Cross-listed as MAT 370. (MAT 262 or MAT 672) and (MAT 141 or MAT 215 or MAT 660) are prerequisites for this course.

MAT 471 | GROUP THEORY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Course topics: Classes of groups; actions of groups on sets; Sylow theorems; decomposition of groups; structure of finite abelian groups. MAT 310 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 472 | FIELDS AND GALOIS THEORY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Course topics: Commutative rings and fields; irreducible polynomials and field extensions, adjunction of roots, algebraic extensions, splitting and normal fields, cyclic extensions, the Galois group, and the Fundamental theorem of Galois theory. Cross-listed with MAT 312. (MAT 311 or MAT 473) and MAT 471 are prerequisites for this course.

MAT 473 | RINGS AND MODULES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Course topics: Rings and Algebras; classes of unique factorization domains; modules and principal isomorphism theorems, classes of modules, decomposition of finitely generated modules; Jordan and rational canonical form of a matrix. MAT 311 or MAT 471

MAT 481 | FOURIER ANALYSIS AND SPECIAL FUNCTIONS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
The course covers the basic principles of discrete and continuous Fourier analysis and its applications. Some of the topics covered are Fourier series, discrete Fourier transforms, fast Fourier transforms, and Fourier transforms. Appropriate background would be calculus and a course in introductory linear algebra.

MAT 482 | PARTIAL DIFFERENTIAL EQUATIONS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Introduction to partial differential equations and their applications. Topics include separation of variables; the heat, wave and Laplace equations; boundary-value problems; Fourier series. Some time will be spent on physical applications and non-homogeneous or time-dependent boundary conditions.

MAT 304 or MAT 335 or MAT 437 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 484 | MATHEMATICAL MODELING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Modeling of real world problems using mathematical methods. Includes a theory of modeling and a study of specific models, selected from deterministic, stochastic, continuous, and discrete models. Appropriate background would be a course in introductory linear algebra. (CROSS-LISTED WITH MAT 384.)

MAT 485 | NUMERICAL ANALYSIS I | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Use of a digital computer for numerical computation. Error analysis, Gaussian elimination and Gauss-Seidel method, solutions of linear and nonlinear equations, function evaluation, cubic splines, approximation of integrals and derivatives, Monte Carlo methods. Appropriate background would be calculus, introductory linear algebra, and a programming course. (CROSS-LISTED WITH MAT 385.)

MAT 486 | NUMERICAL ANALYSIS II | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)

MAT 485 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 487 | OPERATIONS RESEARCH: LINEAR PROGRAMMING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Linear programming, integer programming and LP relaxation, the duality theorem, simplex algorithm, interior point methods, applications to industrial engineering. Appropriate background would be introductory linear algebra and computer programming. (CROSS-LISTED AS MAT 387)

MAT 488 | OPERATIONS RESEARCH: OPTIMIZATION THEORY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Convex optimization, quadratic optimization problems, Lagrange multipliers and generalization to inequality constraints, alternating direction method of multipliers (ADMM), unconstrained minimization, applications to industrial engineering including machine learning. Appropriate background would be introductory linear algebra and computer programming. (CROSS-LISTED AS MAT 388)

MAT 489 | QUEUING THEORY WITH APPLICATIONS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Discrete and continuous-time Markov chain models, Queuing systems, and topics from renewal and reliability theory.

MAT 453 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 491 | DATA MINING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will provide students with methodologies of mining varied data and discovering knowledge from data. Students will learn classification, regularized regression, smooth spline, neural network, decision tree, SVM, PCA and clustering. The lectures will be complemented with hands-on experience with data mining software R to allow students develop some practical skills.

MAT 452 and MAT 456 are prerequisites for this class.

MAT 494 | GRAPH THEORY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course studies graph theory and its applications. Topics include trees, Eulerian circuits, Hamiltonian cycles, matchings, graph coloring problems, random graphs, and random walks on graphs. Appropriate background would be a course in introductory linear algebra.

MAT 495 | DYNAMIC PROGRAMMING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)

MAT 496 | GAME THEORY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
The minimax theorem for two-person, zero-sum games. Two-person general-sum games and noncooperative person games; Nash equilibrium.
MAT 498 | PROBLEM SOLVING IN MATHEMATICS | 2-4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Course topics: problem solving in various topics from GRE Subject examination in Mathematics. Consult course schedule for current offerings. Course may be repeated for credit when title and content change. (2 quarter hours)

MAT 512 | APPLIED TIME SERIES AND FORECASTING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Development of the Box-Jenkins methodology for the identification, estimation and fitting of ARIMA, and transfer-function stochastic models for the purpose of analyzing and forecasting stationary, non-stationary, and seasonal time series data. The course emphasizes practical time series data analysis, using computer packages and includes applications to economic, business and industrial forecasting.

MAT 441 or MAT 448 or MAT 453 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 515 | FINANCIAL MODELING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
The course expounds on probabilistic methods used in risk-based capital allocation and risk management. Topics include Gaussian and Non-Gaussian modeling, including modeling of volatility and correlations, copulas, Extreme Value Theory, VaR, TVaR and applications to portfolio allocation and stress testing.

MAT 456 and MAT 512 are prerequisites for this course.

MAT 526 | SAMPLING THEORY AND METHODS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)

MAT 453 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 528 | DESIGN AND ANALYSIS OF EXPERIMENTS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Single-factor fixed, random and mixed designs with and without restrictions on randomizations, including randomized block designs, Latin & Graeco-Latin squares. Factorial and fractional factorial experiments. Nested and split-plot designs. Confounding and response surface methodology.

MAT 453 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 595 | GRADUATE THESIS RESEARCH | 2-4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
A thesis option is available to graduate students who wish to pursue an extended independent project. Students would work under the guidance of a faculty mentor. Course may be repeated for credit. (2 quarter hours)

MAT 596 | ADVANCED TOPICS IN ALGEBRA | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Consult course schedule for current offerings. Course may be repeated for credit when title and content change.

MAT 597 | ADVANCED TOPICS IN ANALYSIS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Consult course schedule for current offerings. Course may be repeated for credit when title and content change.

MAT 598 | ADVANCED PROBLEM SOLVING IN ALGEBRA AND ANALYSIS | 2-4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Course topics: problem solving in various topics in Algebra and Analysis. Consult course schedule for current offerings. Course may be repeated for credit when title and content change. (2 quarter hours)

MAT 599 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 1-4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Offered by arrangement. Approval by department chair required. (variable credit)

MAT 600 | EXPERIMENTATION, CONJECTURE, AND REASONING WITH NUMBERS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will focus on furthering the participants’ number sense together with providing them with opportunities to: 1) Use and discuss the roles of experimentation, conjecture, and logical reasoning in developing mathematical understanding; 2) Appreciate the value of algebraic notation in problem solving by comparing solutions done both with and without algebra; 3) Engage in mathematical speaking and writing with discussion of (a) how to evaluate accurate vs. inaccurate statements, (b) what level of detail is appropriate in an answer given the point of the problem, (c) what ways of presenting solutions are suitable for various audiences; 4) Discuss the distinction between “how” a mathematical strategy works and “why” it works, and articulate the pedagogical value of knowing the “why.

MAT 605 | GEOMETRY FOR MIDDLE SCHOOL TEACHERS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
An introduction to geometry designed to engage students in the construction, description, and analysis of geometric objects, including three-dimensional objects. These activities will be used to generate questions and hypotheses that will lead to more abstract concepts and general arguments. Emphasis throughout will be on informal reasoning, experimental methods, inductive as well as deductive arguments, local organization, and the development of mathematical thinking. Appropriate technology will be used to explore hypotheses and support mathematical reasoning. Topics will include: polyhedra, and their nets, cross sections, and projections; triangles, quadrilaterals, and polygons; congruence and similarity; the Pythagorean theorem; perimeter, area, and volume; circles and spheres, symmetry and transformations; and tessellations. The course will also include discussion and reflection on learning mathematics.

MAT 608 | INVESTIGATING HIGH SCHOOL MATHEMATICS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Drawing on high school mathematics content, students will identify and explore the mathematical themes that might form the content of a 12th grade capstone course. In the process, they will reflect on and discuss the major issues encountered when learning the mathematical concepts that form the basis of high school mathematics, identify ways to collaborate in order to improve mathematics learning, and identify ways in which they can take leadership roles in mathematics teaching and learning.

MAT 609 | TEACHING AND LEARNING SECONDARY SCHOOL MATHEMATICS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Theories, methods, materials and techniques for teaching and learning mathematics in secondary and upper elementary schools. This course is required for students seeking secondary math certification.

MAT 610 | CALCULUS I | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
A review of topics from precalculus using algebraic, numerical, and graphical perspectives including linear functions, exponential functions, logarithms, polynomials, and trigonometric functions. An introduction to limits, continuity, the derivative, and basic properties of real numbers.
MAT 611 | CALCULUS II | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
A continuation of Math 610. The derivative and its applications, including optimization and related rates. Introduction to integration and numerical algorithms using graphing calculators. Offered every Winter.

MAT 620 | GEOMETRY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Axiom systems, types of reasoning used in proofs, Euclidean geometry results with concentration on triangles and circles, introduction to non-Euclidean geometry, and introduction to geometry classroom software. Offered every other winter.

MAT 621 | TRANSITION TO ALGEBRA FOR MIDDLE SCHOOL TEACHERS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
In this course, teachers will begin the study of algebra as a generalization of number and operation, building on their new understanding of those topics from previous courses. Careful attention to reasoning about the use of variables and understanding the logic behind solving equations and inequalities will aid in the transition to a full treatment of high school algebra. Teachers will be introduced to high quality resources that will help them create effective algebraic learning environments for their students.

MAT 622 | ALGEBRA FOR MIDDLE SCHOOL TEACHERS I | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is the first of a 3-quarter sequence designed in part to prepare elementary and middle grade teachers to teach an algebra class to qualified 8th grade students in their schools. It is based on a vision of mathematics instruction throughout the grades that continuously builds students' algebraic skills and thinking. This first course in the sequence emphasizes problem-solving as an entry point into algebra for mathematics learners. Students see algebra as an active process for solving problems and as arising naturally as a way to generalize the laws of arithmetic, analyze patterns, and describe relationships in tables, graphs, and equations. In addition, students review and examine foundational concepts in algebra (variables, equations, relations, graphs, slopes of lines, and equations of lines) and are introduced to research on the development of algebraic thinking in middle grade students.

MAT 623 | ALGEBRA FOR MIDDLE SCHOOL TEACHERS II | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
The second course in the algebra sequence builds on the first and maintains emphases on problem-solving, deeper understanding of the central concepts of beginning algebra, and awareness of difficulties students have when encountering the subject for the first time. Topics include systems of linear equations, solving linear inequalities and systems of inequalities, absolute values equations and inequalities, and quadratic functions.

MAT 624 | FUNCTIONS AND MODELING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Advanced concepts in beginning algebra provide a basis for a deeper treatment of the relationship between functions and data, and lay the groundwork for the development of polynomial, exponential, and logarithmic models. The course will integrate the use of technology such as graphing calculators and spreadsheets.

MAT 631 | HISTORY OF MATHEMATICS THROUGH PROBLEM SOLVING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Topics include the development of calculus, probability theory, number theory, non-Euclidean geometry, and set theory. Offered every Winter.

MAT 640 | MULTIVARIABLE CALCULUS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Functions of several variables, vectors, dot products and cross products, partial differentiation, directional derivatives, optimization, Lagrange multipliers, polar and spherical coordinates. Use of software packages to illustrate three dimensional objects. Offered Fall 2017 and every Summer as of 2018.

MAT 660, MMT 401 and MAT 605 are a prerequisite for this course.

MAT 660 | MULTIVARIABLE CALCULUS II | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
A continuation of Math 610. Techniques of symbolic and numerical integration with geometric applications. Sequences, series, and power series. Offered every Spring.

MAT 681 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 682 | ALGEBRA FOR MIDDLE SCHOOL TEACHERS II | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
The second course in the algebra sequence builds on the first and maintains emphases on problem-solving, deeper understanding of the central concepts of beginning algebra, and awareness of difficulties students have when encountering the subject for the first time. Topics include systems of linear equations, solving linear inequalities and systems of inequalities, absolute values equations and inequalities, and quadratic functions.

MAT 683 | FUNCTIONS AND MODELING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Advanced concepts in beginning algebra provide a basis for a deeper treatment of the relationship between functions and data, and lay the groundwork for the development of polynomial, exponential, and logarithmic models. The course will integrate the use of technology such as graphing calculators and spreadsheets.

MAT 684 | HISTORY OF MATHEMATICS THROUGH PROBLEM SOLVING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Topics include the development of calculus, probability theory, number theory, non-Euclidean geometry, and set theory. Offered every Winter.

MAT 685 and MAT 670 are co-requisites for this class.

MAT 686 | HISTORY AND CULTURAL FOUNDATIONS OF MATHEMATICS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is a cross-cultural survey of the history of mathematics, with emphasis placed on the development of concepts encountered by students in elementary and middle school. The course will also serve as a capstone for the program in that it will include references to content from all the earlier courses and will explicitly ask teachers to make connections across the middle school mathematics curriculum. The students will complete a small group research project in which they choose a mathematical concept from the program and use it as a focal point to study the development of mathematical ideas across time and across cultures.

MAT 687 | MATHEMATICS TEACHERS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
A continuation of Math 671. Techniques of symbolic and numerical integration with geometric applications. Sequences, series, and power series. Offered every Spring.

MAT 688 is a co-requisite for this class.

MAT 689 | MULTIVARIABLE CALCULUS WITH LINEAR ALGEBRA FOR MATHEMATICS TEACHERS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Multiple integration, line and surface integrals, change of variable in multiple integration, Green's and Stokes' theorems. An introduction to matrices, determinants, linear transformations, and eigenvalues.

MAT 690 and MAT 671 are prerequisites for this course.

MAT 691 | MULTIVARIABLE CALCULUS II | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Double and iterated integrals, area by double integrals, triple integrals, triple integrals in cylindrical and spherical coordinates, change of variable in multiple integration, line and surface integrals, theorems of Green, Stokes, and Gauss. Offered Winter 2018 and every Fall as of 2018.

MAT 692 is a prerequisite for this class.
MAT 643 | IDEAS OF CALCULUS IN THE MIDDLE SCHOOL CURRICULUM | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
The course will introduce students to the "big ideas" of Calculus including limits, derivatives, and integrals. The course will emphasize how the mathematics in the middle school curriculum can lay a foundation for the study of continuous mathematics and to the role that Calculus plays in the sciences. In particular, direct connections to the topics of this course and the middle school curriculum will be made by studying activities from curriculum materials currently used in CPS that are relevant to the topics of Calculus. Trigonometry from the perspective of the middle school classroom will be used as the launching point for introducing the major ideas of the course. The course will also give the students the opportunity to understand the interplay between the concepts and tools they learned in the MMT 415-417 sequence and Calculus.

MAT 644 | DIFFERENTIAL EQUATIONS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course will continue the study of differential equations (DEs) begun in MAT 618. Topics include solutions and applications of linear DEs, second order DEs with constant coefficients; linear systems: eigenvalues and eigenvectors of matrices, phase portraits and explicit solutions; nonlinear planar systems: linearization and stability analysis. Offered every other Spring as of 2018.

MAT 618 and MAT 672 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 649 | DATA ANALYSIS AND PROBABILITY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course covers the fundamental concepts of probability that are part of the middle school curriculum and recent research findings on student learning of probability and classroom implications of this research. In addition, it covers the principles of graphically displaying, collecting and analyzing data with and without the use of technology. Topics will include measures of central tendency and dispersion, graphical representations of data (histograms, boxplots, bar charts, pie charts, and line graphs), and the design of experiments and simulations.

MAT 650 | PROBABILITY & STATISTICS FOR MATHEMATICS TEACHERS I | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Combinatorics, sets, probability, random variables, distribution and density functions, multiple integration, standard probability laws, jointly distributed random variables. Use of graphing calculators, applets, and software packages to illustrate concepts. Offered every Winter.

MAT 640 and MAT 660 are prerequisites for this course.

MAT 651 | PROBABILITY & STATISTICS FOR MATHEMATICS TEACHERS II | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Central limit theorem, point and interval estimation of parameters, hypothesis testing, least squares and regression. Offered every Spring.

MAT 650 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 660 | DISCRETE MATHEMATICS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Logic and techniques of proof, mathematical induction, sets and functions, relations, introduction to number theory and combinatorics. Offered every Fall.

MAT 665 | DISCRETE STRUCTURES WITH A TRANSITION TO HIGHER MATHEMATICS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
A transition to advanced courses having a greater emphasis on proof and abstraction. Techniques of proof, logic, sets and functions, number theory, recursive sequences, mathematical induction, and an introduction to combinatorics.

MAT 670 | ABSTRACT ALGEBRA I | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Examines the integers, prime numbers, the Euclidean algorithm, the uniqueness of prime factorization, equivalence relations, rational numbers, real numbers, and complex numbers. Provides examples of groups, rings, and fields and also covers the Fundamental Theorem of Algebra and roots of polynomials of small degree. Offered every other Winter as of 2018.

MAT 660 is a prerequisite for this course.

MAT 671 | ABSTRACT ALGEBRA II | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Examines modular arithmetic, the irreducibility of polynomials over different fields, criteria for solvability by radicals, rational values of trigonometric functions, difference functions, partial fraction decomposition, and geometric constructions with ruler and compass. Along with Math 670, this course provides the theoretical foundation for many topics covered in high school mathematics courses. Offered every other Spring as of 2018.

MAT 670 is a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 672 | LINEAR ALGEBRA | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Vector spaces, linear combinations, spanning sets, linear independence, basis, dimension, systems of linear equations, matrices, linear transformation, eigenvalues and eigenvectors. Offered every other Spring as of 2019.

MAT 660 is a prerequisite for this course.

MAT 680 | REAL ANALYSIS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Construction and properties of the real numbers. Proofs of essential results from calculus such as the intermediate value theorem, extreme value theorem, mean value theorem, existence of the Riemann integral, and Taylor’s theorem. Offered every Fall.

MAT 618 and MAT 660 are a prerequisite for this class.

MAT 699 | TOPICS IN MATHEMATICS FOR TEACHERS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Diverse topics in mathematical modeling or mathematical appreciation germane to the secondary school classroom.
Mathematics for Middle School Teaching (MMT)

MMT 401 | FOUNDATIONS OF MATHEMATICAL THINKING AND LEARNING IN THE MIDDLE SCHOOL | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course is designed to help participants construct meaningful connections between being a learner of mathematics (i.e., a person who can solve problems, reason mathematically, communicate findings and thinking, and make connections) and being a teacher of mathematics (i.e., a person who can help others understand, use, and apply mathematical ideas). The course will begin the process (which will be continued throughout the remainder of the Master of Arts in Middle School mathematics Education program) of having students explore the interplay between narratives describing their own classroom experiences as well as literature and research about others’ experiences in order to analyze the impact of developmental and interpersonal experiences on the learning and teaching of mathematics.

MMT 410 | THE DEVELOPMENT OF MIDDLE SCHOOL MATHEMATICS LEARNERS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Critical to the success of middle school mathematics learners, is their teachers’ understanding of the multiple perspectives that research has taught us, as educators, about how people learn. In this course, participants will engage with the history and evolution of how the fields of educational psychology, cognitive science, applied developmental psychology, and mathematics education have contributed to a modern understanding of what constitutes effective practice for middle school mathematics teaching. Major theoretical positions and their seminal architects will be highlighted, examined and discussed. A particular emphasis will be put on each position’s impact on curriculum development and classroom pedagogy for middle school mathematics.

MMT 420 | TEACHING, LEARNING, AND ASSESSMENT OF MIDDLE SCHOOL MATHEMATICS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course will examine, in the context of classroom practice, the following themes: 1) How students can learn mathematics with conceptual understanding; 2) How to teach mathematics so that students learn with understanding; 3) How to assess students’ mathematical knowledge to inform instruction and determine their growth; 4) The nature and content of innovative curriculum projects designed to teach mathematics for conceptual understanding.

MMT 430 | APPLIED PROJECT IN MATHEMATICS EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course will span the three quarters of the second academic year of the program and will be partnered with the three content-focused courses offered during the second year. Participants will be introduced to the field of educational inquiry through a study of various designs and methods of doing educational research. In addition, this course will help participants consider current issues in mathematics education in relationship to their own teaching and learning of mathematics and what it means to transfer the mathematics learned in other courses into one’s practice as a math teacher. They will identify concrete changes they want to implement in their teaching during the years following their completion of the program based on the new content and ideas to which they have been exposed. As part of the course, the teachers will design an action research project during the first quarter, implement the project during the second quarter, and analyze the data during the third quarter.

Media Studies (MCS)

MCS 207 | HISTORY OF CINEMA I, 1890-1945 | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course examines the history of cinema as one of the most influential cultural forms of the 20th Century. We will study the aesthetic and technological developments of cinema during its first 50 years, as well as examine the social and economic factors shaping its history. Initially influenced by other art forms (theater, literature, painting) filmmaking quickly acquired its own formal system, language, and traditions. We will trace the changing styles, techniques, content, and methods of filmmaking as an art form, as popular culture, and as an industry. We will consider how cinema is bound to its social context via audience relations, economics, technology, and ideology. The limited scope of this course will cover primarily feature-length, narratives films as the dominant mode of filmmaking, although we will also look at the development of documentary and experimental filmmaking. The class will consist of lectures, screenings, and discussions.

MCS 208 | HISTORY OF CINEMA II, 1945-1975 | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course covers the continued rise and development of cinema from 1945 to 1975. The course will have a dual focus, looking simultaneously at both the American studio system and international cinemas. The lectures, screenings, and discussions place equal emphasis on charting the development of cinematic techniques as well as examining the growth of specific national cinemas. In addition, the course surveys international stylistic trends in narrative, documentary, and avant-garde film. Students will acquire a broad understanding of the institutional, social, technological, and aesthetic forces that have shaped the development of cinema during the mid-twentieth century.

MCS 209 | HISTORY OF CINEMA III, 1975-PRESENT | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This final course in the film history sequence is designed to introduce students to a sense of modern film history and the multiple permutations of cinema around the modern film history and the multiple permutations of cinema around the globe. It presents film history from a global perspective, concentrating primarily on the development of new national and transnational cinemas. The course continues to chart the development of the American studios since the mid-1970s while examining the effects of media consolidation and convergence. Moreover, the course seeks to examine how global cinemas have reacted to and dealt with the formal influence and economic domination of Hollywood filmmaking on international audiences. Class lectures, screenings, and discussions will consider how cinema has changed from a primarily national phenomenon to a transnational form of communication in the 21st century.

MCS 231 | INTRODUCTION TO DOCUMENTARY STUDIES | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course examines the rise and growth of documentary forms, including audio, film, television, photography, literary journalism and ethnography. Students will study representative works from each documentary approach and learn to analyze the techniques of observation and representation at use in these pieces. Students will become familiar with major theoretical constructions of documentary and be able to use these analytical tools to critique documentary forms. Lab for film viewing required.
MCS 251 | SPACES OF CINEMA IN ROME | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course examines the history and heritage of Italian cinema through an analysis of critically acclaimed films produced in Rome. Topics of focus include the comparison of Italian and Hollywood constructions of historical settings, and the cinematic organization of visual space. The course features visits to the Roman sites where films examined in the course were produced. The course’s goal is the development of an understanding of filmmakers’ artistic choices and the expectations that they set up for their audiences through setting. Offered in conjunction with the Rome Film Studies Program.

MCS 252 | CONTEMPORARY ITALIAN CULTURE THROUGH FILM | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course provides an exploration of contemporary Italian culture through the medium of cinema. The course examines how cinema addresses complex social and political concerns in Italy. Topics and themes include health care; the transformation of the structure of the family; immigration and emigration; the perennial problem of organized crime; and the difficulties faced by the younger generations in their attempt to integrate into society. Italian film industry professionals and cultural historians will provide context and perspective on contemporary social issues facing Italy. Offered in conjunction with the Rome Film Studies Program.

MCS 254 | IMAGINING ITALY: CINEMA AS A COLLECTIVE NARRATIVE OF THE ITALIAN PEOPLE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is designed as an introduction to Modern Italian Society and Culture through Cinema, with a specific focus on how movies both represented and influenced fundamental facets of Italian mentality, culture, and social structures. More specifically we will focus on some crucial events and phenomena in Italian History and in current days, including the following: Fascism and Anti-Fascism; the postwar period, the Reconstruction, and the Republican Constitution; the economic boom and the Italian socio-cultural transformation in the 1960s; the North-South Divide in Italy; emigration and immigration; worker and student protests between 1968 and 1977; the origins and developments of organized crime in Italy including the Mafia.

MCS 260 | TRANSMEDIA STORYTELLING: BUILDING A NARRATIVE WORLD | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Transmedia storytelling, or the distribution of narrative content across multiple technologies and media, is rapidly becoming a common trend in contemporary media making. Whether it’s television series sharing content with video games, films’ narratives continued (or begun) in graphic novels, or media systems in which no one medium takes precedence in telling the story, transmediation can take many forms. This class will introduce the concept of transmedia from a media studies viewpoint, will examine transmedia’s history, contemporary usage, and creation, and will have students work together to construct a transmediated narrative.

MCS 265 | FAITH, REDEMPTION, & TRANSCENDENCE IN INTERNATIONAL CINEMA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Which methods has cinema developed to convey the spiritual phenomena of faith, redemption and transcendence? The course investigates this question through the comparative study of international cinema. While it focuses primarily upon Christianity, it also provides students with the tools to make meaningful connections with other religions and the cinematic traditions that inform them. Among the films and filmmakers to be examined are Paul Schrader FIRST REFORMED (Paul Schrader, USA, 2018), SILENCE (Martin Scorsese, USA, 2017), WINTER LIGHT (Ingmar Bergman, Sweden, 1961), DIARY OF A COUNTRY PRIEST (Robert Bresson, France, 1951), EUROPA '51 (Roberto Rossellini, Italy, 1952), IDA (Pawel Pawlikoski, Poland, 2013), and THE PASSION OF JOAN OF ARC (Carl Theodor Dreyer, Denmark, 1929).

MCS 271 | MEDIA AND CULTURAL STUDIES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course provides students with a theoretical and methodological background in the interdisciplinary field of cultural studies, which considers media and culture as sites for the construction and contestation of race, class, gender, ethnicity, sexuality and nation. The course provides a foundation in critical cultural studies, ideology critique, critical race and gender studies, transnational media studies and active audience studies. Formerly Introduction to Radio, Television and Film.

MCS 273 | STORYTELLING & STYLE IN CINEMA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Course covers basic concepts and terminology of film and video as forms of art and mass culture. This course covers the aesthetic elements that constitute film and video texts: plot structures, sets, costumes and makeup, acting, lighting, cinematography, editing, and sound. By performing extensive textual analyses, students learn how the interaction of these elements produces meaning. Students also gain basics of how these concepts are practiced in film production. After mastering the aesthetic concepts, students also examine their use in three different modes of film: fiction, documentary, and the avant-garde. (Formerly Film/Video Analysis)

MCS 274 | DIVERSITY AND INCLUSION IN CINEMA AND TELEVISION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will analyze the representations of aspects of identity including race, ethnicity, gender, sexuality, religion, social class, age, and ability in cinema and long-form television narrative. Rather than thinking of these aspects of identity as natural and fixed, this course will explore how identities are constructed and crafted through the cinema. In the context of theories of human identity and difference, students will view, read about, analyze and discuss movies and television series to understand the intersections and interactions of social and political identities and translate them into their media content production. The central question of the course is as follows: if one is dissatisfied by the current range of representational practices of identity offered by a dominant media industry, how can one challenge or disrupt the limitations of these practices through creative and responsible media production?
MCS 275 | COMICS STUDIES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Comics are a rich, vibrant medium whose history predates that of movies, television and radio. While many cultural critics have viewed comics as simplistic and childish over the years, the combination of text and images that comics offers literary and artistic possibilities not found in any other medium. This course examines the medium of comics by exploring its history and theory, along with issues of representation, form, aesthetics, genre, biography and autobiography. Along the way, we will engage with such themes as herosism, trauma, identity and youth, among others. Students will read scholarly work on the medium of comics, as well as a wide range of comic books, comic stripS, graphic novels and webcomics.

MCS 286 | RADIO PRACTICUM | 1-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Students who already actively participate at DePaul’s radio station have the opportunity, depending on the station’s needs, to produce on-air announcements, specialized broadcasts (weather, sports, University-based topics), newscasts, and assist station managers with their day-to-day responsibilities for MCS credit. In addition to working at the radio station, students must successfully complete a short research project on an approved topic. (1 quarter hour)

MCS 290 | MEDIA & CINEMA STUDIES WORKSHOP (VARIABLE TOPICS) | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course allows students to sample a range of hands on, practical offerings in media and cinema studies that can enhance their knowledge and expertise. Two types of workshop topics are offered: research and production. Examples of Research Workshop topics can include film criticism, Survey Design, and Academic Writing Bootcamp. Examples of Production Workshop topics include non-linear editing with Final Cut Pro, Multimedia Design, and Video Camera Basics. Students may take a maximum of 4 credit hours of MCS 290 in the major, and a total of 8 credit hours. (2 quarter hours)

MCS 316 | SOUND AND VISION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course introduces students to the unique ways that photography and audio documentary can blend together. The course will combine documentary and experimental production to help students learn to create audio documentary and visual projects and to work in mixed-media contexts.

MCS 331 | TOPICS IN DOCUMENTARY STUDIES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A rotating topics course that could focus on specific historical era or specific group of texts or documentarians from across film, television, audio, writing, and photography. Courses like Feminism & Documentary, and Political Documentary fit under this heading.

MCS 339 | RADIO BROADCASTING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The overall objectives of this course are to familiarize students with the history and practices of commercial and college radio broadcasting and to afford students hands-on broadcasting opportunities at our state-of-the-art radio station. Numerous topics and challenges facing modern radio stations will be discussed, including deregulation, copyright law, and decency standards. It is expected that upon successful completion of this course that students will be prepared for advanced broadcasting and production courses and radio and television internships.

MCS 341 | TOPICS IN RADIO STUDIES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Subjects rotate among several historical and conceptual topics, such as Rock Radio, Talk Radio, Gender and Radio, Radio and American Culture, etc. Students will have the opportunity to build upon the foundations of radio that are explored in other radio courses. Radio topics courses are considered advanced study in the subject area; therefore, students are encouraged to complete MCS 339 or MCS 342 prior to taking a radio topics course.

MCS 342 | HISTORY OF TELEVISION & RADIO | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A history of radio, television, and cable that engages with elements such as programming, economics, industrial structures, audiences, government and industry policies, and social effects. The course includes viewing, analysis, and criticism of a wide variety of American programming.

MCS 343 | MEDIA ETHICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Entertainment and social media dominate popular culture today in a way that begins to completely define American culture. In what ways do entertainment media impact society? As creators of media, what special responsibilities do we have? And as creators of entertainment media how can we use these ethical theories in our daily practice? This course will examine the underlying ethical theories used when we try to arrive at ethical judgments about right and wrong. This course will concentrate on analyzing the impact of digital entertainment on an individual and society. The issue of balancing individual creativity vs. cultural impact, particularly on children, will be addressed. The course will culminate with the formulation of elements of an ethical code of conduct for every electronic (social) media, television professional and movie creator.

MCS 344 | THE SEXUAL REVOLUTION: HOLLYWOOD IN THE 1960s | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The late 1960s are often described as a time of “Sexual Revolution” in America, with loosening standards and attitudes about sex and sexual practices. But was this period as “liberated” as it has appeared to be? Who was liberated by these new attitudes, and from what? How do attitudes about sexuality in the 1960s compare to our attitudes now? This course uses the study of American cultural history to examine perspectives of sexuality in the 1960s, and it focuses upon the films that Hollywood produced to represent this “new” sexuality. In the process, the course examines shifting definitions of gender and sexuality with which American culture was contending during this revolutionary time.

MCS 348 | TOPICS IN FILM GENRE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course offers an historical examination of film genres, with a varying focus on one particular genre: film noir, musicals, melodrama, detective/gangster film, science fiction film, comedy, Western, animation, youth films. The course explores the relationship of genres to general social histories. Lab for film viewing required.

MCS 349 | TOPICS IN FILM STUDIES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Examination of a particular era of film history or national cinema, film movements, or moments in social history and their relationship to film production. Topics currently in rotation include Film Sound Studies, American Films of the 1970s, War and Film, feminist film, Psychoanalysis and Cinema, etc. Lab for film viewing required.
MCS 350 | TOPICS IN GLOBAL CINEMA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is designed as a critical study of global filmmakers and the issues surrounding cinema and its transnational circulation. The class will examine specific aspects of the growth and evolution of cinema and look at points of contact between different cultural discourses, national cinematic styles, genres, and reception. Artistic, social, political, and industrial issues will be examined to provide different models of cinematic creation and consumption. Recent topics have included Latin American Cinemas, Asian Cinemas, Transnational Cinema, New German Cinema, History of French Film, Contemporary Global Directors, etc. Lab for film viewing required.

MCS 351 | TOPICS IN TELEVISION STUDIES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course offers advanced study of television as a unique audio-visual culture with its own history and styles. This course presumes basic knowledge of television terms and methods of media analysis. Studies of a selected aspect of television history, television criticism, or national television are offered regularly. Recent topics have included Global Television, Reality TV, American TV of the 1950s, Television News, etc.

MCS 352 | TOPICS IN NEW MEDIA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course examines the effects of new and/or digital media on interpersonal communication, media industries, and/or media culture. Depending on the specific focus of this variable elective course, it might focus on economic, social, political, or aesthetic implications of new media, including the Internet, interactive games, and other new media technologies and applications.

MCS 353 | TOPICS IN MEDIA STUDIES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This is a rotating topics class for subjects that encompass a number of different media, including radio, television, film. Possible topics may include: Media and Politics, Contemporary News Media, Reception Studies, Popular Culture Studies, etc.

MCS 354 | TOPICS IN MEDIA AND MATERIAL CULTURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course offers a critical study of popular media's interface with cultural objects and environments. Depending upon the topic, the course might focus upon amusement parks, museum exhibitions, clothing and fashion culture, or wearable technologies.

MCS 355 | SEX IN THE BOX: U.S. TELEVISION, SEX, AND SEXUALITY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will examine the continued negotiation of sex and sexuality on American television. Whether through their structuring absence, head-on attendance, or mere subtle implication, sex and sexuality have been omnipresent within the medium since its proliferation in the late 1940s. Through lenses of TV, social history, and gender/sexuality criticism, this course will examine various ways in which sexual issues such as the marriage bed, female sexual agency, GLBT visibility, teen sex, and rape have made their ways onto and been pushed off of the small screen. It will also interrogate how these broad categories interact with TV's assumed social role, contemporary and historical notions of American values, and TV regulation.

MCS 358 | TOPICS IN COMICS STUDIES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This is a rotating topics class for subjects pertaining to the study of the comics in media including comic books, graphic novels, webcomics, and other forms of sequential art and graphic narrative.
MCS 364 | MONSTERS IN POPULAR CULTURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In this course, students will examine monsters, spooks, scares, and--above all--fear. Through informed viewing of television, film, radio, literature, and graphic novels, we will explore the evolution of some of the most well-known monsters, including vampires, zombies, and aliens, as well as less-known varieties, like the Golem, the cyborg, and even the human being. Screenings will be paired with discussion and class activities. The concept of the monster itself will be interrogated, and we will explore how the monster reflects humanity's fears as well as its desires. This is the one class that proves college is scary as hell.

MCS 365 | HORROR FILMS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Why do we willingly subject ourselves to films that seek to scare, shock and disgust us? What compels us to watch films with ghastly imagery, gory special effects and gruesome murders? Are horror film fans merely uncultured sadists who revel in watching others suffer on screen? Are there cathartic pleasures to be had in horror films that are actually beneficial to society? This course examines the horror film genre from a variety of perspectives - from the cultural implications of why certain images frighten us, to the technological factors involved in special effects advancements, to the moral panics arising from both 1930s monster movies and modern "torture-porn" cinema. We will trace the horror genre back to its roots in the silent film adaptations of such gothic novels as Frankenstein and Dr. Jekyll & Mr. Hyde, through the classical era of the 1930s/1940s and the Universal monster movies, into the new era of the 1970s (from big-budget and Oscar winning films like The Exorcist and The Omen, to the low-budget auteurist horror efforts like The Texas Chainsaw Massacre and Last House on the Left), and into the modern era of slashers, stalkers, remakes and reboots. [NOTE: This course will regularly examine films with extremely gory imagery that may be offensive and unpleasant to some students (...and if that's you, then you're definitely taking the wrong course!).] To quote the beginning of Frankenstein (1931): "We think it will thrill you. It may shock you. It might even horrify you. So, if any of you do not care to subject your nerves to such a strain, now's your chance to...well, we warned you!"

MCS 366 | COMMUNICATION, TECHNOLOGY AND SOCIETY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Survey of a variety of contemporary and historical issues related to the introduction and diffusion of communication technologies in society. Especially examines how new technologies, particularly the Internet, are transforming the communication landscape. Emphasis on issues of intellectual property, surveillance, privacy, regulation, message construction, and access will be central to this course.

MCS 367 | SPORTS FANDOM | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course introduces students to the study of fandom and participatory culture in relation to sports. It begins by asking "who are sports fans and why study them?" before moving on to consider questions of fan identity and belonging, consumerism and advertising, fan-team-industry relations, rivalries and anti-fandom, the intersections of sports and media fandom, and the relationship between sports, politics, and participatory culture. Throughout the class, we'll take an intersectional approach that considers the impact of gender, race, sexuality, class, nationality, and ability on the topics under discussion. Students will engage with the material through readings, screenings, and discussion but also through participant observation in sports fan subcultures both familiar and new to the student.

MCS 368 | MUSIC INDUSTRIES AND CULTURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course critically examines music as a form of cultural communication and as a media industry. Students learn about historical changes in the music business, contemporary issues that industry insiders negotiate, do-it-yourself alternatives to mainstream industry practices, and how music functions as a unique source for collective fandom.

MCS 369 | TIME TRAVEL ON TELEVISION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This class examines the common narrative device of "time travel" as it has been shown on television. We will look at the history of time travel on television, how time travel becomes a narrative device, and at the generic components of time travel narratives. Through careful readings of television episodes, we will study the influence of technology, politics, identity, the body and mediation on representations of time travel. Further, we shall examine these texts not just as glimpses of possible futures, but also as cultural critiques of issues in the present. Through screenings, daily written responses, and a final project, students will have the opportunity to explore the intricate nature of narratives about time travel.

MCS 370 | ADAPTATION: MOVIES/TV/NOVELS/COMICS/TOYS/VIDEO GAMES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course looks at adaptation as a cross-media phenomenon, which we will trace back to the origins of the film medium in the late nineteenth century. The desire to experience familiar stories and characters in different media forms transcends generations. Film critic Margaret Farrand Thorp wrote in 1939 of the "widespread human eagerness to experience the same story in as many media as possible." This impulse has only grown in recent years with the increasingly vital role of franchises in an era of media convergence, whereby narratives become replayed, extended and/or intertwined across films, television programs, video games, comic books and other forms. The course will begin with the traditional adaptive process of turning novels into film, the theoretical concerns surrounding fidelity and medium-specificity, and the critical debates to do with adaptation and authenticity. We will look at the classical era of Hollywood in the 1930s through 1950s, followed by comparisons of graphic novels to their film versions. The more problematic process of adapting such properties as board games, toy lines and video games is explored in later weeks, as are the implications for the adaptive process created by the prolific nature of digital special effects. We will go beyond narrative and aesthetic analysis in many weeks to consider the industrial implications of adaptations, as well as what media theory can offer us in studying how and why texts are adapted from one medium to another.

MCS 371 | WRITING TELEVISION CRITICISM | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course offers an introduction to the aesthetic, rhetorical, and cultural criticism of English-language television via analyses of a contemporary, rotating television series. In this course, students will be exposed to different types of television criticism. Through close readings of television criticism as well as writing about television criticism, students will be encouraged to develop a critical voice of their own. Students will engage with different styles of criticism through readings, analysis, peer-reviews, and writing their own criticisms. Class includes a screening time. Projects include written work, digital profiles, and engagement with contemporary theories of television and media.
MCS 372 | DIGITAL CULTURE AND NEW MEDIA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course considers the cultural ramifications of new media in shaping life experiences and meaning. As interactive digital media technologies expand opportunities for social networking, text and instant messaging, file sharing, collaborative authoring, microblogging, podcasting and mobile communication, this course asks how these new technologies impact identity formation, creative participation and concepts of public culture. This course will focus on some of the major themes that have engaged new media scholarship and thinking — convergence and participatory culture, identity and humanity, technology and literacy. The course will include hands-on approaches to media criticism and culture.

MCS 373 | AUDIO DOCUMENTARY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course uses hands-on projects so that students can explore the steps in the process of creating an audio documentary. Through practical application students consider questions that surround the interpretation of cultural experience. Additionally, students analyze a variety of approaches to audio documentary in an effort to understand better this significant form of storytelling.

MCS 375 | LATINO/A TELEVISION AND MEDIA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Drawing from Latin American and U.S. television studies, this course explores the political, industrial and cultural dynamics that shape televisual representations in Latin American television and/or Spanish language Television in the US. More specifically, Spanish-language television and media will be examined from interdisciplinary frameworks, which include the cultural analysis of televiral modes, national and international regulations of media production and distribution, histories of production, and ethnographies of viewing.

MCS 376 | LATIN AMERICAN CINEMA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course examines the production, distribution and impact of cinema in the Latin American context. Transnational relations with other industries, such as Hollywood and the European film context will be considered. We will investigate how social, economic and political forces have shaped or are presently influencing and transforming national cinemas. Questions of identity and cultural difference, particularly in relation to immigration, diasporas, transnationalism, youth culture, class, gender, sexuality, race and ethnicity are central to the discussions. We will consider the diversity of styles and topics that are now redefining the cinema of the region.

MCS 378 | SEINFELD | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
When Seinfeld aired on NBC in 1989, it was panned as "sophomoric talk radio" and "mildly amusing." Even comedian Roseanne Barr, whose sitcom ran contemporaneously with Seinfeld, found the show about four Manhattanites rather pretentious: "They think they're doing Samuel Beckett instead of a sitcom," she asserted. However, by the end of its run (1998), Seinfeld was praised as "an authentic American comedy of manners" and "the defining sitcom of our age." This term, we will explore the series from its early shaky period-when its own studio executives considered it "too New York, too Jewish"-to its news-making series finale. We will also look at the show’s extraordinary and profitable afterlife via syndication, Curb your Enthusiasm (2000-), Jerry Seinfeld’s web series (2012-), and Twitter accounts like @SeinfeldToday. Finally, so that students will understand that Seinfeld-like all media texts—is a product of the time period (and industry) in which it was created, we will place the series in its historical and cultural contexts; for the same reason, students will be introduced to several critical and theoretical perspectives to the show.

MCS 379 | SPIKE LEE AND QUENTIN TARANTINO | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
For more than 15 years, filmmakers Spike Lee and Quentin Tarantino have feuded publicly over the use of the N-word in Tarantino’s films. "Quentin is infatuated with that word," Lee complains. "What does he want to be made-an honorary black man?" Without missing a beat, Tarantino strikes back: "As a writer, I demand the right to write any character in the world that I want to write. And to say that I can’t do that because I’m white [...] is racist." Based on such exchanges, it might seem odd to pair Lee and Tarantino in a college film course. But actually, the ongoing animosity between the directors only serves to draw them closer, and the two have more in common than perhaps they will admit (even Netflix and Amazon Prime couple the directors’ films for their users). With that in mind, we will juxtapose nine feature-length works of Lee and Tarantino, considering specifically the directors’ auteur statuses, depiction of heists, attraction to the abject, and (re)visions of genres and gender. Further, on their own, students will explore works by Tarantino and Lee not screened in-class so that they may deepen their understanding of the directors’ styles, intents, politics, etc.

MCS 383 | TALKING ABOUT FILM: THEORY & CRITICISM | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is to familiarize students with a wide range of disciplines (film, art history, philosophy, psychology, etc.) and how these ideas both inflected the development of classical film theories as well as the evolution of cinema. Moreover, the scope of the course seeks to examine the overall process whereby theoretical discourse develops historically.

MCS 385 | SEMIOTICS, STORYTELLING, & FILM FORM | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will provide an in-depth exploration of how filmmakers create various types of meaning through film form and style. Methods of analysis will include semiotics (the analysis of signs and symbols that produce meaning), genre studies, and celebrity studies. We will pay specific attention to how meaning emerges from in-vogue or director-specific stylistic choices (for example, Spike Lee’s dolly shot, bullet time post-Matrix, and the popularity of still photography in film of the late 1960s) and new technologies that emerge at various times (for example, special effects that allow for the production of different images, and advances in control over layered sound that change aural impact).
MCS 386 | AUDIO PRODUCTION FOR RADIO AND THE WEB | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Students in this course will record, edit, and produce various dynamic audio pieces including podcasts, documentaries, commercials, and more. Though most pre-production work will be done at the studios of Radio DePaul, it may be possible for some students to complete their productions in a DePaul lab or at home. While experience is not required, an affinity for sound-only entertainment and information content will benefit students.

MCS 389 | TOPICS IN MEDIA PRODUCTION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is a rotating topic course in areas of media production and may include classes such as Podcasting, Advanced Radio Production, Advanced Audio Documentary, Radio News, Multimedia Production, etc.

MCS 501 | FILM AND MEDIA THEORY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will serve as a foundation for students in theories of film, television, and new media. An engagement with areas such as formal analysis, television and film spectatorship, authorship, television flow, and media specificity will provide both a brief historical framework for these disciplines, as well as a survey of major texts. Readings will include scholars/theorists such as Sergei Eisenstein, David Bordwell, Laura Mulvey, Horace Newcomb, Raymond Williams, Nick Browne, and Henry Jenkins. Formerly MCS 501 Introduction to Media Studies. Status as a College of Communication graduate student or Experience Design student or department consent is a prerequisite for this class.

MCS 502 | MEDIA AND CULTURAL STUDIES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course provides students with a theoretical and methodological background in the interdisciplinary field of cultural studies, which considers media and culture as sites for the construction and contestant of race, class, gender, ethnicity, sexuality and nation. The course provides a foundation in critical cultural studies, ideology critique, critical race and gender studies, transnational media studies and active audience studies. Status as a College of Communication Graduate student or MFA Cinema student or Experience Design student or department consent is a prerequisite to this class.

MCS 503 | CRITICAL ANALYSIS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will provide students with an advanced background in a wide range of methods used in media studies. The methods taught in this course may be applied to the study of film, television, print media, new media, social media, and their related paratexts and audiences. Some of the critical approaches to be covered include: Discourse analysis; Historiography; Political Economy; Sociological Analysis. Students will also learn how to produce media criticism in a range of formats, from traditional essays to short articles to video essays and more. Status as a College of Communication Graduate Student or department consent is a prerequisite for this class.

MCS 504 | HISTORIOGRAPHY AND RESEARCH | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will offer critical perspectives and methods to film and media history and research. Areas of exploration will include how popular history and academic historiography interact, the way certain subjects and facts are emphasized over others, the different forms used to represent historical knowledge, and questions of history and memory. In addition to the assumptions, methods, and purposes of film/media histories, the course will also ask crucial questions regarding the nature of inquiry and the status of data and evidence. Students will learn how to address a specific research question through a variety of methodologies in a cogent and comprehensive manner. Students will also develop competency in writing a research proposal and using research tools such as Endnote and online journal databases. Status as a College of Communication Graduate Student or department consent is a prerequisite for this class.

MCS 523 | TOPICS IN GLOBAL FILM & MEDIA | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course surveys a number of frameworks for understanding the global dynamics that constitute particular media cultures around the world. We will examine historical perspectives and debates concerning the processes of globalization and the media's constitutive role in impacting our conceptions of space and time across local, national and transnational terrains. Students will interrogate how the actions of nation states, civil society and transnational corporations impact media industries and ask how media representations are contested across registers of nation, region, citizenship, class, religion, labor, gender, Diaspora, race, migration and ethnicity.
Status as a College of Communication Graduate Student or department consent is a prerequisite for this class.

MCS 530 | NEW MEDIA AND CULTURE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This seminar considers the cultural ramifications of new media in shaping life experience and opportunity. As interactive digital media technologies expand opportunities for social networking, text and instant messaging, file sharing, collaborative authoring, blogging, podcasting and mobile communication, this seminar asks how these new technologies impact identity formation, creative participation and concepts of public culture. Issues of concern include race, gender, class, sexuality, cultural citizenship, fandom, subcultures and democratic participation.
Status as a College of Communication Graduate student or Experience
Design student or department consent is a prerequisite for this class.

This seminar examines the production, distribution and impact of cinema and media in the Latin American context. We will view a range of works from major and minor industries and investigate how social, and political forces have shaped or are presently influencing and transforming national cinemas and their industries. Questions of identity and cultural difference, particularly in relation to immigration, diasporas, transnationalism, youth culture, class, gender, sexuality, race and ethnicity are central to the discussions. We will consider the diversity of styles and topics as much as the discursive and theoretical frameworks that in the past defined, or those that are now redefining, the cinema and media of the region.
Status as a College of Communication Graduate Student or department consent is a prerequisite for this class.

MCS 541 | AUDIO DOCUMENTARY | 4 quarter hours

Co-requisite for this course is MGE 481. In this course the students will: 1.
MGE 441 and MGE 451 are prerequisites for this class.

MGE 473 | THE TEACHING OF SOCIAL STUDIES IN THE MIDDLE GRADES | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
In this course, candidates examine the nature and purpose of social studies curriculum and teaching practices in the middle grades. The course focuses on developing thoughtful, informed responses to central questions about the purposes of social studies teaching, the social studies content that is meaningful for young adolescents, and instructional strategies that both align with the core purposes and support and engage all students in learning social studies. All of these central questions are considered in relation to content and practices that are relevant and engaging to diverse middle grades learners and that focus on a vision of equitable, intellectually challenging social studies teaching - a conception of teaching that promotes all students’ engagement and intellectual development. Co-requisite for this course is MGE 481. In this course the students will: 1.
MGE 441 and MGE 451 are prerequisites for this class.

MGE 474 | THE TEACHING OF SCIENCE IN THE MIDDLE GRADES | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course offers a comprehensive view of the theoretical principles and practices used in the teaching and learning of science at the middle level. Integrating coursework and fieldwork is designed to offer pre-service teachers experience in the implementation of meaningful science-learning experiences through the use of inquiry processes applicable to diverse populations of students and classroom environments. The course focuses on the development of meaningful habits of inquiry and encourages collaborative effort and reflective praxis in teaching to the unique developmental stage of middle school students. Co-requisite for this course is MGE 481. In this course the students will: 1.
MGE 441 and MGE 451 are prerequisites for this class.

MGE 481 | SUPERVISED FIELD EXPERIENCE | 1 quarter hour (Graduate)
This course is a supervised, 25 hour, Level 2 field experience that provides students opportunities to apply the course content of MGE 471-4. Ideally, this field experience will take place in the same classroom and/or school as the student teaching placement, to facilitate continuity for students and schools. Co-requisite for this course is MGE 471, or MGE 472, or MGE 473, or MGE 474. (1 credit hour) In this course, students will: 1.
MGE 441 and MGE 451 are prerequisites for this class.

MGE 590 | STUDENT TEACHING | 6 quarter hours (Graduate)
A ten-week Level 3 field experience in a middle grades classroom in one or both of the teacher candidate’s content areas. Teacher-candidates are responsible for developing, implementing, and evaluating a program of study, as well as all for other aspects of teaching, for at least three distinct classrooms (in one or both of their content areas). Co-requisite for this course is MGE 591. Student teaching application and approval required. (6 credit hours) In this course, students will: 1.
MGE 591 | STUDENT TEACHING SEMINAR | 2 quarter hours (Graduate)
Provides teacher candidates a context for reflecting on their student-teaching experience in relation to their previous coursework. Co-requisite for this course is MGE 590. (2 credit hours) In this course, students will: 1.

Military Science (MSC)

MSC 111 | OFFICERSHIP IN THE UNITED STATES ARMY | 1 quarter hour (Undergraduate)
The purpose of this class is to introduce cadets/students to the fundamental components of service as an officer in the United States Army. These initial lessons form the building blocks of progressive lessons in values, fitness, leadership, and officership. Additionally the class addresses “life skills” including fitness, communications theory and practice (written and oral), and interpersonal relationships.

MSC 112 | PROBLEM SOLVING AND DECISION MAKING | 1 quarter hour (Undergraduate)
This course is an introduction to the “life skills” of problem solving, decision-making and leadership. The course is designed to help students in the near-term as leaders on campus. The class will help students be more effective leaders and managers in the long-term, whether they serve in the military or the civilian sector. Topics addressed include critical thinking, problem solving methods, leadership theory, followership, group cohesion, goal setting, and feedback mechanisms. Lessons are taught in a seminar format, emphasizing student discussions and practical exercises.
MSC 113 | FUNDAMENTALS OF LEADERSHIP | 1 quarter hour
(Undergraduate)
This course provides cadets/students an introduction to the critical topic of leadership. The course seeks to convince cadets/students that they can learn to be better leaders than they are now (i.e. leaders aren’t born they are developed), and to provide them with a model for understanding their development as leaders.

MSC 151 | PHYSICAL READINESS I | 1 quarter hour
(Undergraduate)
Introduction to the principles of fitness: a fast-paced military-style interval training class that incorporates calisthenics and an emphasis on a healthy life style. Students will undergo an evaluation of their physical fitness level and it’s progression over the course of the quarter.

MSC 211 | LEADERSHIP AND PROBLEM SOLVING | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The purpose of this class is to introduce cadets/students to principal leadership instruction of the Basic Course. Building upon the fundamentals introduced in the MSC 100 level classes, this instruction delves into several aspects of communication and leadership theory.

MSC 212 | MILITARY PRINCIPLES OF TACTICS | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This quarter focuses principally on officership, providing an extensive examination of the unique purpose, roles, and obligations of commissioned officers. It includes a detailed look at the origin of our institutional values and their practical application in decision-making and leadership. The lesson traces the Army’s successes and failure as it evolved from the Vietnam War to the present.

MSC 213 | OFFICERSHIP CASE STUDY | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course builds upon the MS I year’s introduction to officership and provides an extensive examination of the unique purpose, roles, and obligations of commissioned officers. The aim is to convey a clear and complete understanding of what it means to be a commissioned officer. Special emphasis is given to the officer’s role in shaping and guiding the growth and evolution of the Army through decisions, policies, and personal example.

MSC 252 | PHYSICAL READINESS II | 1 quarter hour
(Undergraduate)
Introduction to the principles of fitness: a fast-paced military-style interval training class that incorporates calisthenics and an emphasis on a healthy life style. Students will undergo an evaluation of their physical fitness level and it’s progression over the course of the quarter.

MSC 277 | WAR & PEACE IN THE MODERN AGE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A survey of military history from 1648 to the present with emphasis on the relationship between armed forces and the societies that create them, the impact of technology on warfare, and efforts to limit deadly conflict.

MSC 321 | FUNDAMENTALS OF MILITARY LEADERSHIP AND TRAINING | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Instruction and case studies, which build leadership competencies and military skills in preparation for further responsibilities as Army Officers. Specific instruction in the principles of war, decision-making processes, planning models, and risk assessment. Advanced leadership instruction focuses on motivational theory, the role and actions of leaders, and organizational communications. Must be a contracted ARMY ROTC cadet.

MSC 322 | ORGANIZATIONAL LEADERS | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Specific instruction is given in individual leader development, planning and execution of small unit operations, individual and team development, and the Army as a career choice. Must be a contracted ARMY ROTC cadet.

MSC 321 is a prerequisite for this class.

MSC 323 | ADVANCED LEADERSHIP | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course builds upon the previous lessons while introducing advanced leadership theories on motivation, leader modeling, and the role of a leader in an organization. Must be a contracted ARMY ROTC cadet. MSC 322 is a prerequisite for this class.

MSC 341 | COORDINATE ACTIVITIES WITH STAFFS | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This module consists of four lessons designed to give the cadet an understanding and appreciation of the critical importance that staff organization, planning, and coordination play in the success or failure of military operations. The module uses historical case studies initially to illustrate these points then transitions to provide an overview of staff fundamentals and principles contained in field manual FM 101-5. Must be a contracted ARMY ROTC cadet.

MSC 322 or MSC 323 is a prerequisite for this class.

MSC 342 | ETHICAL IMPERATIVES FOR THE JUNIOR OFFICER | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This six-lesson module on ethics builds upon previous instruction presented in the Basic Course and the MS III year. These lessons further strengthen character and values within the cadets, increase their understanding of the Army’s consideration of others’ expectations, and improve their capacity to make correct decisions when presented with an ethical or moral dilemma. Must be a contracted ARMY ROTC cadet.

MSC 322 or MSC 323 is a prerequisite for this class.

MSC 343 | ADVANCED MILITARY TOPICS | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course builds upon the previous MS IV lessons while introducing advanced leadership theories on motivation, leader modeling, and the role of a leader in an organization. It will also address the responsibility and process of a leader on how to assess and apply risk assessment within the organization. Must be a contracted ARMY ROTC cadet.

MSC 353 | PHYSICAL READINESS III | 1 quarter hour
(Undergraduate)
Introduction to the principles of fitness: a fast-paced military-style interval training class that incorporates calisthenics and an emphasis on a healthy life style. Students will undergo an evaluation of their physical fitness level and it’s progression over the course of the quarter.

MSC 399 | MILITARY THEORY | 1.50 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
(Independent Study) Intensive research and study of one or more selected topics. The topics and research methodology are determined in consultation with the instructor. May be repeated for maximum of six credit hours.

Modern Languages (MOL)

MOL 197 | SPECIAL TOPICS IN MODERN LANGUAGES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
See schedule for current offerings.
meaningful today.

While analyzing myths’ diversity in various forms of literature, students interpret the different types of communication present in myth-literature. As they move chronologically through the ancient world students will observe how myths change to reflect differing individual and collective concerns, as well as the specific interests (and so the significant aspects of discourse) of authors and audiences as conditions change. Students will also learn about literary genres, including poetry, tragedy and prose, their properties and distinctions and discover how genres also reflect audiences and times. Students will read and evaluate modern views of the epics, students will also acquire better means to distinguish critically between views and interpretations. A strong emphasis in this class will be upon the vital connections between past and present, and how students can become more aware of and understand important lasting concepts such as heroism, leadership, self-definition, etc. Finally, students will relate these stories to modern story-telling in order to understand how the heroes of the ancient Greeks live with us today. In short, they will interpret what epic poetry offered ancient listeners and what it has to teach modern readers. The classical tradition is rich with meaning and significance, even to modern 21st century adults and this class will not only be an exploration of the culture and instruction of the ancient world through epic, but an investigation of what classic motifs remain with us today.

As gaining command of relevant terminology, e.g., parados, peripeteia, mimesis, catharsis, etc. Students will learn to outline the plot, argument and key themes of each work clearly and will gain an understanding of the historical context and social conditions motivating each work. The main themes of Greek tragedy (e.g., power, gender, justice, violence etc.) invite comparison to themes of contemporary theater and film. Students will acquire an awareness of ancient Greek tragedy in its connection with our own theatrical and literary culture, and they will reflect upon the influence of Greek drama on modern stage and literature. They will be able to employ several concepts in the analysis of Classical Tragedy.

This course centers upon the Homeric Iliad and Odyssey and Vergil’s Aeneid and endeavors to place these epic poems into their historical, social, and cultural contexts. Students will learn the definition of epic as a literary genre and discover how this genre evolved to reflect audiences and times. They will learn the components of epic language, in particular, literary devices and structural features (e.g., formulas, nested stories, epic similes). They will be able to describe the plots of the three epics and know the main- and mid-level human characters, gods, and goddesses. They will be able to define and better understand the meanings of “hero” and “heroism.” Students will be able to express mature appreciation for the epics as whole works. Learning how the epics are variously interpreted as well as basic methods of literary criticism (e.g., analysis of language, content, structure, etc.), students will employ these as ways to understand and interpret the poems. As they read, learn and evaluate modern views of the epics, students will also acquire better means to distinguish critically between views and interpretations. A strong emphasis in this class will be upon the vital connections between past and present, and how students can become more aware of and understand important lasting concepts such as heroism, leadership, self-definition, etc. Finally, students will relate these stories to modern story-telling in order to understand how the heroes of the ancient Greeks live with us today. The classical tradition is rich with meaning and significance, even to modern 21st century adults and this class will not only be an exploration of the culture and instruction of the ancient world through epic, but an investigation of what classic motifs remain with us today.

This course is an interdisciplinary blend of the classical traditions of myth, literature and philosophy, concentrating on myth. It endeavors to place Classical literature into its historical, social and cultural contexts. Students will learn significant myths and the names and functions of the most important characters in them. They will investigate how the ancients used traditional narratives and images to explore, explain and experiment with ideas about themselves and their surroundings in those contexts. Learning about how myth is variously interpreted (as for example by means of theories of myth-interpretation) as well as basic methods of literary criticism (e.g., analysis of language, content, structure, etc.), students will employ ways to identify, understand and interpret the different types of communication present in myth-literature. As they move chronologically through the ancient world students will observe how myths change to reflect differing individual and collective concerns, as well as the specific interests (and so the significant aspects of discourse) of authors and audiences as conditions change. Students will also learn about literary genres, including poetry, tragedy and prose, their properties and distinctions and discover how genres also reflect audiences and times.

While analyzing myths’ diversity in various forms of literature, students will come to comprehend what mythology meant to the ancients, as well as those facets and ingredients of myth that are universal, enduring, and meaningful today.

MOL 213 | ANCIENT GREEK AND ROMAN COMEDY | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
In this course students encounter selected landmarks of Greek and Roman satirical literature; they learn important theories of interpretation, theories of humor as well as secondary interpretative opinions about the works assigned. They will be engaged in the course material primarily through readings, lectures and discussions. Students also view or read whole or selected excerpts of modern visual or written literature that will supplement their primary and secondary readings. The roots of comedy extend deep into antiquity. This course, however, endeavors to train intelligent critics of modern satire. Students study authors ancient and modern in order to sharpen their critical abilities and to gain insight into Athens, Rome as well as the contemporary cultural milieu. Students are challenged to regard satire as a critical force. Students encounter comic dramatists with special interest in how the most serious material—war, death, injustice, suffering—is criticized in a way that they can enjoy. With the help of comic theorists students will explore the boundaries of the comic, the social and political function of comedy in different cultural contexts, and the varieties of humor: mad, cathartic, aggressive, destructive, defensive, celebratory etc. Students will confront a host of related issues such as the nature of tragic pleasure, the language and metaphors of humor, and the legal limits of satirical discourse.

MOL 214 | THE CLASSICAL FEMININE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course attempts to recover the experiences of women in ancient Greece and Rome by examining literary texts and archaeological remains that concern them. Students will investigate women's roles in public and private life and gauge the changes in their situation and representation over time. Given that Greece and Rome are commonly credited as the foundations of Western society, students will frequently discuss the similarities and differences between ancient and contemporary attitudes toward sex and gender. The task is challenged by the paucity of sources that were produced by the women of antiquity themselves; often our view is said to be "filtered through a male lens."

MOL 215 | ANCIENT SCIENCE AND ITS LANGUAGE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Students will study ancient science, its proponents and its epochs, later concentrating on the language of science. Students will learn successive highlights of inquiry within scientific culture, beginning in prehistory and ancient Egypt. As they proceed from Egypt through the ancient Greek enlightenment and onto Roman science and its decline, students will learn the basics of how representative thinkers evaluated and altered "contemporary" understanding. Students will witness firsthand the ever-changing perspective of scientific knowledge and compare it with modern empirical methodology. They will acquire an ability to interpret varying viewpoints of "science" through an overview of changes of perception combined with selected readings from the works of ancient philosophers, physicists and physicians. Students will also learn the composition of scientific terminology; they will learn how to analyze, dissect and compose scientific terms based upon the Classical languages of ancient Greece and Rome.

MOL 240 | MODERN JAPANESE LITERATURE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course is designed to discuss various China-related social issues reported on Chinese and American social media. Students are required to read select materials about China from both American social media and the translated version of Chinese social media and participate in active class discussions on the readings. The materials aim to help students understand how and why salient social issues in China are reported divergently on state-run as compared to unofficial social media in China as well as on social media based in China as compared to those based in the U.S. Students will learn to use the knowledge of Chinese philosophy, history, contemporary political and economic contexts, censorship and journalism to understand what shapes Chinese media reports.
MOL 248 | CHINESE CALLIGRAPHY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

An introduction to the art of Chinese calligraphy. Hands-on practice as well as history and theory of the art. This course is open to students with no background in Chinese calligraphy, language, literature, or culture.

MOL 249 | MODERN CHINESE LANGUAGE AND SOCIETY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

This course will explore facets of Modern China, with special attention to how language and culture intertwine.

MOL 250 | CHINESE CINEMA -- A WINDOW ON CHINA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

This course studies Chinese cinema, the visualized artistic reflection of Chinese society, ideology, and culture from four perspectives: Historical, directorial, thematic, and artistic. It will cover the history of Chinese cinema, from the birth of the first Chinese film through the Silent Age, 1st Golden Age, 2nd Golden Age, Pre- and-Post-War Era, Pre- and-Post "Cultural Revolution" Period, and the Fifth Generation up to the emerging Sixth generation and beyond. Through substantial exposure and analysis of selected movie classics and subsequent classroom discussions, students will be well informed about the major developments and trends of each period in the history of Chinese cinema. Students will also explore the historical backgrounds, artistic characteristics, and key directors and stars of important Chinese movies as well as cinematic terminologies, the formation of Chinese cinematic theories, and innovative cinematic techniques.

MOL 260 | EAT ITALY: THE HISTORY, CULTURE AND POLITICS OF ITALIAN FOOD | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

In this course students will look at the modern and contemporary history of Italian food in Italy and the United States to explore and reflect on the material, symbolic, personal, and political implications of this global commodity. Through a variety of primary sources both textual and visual and multidisciplinary critical sources, students will discuss the symbolic and material forces that shaped food choices; the production, marketing, preparation, and consumption of meals; and the access to food from Italy’s Unification to the present. Weekly topics will span from cinema’s most memorable Italian meals to ethnographic studies of everyday meals in twenty-first century Italian families; from the success of Pellegrino Artusi’s cookbook to the star system of Italian-American celebrity chefs to Italian-American culinary literature. The course will conclude with a small-group practicum in which students will document and reflect upon their own process in preparing and eating an Italian meal.

MOL 261 | TERROIRS DU SUD: LAND, FOOD, AND LIFE IN THE SOUTH OF FRANCE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

The term terroir, defined by Angela Murrills as “a marvelous French word that encompasses soil, sun, and rain and how they all affect what grows there” (66), is typically associated with the geography of wine. The notion of terroir, however, extends beyond the fruits of the vine to impact the lives and behavior of people. This partner course to GEO 350 (The World of Wine) explores the concept of terroir in French culture, cuisine, history, politics, and literature. Through readings, discussion, film, and presentations, students in MOL 261 will discover the symbiotic relationship between the land of the South of France and its inhabitants. The readings will consist of firsthand narratives from Anglophone expatriates who have chosen to live in the regions of Languedoc and Provence, as well as translated fictional stories from Southern French authors. These primary texts will be supplemented by lectures, student presentations, and film. The objective of MOL 261 is for students to gain a holistic cultural understanding of land, food, and life in the South of France, an appreciation that they can then deepen during the short-term study abroad portion of the course in Montpellier, France.

GEO 350 is a co-requisite for this class.

MOL 262 | STYLE MATTERS: ITALIAN FASHION THROUGH LITERATURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

This course is an introduction to Italian fashion from the early-modern period to the present, with an emphasis on understanding fashion through literature in which dress is centrally featured. The word ?style? is derived from the Latin stilus or writing tool, an etymology that invites us to investigate the shared language of the discourse on the arts. We will thus learn to appreciate the formal qualities of dress (the lines, shapes, proportions, fabrics, colors, patterns and decorations) that identify the style of a period or designer, and the linguistic choices, tropes and figures of writers of the period who incorporated fashion in their writing. Costume books and literary sources, from Baldassarre Castiglione’s Book of the Courtier to Elena Ferrante’s Troubling Love, will be complemented by reproductions of paintings, prints, sketches, drawings, photographs, and film. Critical texts will help us unveil the complex aesthetic, political, and social functions that dressmakers, writers, and society as a whole attributed to fashion as they pursued beauty or another aesthetic experience, but also exerted power, challenged definitions of gender, expressed sexuality, or displayed wealth. Some of the questions we will ask are: what is a style? Is fashion art or a language? How does the literary representation of fashion change through the centuries? When and how does satire operate? What can we learn about a period?s aesthetics through descriptions of gendered clothing in literature? How does a color or fabric function as a tool for identity building or disguise, as a symbol of emancipation and revolution or conformism? Do ethics have a role in the production and consumption of fashion as a commodity? Taught in English.

MOL 277 | TURN OF THE CENTURY VIENNA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

This course will explore a number of the prominent players who were active in Vienna during the turn of the century, such as Sigmund Freud, Gustav Klimt, Arthur Schnitzler, Ludwig Wittgenstein, and Gustav Mahler. Students will examine, through primary and secondary texts, and works of art, music and film, the lasting impact of their contributions on the development of thinking and innovation in the twentieth, and indeed even twenty-first, centuries.
MOL 280 | THE UNBEARABLE SIMILARITY OF OTHER: FOOD, HISTORY, IDENTITY IN THE BALKANS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course explores how food, politics and identity intertwine in the Southeastern corner of the European continent, known as the Balkans. The region has always been considered as a ?gastronomic hub? and a geographical and cultural bridge between Europe and Asia, East and West. This area includes today, entirely or partially, some 13 countries, with a total population of around 60 million, and has been since ancient times a crossroads of history, religions and culinary traditions. In spite of its strategically vital geopolitical location, the Balkans is still less known for many?it?is often labeled as the ?Other Europe.? Further, in the imagination of Western Europe, the Balkans has come to be associated with stigmatizing stereotypes of instability, nationalistic wars, and backwardness. In this course, we?ll analyze the interplay between food and identity, nationalism and gastronomy, and culture and history in one of the most gastronomically rich and tasty regions of Europe.

MOL 282 | MODERN AFRICAN LITERATURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Themes and theories of postcolonial studies in relation to African culture, politics and literature. Evaluation of novels, criticism, and movies to provide an introduction to the complex, highly heterogeneous experience of modern African literature.

MOL 293 | RUSSIAN MASS MEDIA, POLITICS, AND CULTURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course examines how Russian and international news outlets alike present the realities of Russian society, culture and politics. Students will be asked to reflect on how mass media, rhetoric, imagery, and presentational styles influence the global public?rs understanding of current events. Through analysis of news segments and news articles, students will become more attuned to how contemporary depictions of this most important partner and adversary on the world stage are presented to a U.S. audience through both Russian state-sponsored news outlets in English (The Moscow Times, Russian Times [RT] TV) and through international outlets (news from France 24 English, Deutsch Welle English, Telemundo English, CNN, Bloomberg News, Fox News, etc). The course also explores how geopolitical relationships can be helped and hindered by their portrayal in the media, and students will gain an understanding of the material, symbolic, political, and cultural implications of the way media shapes, informs, and at times distorts, perspectives.

MOL 297 | SPECIAL TOPICS IN MODERN LANGUAGES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

MOL 306 | WARRIORS, WITCHES, FIREBIRDS AND VAMPIRES: INTRODUCTION TO RUSSIAN FOLKLORE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will introduce students to the rich and dynamic body of Russian folk texts and belief. Course readings will include epic poems, skazki (fairy tales), ballads, legends, incantations, and elements of popular culture. Students will learn and apply contemporary theories of folklore and traditional folk belief. The course will touch on the role of Russian folklore themes in literature and film. Emphasis on primary source materials with supplemental theory and history. Discussions in English. Readings in English. Cross-listed with RUS 306.

MOL 307 | TOPICS IN CHINESE LITERATURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course provides an introduction to the history, art and interpretation of classical and modern Chinese literature. Since all readings are in English, students will also explore ways of inter-media re-writing of Chinese literature in the age of globalization.

MOL 309 | THE NOVELIST'S WORLD | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Variable topics.

MOL 310 | JAPANESE CULTURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Japanese culture is a cross-cultural and interdisciplinary exploration of Japanese culture, especially as regards cultural figures such as "geisha," "samurai," and "Hello Kitty." These figures intersect with various critical discourses on gender, sexuality, nationalism, exoticism, orientalism, modernity, tradition, art, and aesthetics. They have also generated both praise and criticism. These questions are not only specific to the cultural figures as listed above but also run deep in society. The course will also examine other historical and ideological constructions in Japan and the West, especially in the United States.

MOL 311 | TOPICS IN FRENCH LITERATURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Masterpieces, themes and genres of French literature from its origins to the present day.

This is the first in a series of three hybrid courses in the Arabic Studies Program that examine Arab culture. The purpose of this course is to provide students with an overview of Arab culture and a clear understanding of its elements and historical events that shaped it. Emphasis will be placed on cultural aspects shared by all Arabs. The course will examine the general concept of culture, and study the elements that form Arab culture. It will also explore the impact of critical factors and events in Arab history from pre-Islamic to modern time on the evolution of Arab culture as we know it today. Students will gain insight into the way Arabs think by examining Arabs' cultural practices, products, and perspectives. In addition to learning about Arabs and Arab culture, students will practice using technology to research, blog, discuss, and contribute to open-sources on topics related to Arab culture. Students will also have the opportunity to meet and interact with Arabs and the Chicago Arab heritage community.
MOL 341 | MEDIA IN THE ARAB WORLD | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is one of a series of three culture/media/and literature courses strongly recommended for a major in Arabic Studies. It is also an elective course that can be taken by students at large. The purpose of the course is to introduce students to the Arab media—including newspapers, television, and the Internet—as a product of Arab culture. Students will examine Arab media to gain better understanding of its nature, role, content, and influence within emphasis on the context of Arab societies and the factors influencing their people such as politics, religion, technology, and Western influence. In addition to the assigned readings from the textbook and a variety of sources that represent various perspectives, a sample of products of Arab media including newspapers, TV programs, news, cartoons, and blogs will be examined to better understand Arab media. Furthermore, elements and factors that impact Arab media will be analyzed and discussed. The impact of the West on Arab media, and the future of Arab media will also be discussed.

MOL 342 | MODERN ARABIC LITERATURE IN TRANSLATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is one of a series of three courses offered by the Arabic Studies program as part of the major and minor in Arabic Studies. It provides a survey of modern Arabic literature and focuses on various genres, including poetry, plays, short stories, and novels. Works by major Arab writers and poets representing various regions and content related to Arab culture are examined and analyzed to develop an appreciation for Arabic literature and a deeper understanding of Arab culture. This is a hybrid course. Students meet onsite one day a week for 2 hours and conduct work online to satisfy the course requirements. Specific assignments are provided each week through D2L and Ning social network for the online portion of the course.

MOL 349 | TEACHING MODERN LANGUAGES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The Teaching Modern Language course is specially designed for the teacher who is about to begin his/her career teaching foreign languages at the K-12 levels. This course is also designed for accomplished and experienced teachers who wish to receive new information on current theory and practice. The course has as an overall objective to provide learners with the theoretical and practical tools that will enable them to become critical and reflective foreign language practitioners.

MOL 350 | METHODS OF TEACHING MODERN LANGUAGES IN THE ELEMENTARY SCHOOL | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Provides training in the theory and methods of teaching foreign languages in the elementary school (FLES). Designed for both pre-service and in-service teachers. Pre-service teachers include foreign language majors interested in elementary school teaching and elementary majors who are proficient in a foreign language and interested in teaching FLES. In-service teachers include elementary teachers proficient in a foreign language who are teaching or who are interested in teaching FLES and secondary trained teachers who are teaching or who are interested in teaching FLES. In order to meet the objectives of this course and subsequent methods courses, it is expected that all participants be able to demonstrate proficiency in English and a second language before enrolling.

MOL 354 | THEORETICAL FOUNDATIONS/CURRENT RESEARCH SECOND/FOREIGN LANGUAGE ACQUISITION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course serves both as undergraduate and graduate-level introduction to the field of second language acquisition (SLA) research. As such, it will introduce students to the research methods, findings, and some of the theoretical discussions that have encompassed the last three decades of SLA research. The focus is on basic questions regarding the process of language learning, rather than on explicitly pedagogical issues. The most important goal of SLA research is to uncover and describe the processes that are potentially affected by instructional efforts. Thus, one of the goals of the course is to have students reflect and, if necessary, modify how they view the role of an instructor and a learner of a second language. The material can be used to inform learning a second language as much as it is instrumental in teaching a second language. The material in this course should encourage students to question assumptions and begin to formulate individual ideas about what goes on in classrooms, how students learn, and how this learning could inform teaching of a second language. A final goal is to introduce students to critical reading of research articles in the field, as a preparation for possible further study of SLA.

Supervised experience in teaching, tutoring, interpreting, editing writing or other professional exercise of language skills.

MOL 401 | PROFESSIONAL FOUNDATIONS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
In this course students will prepare a series of surveys/summaries of research literature and learning resources. They will identify one or more professional organizations such as MLA, CLA, ACTFL, CFTL, AATX, and others. Using their by-laws, publications, and recent conference programs, students will write a literature summary that identifies the major issues of concern to these organizations, and analyze their resources and professional standards related to research and practice in the students’ field of interest. Required for Modern Language MA students.

MOL 402 | LANGUAGE, SELF AND SOCIETY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course offers students a theoretical and methodological introduction to the theory and methods of the study of language variation and change and its relationship to various social and individual factors (e.g. race, class, sex, ethnicity, identity, etc.). It introduces students to the concepts, theories, and methods used to analyze language and its role in the definition and construction of individual and group identity. Students will look specifically at how social and individual factors may influence linguistic structure and vice versa. The course will explore various theories of sociolinguistics, including the interaction between language and speakers’ membership in various groups, linguistic variation across groups, intergroup theory, dialectology, and discourse analysis, among others. Through the course readings students will consider and critically analyze the notions of the speech community and the individual, the existence (or not) of dialects, synchronic variation and diachronic change, the relationship between social factors and language, language policy and planning, language standardization, linguistic ethography, and theories related to education and society. Bilingual phenomena such as code switching, language contact, and the creation of pidgins and creoles will also be examined. Topics may vary by quarter. This course is required for language MA students.
MOL 403 | COMMUNITIES OF PRACTICE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
In this course, students will study Western and non-Western cultural texts that address a central theme (for example: "Citizenship," "Freedom and Oppression," "Globalization," "Popular pedagogy"). Students will practice talking and writing about the ethical questions, inter-cultural conversations, and analytical methods common to the liberal arts tradition as they apply to their use of a language in a particular professional setting. Students explore the varied kinds of local and global communities in the contemporary world and place them in political, economic, and historic contexts to understand how they have transformed over time, with specific attention to the interaction of economic (i.e., work practice) and social ties (i.e., familial, religious, ethnic, linguistic) in forming and transforming local, national, international and global communities. The course will examine how various ethnic groups have used communities as a starting place to assimilate and make their adjustments to nations as well as maintain ties to the culture and heritage of their home country. Topics vary by quarter and some sections will include service learning opportunities. This course is required for language MA students.

MOL 410 | JAPANESE CULTURE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Japanese Culture is a cross-cultural and interdisciplinary exploration of Japanese culture, especially as regards cultural figures such as "geisha," "samurai," and "Hello Kitty." These figures intersect with various critical discourses on gender, sexuality, nationalism, exoticism, orientalism, modernity, tradition, art, and aesthetics. They have also generated both praise and criticism. These questions are not only specific to the cultural figures as listed above but also run deep in society. The course will also examine other the historical and ideological constructions in Japan and the West, especially in the United States.

(Undergraduate)
Provides an introduction to basic computational methods for understanding what nervous systems do and how they function. The course covers the structure of the brain, from neurons to circuits to regions, and also the computational and theoretical approaches to model the brain. The course will introduce students to the physiology of individual neurons, how they communicate through synapses and firing, and how they work together to create systems that control, learn and memorize. The course will include the application of mathematical and computational models to neural systems.

CSC 241 and NEU 201 (or consent of instructor) are prerequisites for this class.

NEU 301 | RESEARCH METHODS IN NEUROSCIENCE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is designed to provide students an understanding of how questions are answered in neuroscience by exploring experimental designs used in neuroscience research and individual techniques used by neuroscientists. In addition to reading about these methods, students will have hands on opportunities to conduct some of the methods discussed. Lastly, students will formulate their own research question and develop a proposal to answer their question.

NEU 201 or BIO 193 or PSY 377 or BIO 339 or NEU 339 or BIO 340 or instructor consent is a prerequisite for this class.

NEU 339 | CELLULAR NEUROBIOLOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course examines the cellular and molecular mechanisms of neuronal function and the changes that occur in processes such as learning and memory. Emphasis on electrophysiology, synaptic communication, and cellular signaling. Cross-listed as BIO339/439.

BIO 250 (or PSY 377 or HLTH 301) is a prerequisite for this class.

NEU 380 | SPECIAL TOPIC IN NEUROSCIENCE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A lecture and discussion based course focused on a particular topic in neuroscience. Topics may vary depending on the expertise of the instructor.

NEU 201 and Junior Standing are prerequisites for this class.

NEU 390 | NEUROSCIENCE CAPSTONE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This is a liberal studies course for seniors concluding their neuroscience major. The course will examine one topic in neuroscience from multiple viewpoints in the field of neuroscience as well as relate it to fields outside of science such as history, philosophy, religion, sociology, etc.

Senior standing and major in Neuroscience (or consent of instructor) are prerequisites for this class.

NEU 399 | INDEPENDENT STUDY IN NEUROSCIENCE | 2-4.5 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Experimental and/or library independent study of a topic in neuroscience. Can be repeated if the content of the independent study changes.

Status as a neuroscience major is a prerequisite for this course.

New Media Studies (NMS)

NMS 501 | PROSEMINAR IN NEW MEDIA STUDIES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
The Proseminar in New Media Studies is an introduction to the field in both its academic and professional dimensions. The course addresses the humanistic and rhetorical approaches to new media that characterize the NMS program at DePaul, and helps students understand how these perspectives inform their work with new media.

NMS 502 | NEW MEDIA, OLD MEDIA | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course situates current media within a history of media technologies. Students examine the historical, cultural, and social contexts in which new media emerge, as well as how and why new media come to integrate with or supplant existing media.

NMS 504 | TEXT AND IMAGE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
In this course we will explore the increasingly important dynamic between textual information and visual information. In this course we will read about how hypertext has changed the environment and nature of the written word, and we will examine how the Web has "remediated" previous media into a new dynamic. We will use this knowledge to perform analyses of visual and textual artifacts; students may also create their own artifacts.

NMS 505 | WORKSHOP/PORTFOLIO SEMINAR | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Students will have a choice between a collaborative workshop or a more individually-centered portfolio development seminar. Each group prepares a digital media project for an existing community group, such as a social service organization. Those students preferring to work independently will, under the guidance of the advising professor, develop and defend a complete portfolio of their work within the NMS program. May be repeated for elective credit.

NMS 506 | INTERNSHIP | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
In consultation with the director of NMS, students design a field experience under the direction of a project director in the field. The field experience may be derived from issues raised in courses, from thesis research, or from personal research interests.

NMS 507 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 1-8 quarter hours
(Graduate)
In consultation with the director, advanced students may devise, with the approval of an NMS faculty member, an independent course of study that is related to the field yet does not duplicate a core or elective course already available.

NMS 508 | DESIGN RHETORICS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course provides students with a theoretical foundation and practical skills in the design of rhetorically sophisticated new media objects. We will learn basic principles of visual composition, both by examining existing compositions and building our own. We will also seek to understand the way visual literacies and culture shape the rhetorical choices we make as designers and managers of new media projects.

NMS 509 | SPECIAL TOPICS IN NEW MEDIA STUDIES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
See schedule for current offerings. May be repeated for credit as topics vary.
NMS 510 | WRITING DIGITAL CONTENT | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course teaches students how to author written and multimodal digital content. Students also learn how to strategically deploy digital content for professional and civic purposes through such practices as content strategy, content management, and measurement analytics.

NMS 520 | WEB DESIGN I | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
An introduction to the process of making functional sites for display on the Internet. Students will learn HTML-based development software, and work with imaging software to apply fundamental theories of new media design to the production of working computer-screen applications.

NMS 521 | WEB DESIGN II | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
An introduction to the process of making functional sites for display on the Internet. Students will learn HTML-based development software, and work with imaging software to apply fundamental theories of new media design to the production of working computer-screen applications.

NMS 530 | HTML/CSS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
An introduction to fundamental web development and design languages. Students will learn HTML syntax, naming practices, and techniques for developing and structuring web pages and sites. Students will also learn how to style HTML pages with Cascading Style Sheets (CSS). While most instruction will proceed through XHTML, students will also have an opportunity to explore HTML5 and CSS3.

NMS 531 | JAVASCRIPT | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
An introduction to JavaScript and JavaScript libraries, focused on the rhetorical possibilities JavaScript makes available for web development. Students will learn the basics of JavaScript as a language, how it interacts with HTML and CSS, how to use it to produce dynamic and interactive structures in sites, and how to leverage existing JavaScript libraries.

NMS 540 | DIGITAL ARCHIVES | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course provides students with an overview of issues related to digital archives, and hands-on experience with contemporary archiving practices. Students in NMS 540 will explore digital archiving through theoretical readings and case studies, and create or maintain digital archives for local organizations.

NMS 541 | DIGITAL STORYTELLING | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Digital storytelling is a community-based media arts practice for creating first-person video narratives. This course introduces digital storytelling and its allied values of personal storytelling, participatory process, and accessible production methods. Students learn the digital storytelling methodology, create their own digital story, and explore how personal storytelling is used in organizations and communities. Some sections may include a service-learning component.

NMS 551 | USABILITY THEORY AND PRACTICE | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Students in the class will learn the theory and history of usability, exploring how the practice developed in technical writing, web design, and new media contexts. We will explore arguments for greater user inclusion in design and development processes as well as critiques of these practices in industry. Students will develop practical experience by composing usability protocols (how to design user testing), running various kinds of usability tests with real technologies and users, interpreting results of those tests for a variety of audiences, and writing usability test reports. The course will explore the usability of technologies generally, but focus particularly on web usability.

NMS 597 | CANDIDACY CONTINUATION | 0 quarter hour (Graduate)
This 0-credit hour course is available to master’s degree candidates who are actively working toward the completion of a thesis, project, or portfolio. Enrollment in this course is limited to three quarters and requires thesis/project advisor and graduate director approval and demonstration to them of work each quarter. Enrollment in this course allows access to the library and other campus facilities. This course carries and requires the equivalent of half-time enrollment status. The student may be eligible for loan deferment and student loans. This course is graded as pass/fail. (0 credit hours)

Nursing (NSG)

NSG 200 | HEALTH AND NUTRITION | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course provides an introduction to the complex interactions between nutrition, exercise, genetics, cultural factors, physiological and psychological stressors and health. Each class provides an overview on the various nutritional factors which influence the health of individuals. A population based approach is used to address the issue of world hunger and undernutrition. Multiple perspectives relating to nutrition are included such as cultural, religious, family and alternative nutritional lifestyles.

NSG 210 | PARENTING IN MULTICULTURAL FAMILY SYSTEMS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Families exist in complex systems of home, community and environment. Each family depends on their cultural history, previous experiences and social supports to assist with parenting. Today over 70% of families with children have two working parents. In the case of single parenting or blended families stressors are great. This course will examine the effect of culture and family traditions on parenting practices in the United States. Multiple family theories will be introduced and discussed. The primary focus is identification of child and family risk factors and strengths. Identifying positive parenting behaviors will enhance the well being, self esteem and health of the family.

NSG 230 | WOMEN’S HEALTH: THE PHYSICAL SELF | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course explores the biological dimensions of women’s health. The theoretical bases for evaluating medical research, assessing personal health, and decision-making consumerism from a feminist perspective are emphasized. An advanced-level scientific research paper due at the end of the quarter.

WRD 103 or HON 101 or HON 100 or ENG 120 is a prerequisite for this class.
NSG 232 | MEN’S HEALTH: THE PHYSICAL SELF | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This introductory course explores the unitary nature of men’s health patterns focusing on anatomy and physiology of the major body systems emphasizing the difference in males. Health issues pertinent to these system differences in males will be presented based upon health risks, assessment, screening, diagnosis, management and treatment. Developing an understanding of male anatomy and physiology utilizing correct medical terminology to describe various parts and conditions. Elements of scientific research are explored in the context of lecture and laboratory sessions. Students select a research-based topic supported by clinical research studies to articulate their knowledge and understanding through a written paper and oral power point presentation.

NSG 260 | STATISTICS FOR THE HEALTH SCIENCES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course introduces the health science student to theory and application of probability, risk, descriptive and inferential statistics. Computer laboratory experience focuses on using data sets in clinical trials, epidemiology, and critical pathway development.

NSG 261 | INTRODUCTION TO FINANCE/ACCOUNTING IN HEALTH CARE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course introduces students to basic principles, concepts, and techniques in cost accounting, reimbursement, budgeting, and financial management in health care for the practicing health professional.

NSG 301 | INTRODUCTION TO THE ART AND SCIENCE OF NURSING I | 5 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The foundations of the art and science of nursing are developed through the study and practice of basic nursing skills, therapeutic communication and critical thinking in classroom, laboratory and clinical settings. Foundations are strengthened through exposure to theories of human development, aging, stress, health teaching and health promotion. Knowledge is applied to the care of older adults in the clinical setting, facilitating student understanding of individual expressions of wellness, health and illness, and the development of a professional value system. Course includes 24 lab hours and 24 clinical hours.

NSG 302, NSG 332 and NSG 333 are prerequisites for this class.

NSG 302 | INTRODUCTION TO THE ART & SCIENCE OF NURSING II | 8 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The art and science of nursing and select theories are examined to the basis for critical thinking, compassionate communication, and therapeutic interventions in the provision of medical/surgical nursing care with adult/geriatric populations. The role of the nurse as a health facilitator and provider of care are emphasized in working with common medical/surgical issues. Classroom, clinical, and laboratory experiences relate to individuals and families experiencing acute and commonly occurring patterns of illness. Course includes 80 clinical hours and 3 lab hours.

NSG 301, NSG 322 and NSG 332 are a prerequisite for this class.

NSG 303 | INTRODUCTION TO THE ART & SCIENCE OF NURSING III | 8 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The art and science of nursing and select theories are examined further as the basis for critical thinking, compassionate communication, and therapeutic interventions in holistic nursing practice with adult/geriatric populations. The role of the nurse as a health facilitator and provider of care are emphasized in working with complex medical/surgical issues. Classroom, clinical and laboratory experiences relate to health promotion and healing of individuals and families experiencing acute and commonly occurring patterns of illness. Course includes 80 clinical hours.

NSG 302, NSG 322 and NSG 332 are a prerequisite for this class.

NSG 307 | ART AND SCIENCE OF NURSING IV: PSYCHIATRIC MENTAL HEALTH | 6 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course examines the etiology, symptomatology, and clinical management of selected mental illnesses across the lifespan. A mental health recovery approach is utilized, focusing on the multi-factorial and individualized nature of illness presentations and the need for person-centered care and multi-modal treatment. Critical thinking, compassionate communication, and therapeutic nursing interventions are applied to practicum experiences. Various psychiatric nursing roles will be explored in the contexts of health promotion, disease management and rehabilitation. Course includes 60 clinical hours.

NSG 303 is a prerequisite for this class.

NSG 322 | BASIC PATHOPHYSIOLOGY AND PHARMACOLOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The principles of pathophysiology and pharmacology are introduced and applied in the management of pharmacological therapy. Emphasis includes the fundamental principles of drug mechanism of action, application of specific drugs in the treatment of disease, and related nursing care. To ensure patient safety, attention is given to drug administration and calculations. Developmental changes related to pathogenesis are addressed.

NSG 330 | FOUNDATIONS OF PROFESSIONAL NURSING PRACTICE | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course introduces the registered nurse student to the philosophy and mission of the De Paul University School of Nursing RN to MS Program. The central focus will be on the associate degree nurse transition to baccalaureate level education. Major areas of emphasis will include the evolution of nursing as a scientific professional discipline, the role of the professional nurse as a client advocate, change agent, the role of power and politics as sources of empowerment for practice, and legal, and ethical parameters in the scope of nursing practice.

NSG 332 | HEALTH ASSESSMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is designed to prepare the student to perform comprehensive physical assessments and mental status exams of the individual in the context of their family and community. Course includes 30 lab hours.
NSG 335 | LESBIAN HEALTH MATTERS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course explores the unitary processes and experiences of health and quality of life for lesbians in diverse communities and with a range of identification and orientation. The idea that homophobia exists and serves as a significant barrier to access and to maintenance of health for lesbians underpins the course. The course uses multiple forms of scientific literature, general literature, film, and art to study the personal, ecological, and socially constructed determinants of health and quality of life. Various feminist, nursing, queer, and post-colonial perspectives on contemporary scientific and social discourse will emphasize linking health and illness with economic, social/cultural, and political dimensions of society. Concepts of personal health patterning, risk reduction, and health promotion will be stressed.

NSG 376 | COMMUNITY HEALTH NURSING FOR THE PROFESSIONAL NURSE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The emphasis of this course is on the delivery of comprehensive, culturally appropriate services to meet the continuing health needs of families, aggregates, and communities. Students will design population-focused nursing interventions to reduce assessed risk, incidence, and prevalence of community health problems. The role of the community health nurse in health promotion, disease, and injury prevention and management across the lifespan is examined, specifically across the continuum of care and coordination of services at the individual and population levels. Emphasis is placed on current trends and professional, legal/ethical, economic, cultural, and environmental issues as they apply to community health nursing.

NSG 377 | PRACTICUM: THE PROFESSIONAL NURSE AND COMMUNITY HEALTH | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course provides opportunities for developing the professional nurse role in community health care. Experiential learning activities focus on community assessment, health program planning and evaluation, and management of innovation at the community level. Health education and leadership development are emphasized in both public health and community-based settings involved in health care delivery for individuals, families, and communities. NSG 376 is a prerequisite for this class.

NSG 380 | UNDERGRADUATE NURSING SYNTHESIS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course provides a capstone experience of the art and science of professional nursing practice in contemporary society with integration of the liberal studies program. Applying a multidisciplinary view of baccalaureate level nursing practice, students will identify a practice concern in their nursing field of interest and develop a quality improvement plan or policy revision recommendation from assessment to an evaluation plan.

NSG 393 | FOUNDATIONS FOR SUCCESS IN NURSING | 3 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is designed to enhance the transition of the 3+2 Masters Entry to Nursing Practice student from undergraduate to graduate level work and from general academics to professional preparation. Students will learn the fundamentals of graduate level writing within a profession, develop critical thinking skills to enhance mastery and application of nursing content and obtain foundational knowledge of current issues in nursing and health care. The class will be taught as a hybrid and incorporate online tutorials, self-assessments and asynchronous discussion as well as face-to-face lecture, discussion and small group work.

NSG 399 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 1-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
INDEPENDENT STUDY (variable credit)

NSG 400 | THEORETICAL COMPONENTS OF NURSING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is designed to examine the nature, function, and development of concepts, models, and theories for their relevance to advanced nursing practice and nursing research. The structure of theory is analyzed by examining the relationship between theoretical components. A variety of types of theoretical statements utilized to conceptualize nursing practice and research are presented and evaluated. A process for developing a conceptual framework for inquiry and data-based nursing practice is presented. Course includes 12 CbSL hours (MENP req. only).

NSG 431 (or status as an RN to MS or DNP student) is a prerequisite for this class.

NSG 401 | NURSING RESEARCH I | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This is a seminar course emphasizing the components of the research process. Using discussions and analysis of published studies, students will examine current research problems and their associated methodological and ethical issues. Students will prepare problem statements, formulate research questions, review nursing research literature, and utilize appropriate methodologies to prepare a synthesis paper.

NSG 400 is a prerequisite for this class.

NSG 422 | APPLIED PATHOPHYSIOLOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
A synthesis of organic & inorganic chemistry, molecular biology, and cellular physiology that serves as a foundation for advanced understanding of pathophysiology and pharmacology. Status as an NP student or (status as an MENP student and NSG 332) is a prerequisite for this class.

NSG 424 | PATHOPHYSIOLOGY FOR ADVANCED PRACTICE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Survey of current advances on human physiology with emphasis on the cellular and microcellular basis of health and disease. Students will engage in intensive study of human anatomy and physiology and complex pathophysiologic processes. Current research findings are reviewed for implications for health promotion, health maintenance and health restoration.

NSG 425 | FISCAL MANAGEMENT IN HEALTH CARE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Fiscal management and budgetary practices in health care institutions are explored. Budget preparation, cost-benefit analysis, product costing, reimbursement, and analysis of financial status in organizations is emphasized.
NSG 426 | PHARMACOLOGY II | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Emphasis is placed on the proper use of medication in self-care and dependent-care relative to health-related requisites, nursing role in administration of drugs, and proper patient education. The course focuses on the principles of nursing management in drug therapy along with the basics of core drug knowledge and patient-related variables. The major classifications of drugs are being examined along with issues arising from the use of drug therapy in contemporary society, and the related nursing implications are discussed. The pharmacological aspects of nursing care are integrated using the nursing process. In addition, there is emphasis on assessing and evaluating patient responses that change in accord with health, age, lifestyle, gender and other factors.
NSG 322 is a prerequisite for this class.

NSG 428 | PATHOPHYSIOLOGY FOR ADVANCED PRACTICE | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Using a case study approach, pathophysiologic and physiologic alterations will be analyzed in selected systems related disease processes. Appropriate clinical and lab analysis will be included in preparation for advance practice. Using a variety of learning modalities, students will explore current theories and research related to pathology, pathophysiologic and abnormal physiologic function including implications for health promotion, maintenance and restoration.

NSG 429 | PATHOPHYSIOLOGY & APPLIED PHARMACOLOGY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course builds on the background of the registered nurse in exploring advanced concepts of pathophysiology and pharmacology. Emphasis is placed on concepts of pathophysiology in relationship to pharmacologic therapies and clinical management. The application of pharmacologic therapies in health promotion and patient management is explored from perspective of the masters prepared nurse.

NSG 430 | POLITICAL AND LEGAL ISSUES IN HEALTH CARE | 2 quarter hours (Graduate)
Seminars will discuss social, economic, legislative and regulatory mechanisms that influence professional practice and health policy in the United States. Emphasis is on the legal definition of professional practice as well as major issues involved in designing, implementing and evaluating policy decisions including scope, dynamics, and conceptual and practical dilemmas. (2 quarter hours)

NSG 431 | HEALTH PROMOTION FOR FAMILIES AND COMMUNITIES | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Examines issues, frameworks, theories and techniques relevant to health promotion for individuals, families and communities. Physical and social determinants of health are examined as are methods for assessing and facilitating cultural competence. The nurse's role as advocate for health promotion and wellness in public policy is discussed. Course includes 12 CbSL hours (MENP req. only).

NSG 432 | NURSING AND BIOMEDICAL ETHICS IN HEALTH CARE | 2-4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Seminars and case studies are used to explore issues and frameworks for ethical practice and research in the health professions. (2 quarter hours)

NSG 434 | COMMUNITY ENGAGEMENT SEMINAR I | 1 quarter hour (Graduate)
This course is designed to provide a deeper understanding and integration of academic service learning in the community. It will provide students in the Masters Entry Nursing program with an opportunity to utilize the knowledge and skills gained throughout the program and begin an analytical paper and presentation critically addressing a community health problem. The nursing process will be used to delve deeply into the community engagement experience, Health policy implications and integration of a theoretical framework will be included. Course includes 12 CbSL hours.

NSG 435 | COMMUNITY ENGAGEMENT SEMINAR II | 1 quarter hour (Graduate)
This course is designed to build on Community Engagement Seminar I. It will provide students in the Masters Entry Nursing program an opportunity to delve deeper into their community engagement experience with a focus on health intervention evaluation, dissemination and sustainability while finalizing their analytical paper and presentation. Course includes 12 CbSL hours.

NSG 440 | MATERNAL HEALTH NURSING | 6 quarter hours (Graduate)
The art of childbearing nursing: a didactic and clinical course as presented and discussed in class and implemented in the clinical setting. Focus is on the role of the nurse in caring for healthy newborns, and childbearing women who may be experiencing actual or potential educational needs, illness manifestations, or injury patterns. A variety of clinical settings, both inpatient and outpatient for maternity care will be utilized.
NSG 441 is a corequisite for this class.

NSG 441 | INFANT, CHILD AND ADOLESCENT NURSING | 6 quarter hours (Graduate)
The art of pediatric nursing: a didactic and clinical course as presented and discussed in class and implemented in the clinical setting. Focus is on the role of the nurse in caring for healthy newborns through adolescents. Levels of prevention, health promotion, health maintenance, and health restoration will be discussed. Emphasis is placed on the physical, psychosocial, and developmental needs of infants, children and adolescents within the family as well as the alterations that occur during hospitalization. Major causes of morbidity and mortality will also be covered. The influence of health policy, cultural, economic, and ethical issues on the child and family are also addressed.
Course includes 60 clinical hours.
NSG 440 is a corequisite for this class.

NSG 442 | COMMUNITY HEALTH NURSING | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Emphasis is on principles of health care, strategies of health promotion, disease prevention and management across the life-span in community settings. Current trends and professional, legal/ethical, economic, cultural, and environmental issues are examined in the context of community health nursing. Didactic, clinical, and laboratory experiences relate to community-based nursing. Course includes 60 clinical hours and 16 CbSL hours. (6 quarter hours)
NSG 440 and NSG 441 are a prerequisite for this class.
NSG 443 | CLINICAL IMMERSION AND INTERNSHIP | 6 quarter hours (Graduate)
This is the capstone clinical course in which students, preceptors, and faculty collaborate in application and synthesis of the core concepts of caring, collaboration, communication, cultural sensitivity, community and environment as they relate to the nursing care of clients with complex health care problems throughout the life span. The students will also demonstrate competency in clinical skills, critical thinking, problem solving, and time management. The purpose of the synthesis course is to facilitate the integration of current and prior curricular content so that the student can become an active and productive member of the health care team.

NSG 442 and NSG 472 are a prerequisite for this class.

NSG 445 | NURSING PROFESSIONALISM, ADVOCACY, AND LEADERSHIP | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This is the capstone clinical course in which students, preceptors, and faculty collaborate in application and synthesis of the core concepts of caring, collaboration, communication, cultural sensitivity, community and environment as they relate to the nursing care of clients with complex health care problems throughout the life span. The students will also demonstrate competency in clinical skills, critical thinking, problem solving, and time management. The purpose of the synthesis course is to facilitate the integration of current and prior curricular content so that the student can become an active and productive member of the health care team. Course includes 12 CbSL hours.

NSG 446 | ETHICAL AND POLITICAL ENGAGEMENT IN NURSING | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course is designed to explore the leadership and advocacy skills required of advanced nursing practice in a complex health care system. The course will focus on health law, ethics and policy in the context of social justice issues common in a diverse society. Students will integrate leadership and advocacy concepts and processes to all levels of healthcare with specific focus on health ethics and policy.

NSG 448 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 1-6 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course is reserved for individuals who wish to do focused study at the graduate level. (Variable credit)

NSG 450 | SELECTED TOPICS IN NURSING | 2-4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course is reserved for special seminars organized from time to time to accommodate the needs of groups interested in specific topics. (2 quarter hours)

NSG 451 | INTRODUCTION TO NURSING ADMINISTRATION AND LEADERSHIP | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course is an introduction to the nursing leadership concentration as well as an overview of current issues and theory of nursing administration for all advanced practice nurses. As an introduction to the nursing leadership concentration, this course places emphasis on developing master’s level skills of critical reading, scholarly writing, analytical discussion, and shared leadership. May also be taken as a health sciences management elective. The expected outcome of the course is a nursing research question and literature review that will form the basis of the students work in their concentration and the final research project.

NSG 452 | ORGANIZATIONAL AND FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT IN HEALTH CARE | 2-4.5 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course provides insight and reflection on the executive role in advanced practice and organizational administration. Concepts, models, and techniques used to manage systems in a variety of health care organizations or practices are analyzed. Organizational assessment, resource development, and product costing are emphasized. This course provides insight and reflection on the executive role in advanced practice and organizational administration. Concepts, models, and techniques used to manage systems in a variety of health care organizations or practices are analyzed. Organizational assessment, resource development, and product costing are emphasized. (2 quarter hours)

NSG 453 | CASE MANAGEMENT AND THE MANAGED CARE ENVIRONMENT | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
In this course, students engage in analysis of concepts central to an in-depth understanding of the managed care environment and case management as a clinical care system. Emphasis is upon development of skill in organizational and population-based assessment and data analysis, clinical pathway development, and interdisciplinary collaboration. Students develop a database for a clinical project focusing on a client population from their work environment.

NSG 454 | INNOVATIONS IN HEALTH CARE DELIVERY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course provides the instruction and clinical experience for the development of the advanced practice nurse role as case manager and administrator. Learning activities focus on implementing contemporary data-based nursing practice models in a variety of health care settings, and the diffusion of innovation at the individual, family and organizational levels.

NSG 455 | CURRICULUM DEVELOPMENT FOR HEALTH CARE SYSTEMS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Theories, principles and approaches to curriculum development are explored. Basic elements of curricular design are examined in relation to traditional and evolving paradigms, reflecting the development in social and professional dimensions of health care.

NSG 456 | PRACTICUM IN NURSING ADMINISTRATION I | 6 quarter hours (Graduate)
Pacticum In Nursing Administration I (6 quarter hours)
NSG 451 and NSG 452 are a prerequisite for this class.

NSG 457 | PRACTICUM IN NURSING ADMINISTRATION II | 6 quarter hours (Graduate)
Pacticum In Nursing Administration II (6 quarter hours)
NSG 456 is a prerequisite for this class.

NSG 458 | TEACHING IN HEALTH CARE SYSTEMS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course prepares the registered nurse to apply theories, principles and strategies in education. Emphasis is on education as a vehicle for enhancing the health of populations and systems from an ecological perspective.

NSG 459 | PRACTICUM IN TEACHING IN HEALTH CARE SYSTEMS | 6-8 quarter hours (Graduate)
Pacticum In Teaching In Health Care Systems (6 quarter hours)
NSG 455 and NSG 458 are a prerequisite for this class.
NSG 460 | ADVANCED PHYSICAL ASSESSMENT ACROSS THE LIFESPAN | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course emphasizes the knowledge and skills necessary for advanced health assessment of individuals and families across the lifespan. This knowledge will be incorporated with related pathophysiological processes in common health abnormalities, with integration of laboratory findings and physical exam findings. The course will focus on physical, psychosocial, sociocultural, environmental, and developmental elements of advanced assessment necessary for developing clinical data-gathering skills, diagnostic reasoning and clinical problem-solving. It will allow students to explore fully the human individual, holistically, without recourse to invasive technologies. Interviewing techniques and head-to-toe physical assessment will be reviewed. The course will concentrate on the focused systems assessment necessary for providing care to clients across the lifespan and assist the students in differentiating between normal, deviations from normal, and abnormal physical assessment findings. At the end of the course, students will be expected to perform an advanced physical exam upon a designated client and effectively communicate the findings. Course includes 25 lab hours.

NSG 302 (or status as an RN to MS student) is a prerequisite for this class.

NSG 462 | ADVANCED WOMEN'S HEALTH ASSESSMENT | 2 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Lectures focus on the synthesis of scientific knowledge in performing integrated, comprehensive assessments of women from late adolescence through maturity. Emphasis is placed on the woman in the context of the family and community in health and illness. Laboratory practice includes taking the health history and performing the physical examination to evaluate primary and reproductive health care needs. (2 quarter hours)

NSG 422, NSG 424 and NSG 464 are a prerequisite for this class.

NSG 464 | HEALTH ASSESSMENT FOR ADVANCED PRACTICE | 6 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course builds on the skills acquired in health assessment and will introduce the skills and knowledge needed to perform a history and physical examination on patients of all ages. Lecture will focus on the synthesis of scientific knowledge in performing integrated, comprehensive assessments of individuals from infancy through maturity. Emphasis is place on the child in the context of the family and community. Laboratory practice includes taking the health history and performing the physical examination to evaluate primary health care needs. Adult Nurse Practitioner students will not participate in the assessment of the infant and child, but instead will participate in more in-depth assessment of the older adult. Course includes 30 lab hours. (6 quarter hours)

NSG 472 | CRITICAL CARE NURSING | 8 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This is a theory and clinical course with a focus on the roles and responsibilities of nurses caring for adults who are experiencing acute illness that may result in complex multiple system disorders. This course will emphasize the critical care concepts of oxygenation, perfusion, ischemia, pain, metabolism, and quality of life. In this course, students will synthesize knowledge and apply advanced skills to manage high acuity and critical care clients. An emphasis is placed on providing a strong theoretical foundation for the student to be able to apply critical thinking skills to clinical decision-making. In the clinical area utilizing the critical thinking techniques of the nursing process, students will assess, collect data, plan, implement, and evaluate the care of clients hospitalized in high acuity and critical care units.

NSG 440 and NSG 441 are a prerequisite for this class.

NSG 473 | PRIMARY CARE OF THE INFANT, CHILD, AND THE ADOLESCENT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is designed to explore health promotion, health protection, and disease prevention dimensions in pediatric primary care. The focus is on common issues related to clinical, developmental and behavioral needs of children and adolescents and their families. The dynamics of the pediatric client and nurse practitioner relationship will be analyzed, focusing on life transitions and the impact of health and illness on infants, children, adolescents and their families. Clinical practice guidelines will be evaluated through epidemiological and research evidence of selected developmental and behavioral disorders, as well as acute and chronic health problems. Selected theory-based models relevant to primary care of children will be critiqued.

NSG 428, NSG 464, and NSG 484 are prerequisites for this class.

NSG 474 | PRIMARY CARE OF THE ADULT AND OLDER ADULT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Lectures focus on synthesis and application of scientific knowledge for family advanced practice nursing in primary care. The emphasis of course content is on building advanced knowledge of chronic and complex health problems in the primary care management of adults. This course examines primary health care needs of adults across the life span, with a focus on health promotion and disease prevention. The integrated role of the advanced practice nurse in providing holistic care and collaborative practice is emphasized.

NSG 428, NSG 464, and NSG 484 are prerequisites for this class.

NSG 475 | WOMEN'S REPRODUCTIVE HEALTH AND GYNECOLOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This advanced practice course provides a comprehensive review of reproductive health and gynecology practice issues during a woman's childbearing years. Course content consists of contraceptive options, sexually transmitted illnesses, low risk obstetrical prenatal & postpartum and well woman gynecology. Clinical practice guidelines for the advanced practice nurse in a women's health specialty practice or in a practice devoted to the care of women in the family.

NSG 428, NSG 464, and NSG 484 are prerequisites for this class.

NSG 477 | CLINICAL MANAGEMENT OF WOMEN'S HEALTH AND ILLNESS | 3 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Lectures focus on synthesis and application of scientific knowledge for gynecologic advanced practice nursing. The integrated role of the advanced practice nurse in providing holistic care and collaborative practice is emphasized. (3 quarter hours)
NSG 478 | CLINICAL MANAGEMENT OF ACUTE AND CHRONIC ILLNESSES IN PRIMARY CARE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Lectures focus on synthesis and application of scientific knowledge for adult advanced practice nursing. The integrated role of the advanced practice nurse in providing holistic care and collaborative practice is emphasized. The dynamics of the adult client and nurse practitioner relationship will be analyzed, focusing on life transitions and the impact of health and illness on adults, families, and communities. Clinical practice guidelines will be evaluated through epidemiological and research evidenced of selected acute, emergent and chronic health problems.

NSG 474 is a prerequisite for this class.

NSG 479 | ADVANCED GERONTOLOGICAL NURSING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course examines the biological changes of aging using a system approach and reviews selected clinical issues and health problems of older adults, particularly the common health conditions associated with geriatric syndrome. This course provides a foundation in advanced gerontological nursing theory and practice. Comprehensive geriatric assessment, changes in normal aging, geriatric syndromes and functional status of older adults will be explored. Students are expected to learn and apply evidence-based practice to promote wellness, maximize function, and enhance self-care of older adults.

NSG 481 | BIOSTATISTICS AND EPIDEMIOLOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
The application of biostatistics/epidemiology to clinical practice and research is the intent of this seminar. Initial discussions will focus on understanding biostatistics and epidemiological statistics as applied to health and disease in diverse populations. From considering the relationship between measurement and biostatistics to understanding the importance of insuring data integrity throughout the research process, students will examine existing data sets (federal, voluntary agencies, professional/specialty organizations). Then the focus will be on understanding epidemiological statistics (rates, proportions, relative and absolute risk), descriptive statistics, measures of differences, measures of relationships/prediction, and multivariate statistical models as applied to health and disease.

NSG 482 | INTRODUCTION TO EPIDEMIOLOGY | 2-4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
An investigative problem-solving process is used to study the personal and ecological determinants of health and disease frequencies in diverse populations. Data are manipulated to plan, implement and evaluate health promotion and disease control programs for a variety of health care settings. Infectious and chronic disease prevention are emphasized. Students electing to take the course for four credit hours will complete a project using the epidemiologic method. (2 quarter hours)

NSG 483 | PRACTICUM IN POPULATION-BASED NURSING PRACTICE I | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This is the first practicum in a sequence of supervised clinical experiences for nurse practitioner students. The focus of NSG 483 is on application of health assessment and examination skills in the clinical setting, identification of health risks, and learning how to manage common illnesses. Analysis and application of current research is used as the basis for decision-making in performing the health history and physical assessment, contributing to interdisciplinary treatment planning, and teaching for health promotion and illness prevention. Course includes 180 preceptor clinical hours.

NSG 484 | PHARMACOLOGY FOR ADVANCED PRACTICE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Provides the advanced-practice nurse with the knowledge base necessary to manage pharmacological therapy for acute and chronically ill clients collaboratively with other members of the health care team. Direct and indirect responsibility for clinical decision-making regarding the administration, management and evaluation of drugs are emphasized.

NSG 428 and NSG 464 are prerequisites for this class.

NSG 487 | PRACTICUM IN POPULATION-BASED NURSING PRACTICE II | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This is the second practicum in a sequence of supervised clinical experiences for nurse practitioner students in which students demonstrate increasing comprehensive practice of primary care in the context of specialty practice for selected populations. Nurse practitioner student readings, assignments, and clinical experiences in primary care: family, adult, pediatric, or women's health with an emphasis on health promotion and disease prevention. Course includes 200 preceptor clinical hours.

NSG 483 is a prerequisite for this class.

NSG 488 | PROFESSIONAL ISSUES & RESEARCH IN POPULATION-BASED ADVANCED PRACTICE NURSING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course introduces the graduate nursing students to a variety of advanced practice nursing roles and the competencies needed for successful practice in those roles. The students explore the conceptual, theoretical, and empirical bases of population based advanced practice nursing. Critical thinking skills are developed through the student’s debate of current local, state, and national laws and analysis of coding case studies. Communication skills are fostered through the use of class discussions and development of various assignments. Scholarly written and verbal presentations enhance the student’s understanding of historical, economical, political, legal, and ethical perspectives of advanced practice nursing.

NSG 490 | PRACTICUM IN POPULATION-BASED NURSING PRACTICE III | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This is the third clinical practicum in a sequence of supervised clinical experiences for nurse practitioner students in which students demonstrate increasing comprehensive practice of primary care in the context of specialty practice for selected populations. This course provides the opportunity to integrate the multiple professional roles of the advanced practice nurse while refining their skills in the comprehensive practice of primary care and/or specialty practice for selected populations. Emphasis is on health promotion and disease prevention with unitary human beings in mutual process with their environment in the management of health and illness, teaching and health counseling and organizational and role competencies. Students select sites and preceptors in family, adult, pediatric or women's health promotion according to their area of concentration and self-assessed strengths and weaknesses. Course includes 220 preceptor clinical hours.

NSG 487 is a prerequisite for this class.
An intensive 6 quarter hour course designed to provide the nurse anesthesia resident (NAR) with current knowledge of advanced anatomy and physiology of the cardiovascular, respiratory and renal systems. The course is divided into sections with emphasis placed on the structural and functional role of each system in maintaining homeostasis. Clinical implications of current research findings will be stressed. (6 quarter hours)

NSG 502 | ANATOMY AND PHYSIOLOGY II | 6 quarter hours
(Graduate)

An intensive 6 quarter hour course designed to provide the nurse anesthesia resident (NAR) with current knowledge of advanced anatomy and physiology of the gastrointestinal, nervous and endocrine systems. Implications for the design and implementation of an appropriate anesthesia care plan for individuals requiring management for chronic pain. Implications for the development, implementation, and evaluation of anesthesia care plans will be stressed. The ethical, legal and professional issues that influence the advanced practice of nurse anesthesia will be discussed. Course includes preparation for the Certification Examination for Certified Registered Nurse Anesthetists.

NSG 506 | PRINCIPLES OF ANESTHESIA PRACTICE III | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)

An in-depth course that places emphasis on perioperative anesthetic management of patients presenting for specialty surgical procedures or requiring management for chronic pain. Implications for the development, implementation, and evaluation of anesthesia care plans will be stressed. The ethical, legal and professional issues that influence the advanced practice of nurse anesthesia will be discussed. Course includes preparation for the Certification Examination for Certified Registered Nurse Anesthetists.

NSG 507 | ANESTHETIC PHARMACOLOGY | 6 quarter hours
(Graduate)

This course is an in-depth introduction to anesthetic pharmacology. It covers the pharmacokinetics, pharmacodynamics, and pharmacotherapeutics of drugs used in the administration of general, local, and regional anesthesia and provides the scientific basis for the advanced practice of nurse anesthesia. (6 quarter hours)

NSG 508 | ADJUNCTIVE ANESTHETIC | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)

This 4 quarter hour hybrid course (in class and on-line sections) includes the pharmacokinetics, pharmacodynamics, and pharmacotherapeutics of drugs used in the treatment of a variety of disease states. Implications of current therapy with these agents and use of selected agents as adjunctive therapy in the advanced practice of nurse anesthesia will be stressed.

NSG 509 | ADVANCED PHYSICAL ASSESSMENT FOR NURSE ANESTHETISTS | 2 quarter hours
(Graduate)

This course provides learning experiences that focus on fiscal management and budgetary practices in health care institutions. Budget preparation, cost-benefit analysis, product costing, reimbursement, and analysis of financial status in organizations are emphasized. Health care finance is covered involving the major sources and uses of funds. Health care accounting is included which addresses financial reporting and cost measurement. An understanding of finance, accounting, policy and administration enables the advanced practice nurse to enhance the delivery of health care in a dynamic health care environment.
NSG 540 | CULTURE, ETHICS, AND POLICY ANALYSIS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This seminar is designed to explore cultural and ethical perspectives and their relationships to health policy. Health disparities based on social and cultural difference are linked to major diseases such as heart disease, cancer, diabetes, hypertension and stroke, as well as access to and outcomes of health services. Class discussions will focus on the past, current and future health policy needs of multicultural and multifaceted societies. The phenomena of cultural, ethnic, gender, class, and sexual variation in complex societies; notions of diversity and social justice; understandings of cultural conflicts and how cultural differences are managed in healthcare settings will be considered. Students will integrate concepts of all levels of prevention in health care, examine research in health ethics and health policy and discuss legislative processes for their potential to improve the health of the public. Course includes 12 CbSL hours.

NSG 550 | HEALTHCARE ECONOMICS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course focuses on application of supply and demand theory to the healthcare industry as well as analysis of financing and healthcare delivery in the United States and other countries. The principles and tools of microeconomics and macroeconomics will be applied to the healthcare market. Applications particularly pertinent in economic climates include the supply and demand of healthcare, practice incentives, managed care, malpractice and pharmaceutical economics.

NSG 551 | LEADERSHIP AND ORGANIZATIONAL BEHAVIOR | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
The course focuses on critical leadership characteristics that are necessary for transforming organizational behavior in healthcare organizations. Students will analyze leadership theories/styles and the interrelationship between leadership and management. Strategies for directing and managing successful change based upon an organization's vision and mission will be explored. Students will have an opportunity to assess their personal leadership style and to develop effective strategic leadership skills.

NSG 552 | PROGRAM EVALUATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will familiarize the student in different types of program evaluation, including objectives oriented evaluation, management oriented evaluation, consumer oriented evaluation, expertise oriented evaluation adversary oriented evaluation, participant oriented evaluation and alternative evaluation approaches. Students gain practical experience through a series of exercises involving the design of a conceptual framework, development of indicators, analysis of computerized service statistics, and development of an evaluation plan to measure impact.

NSG 553 | POPULATION HEALTH QUALITY AND SAFETY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course enables the advanced practice nursing student an opportunity to build a foundation of insight and knowledge about key issues and concepts related to population health and support high quality care and outcomes. Emphasis is on transforming healthcare leadership to improve patient care quality and safety, decrease costs and improve population health.

NSG 554 | INFORMATICS AND TECHNOLOGY APPLICATIONS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course focuses on information systems technology and its application for the improvement and transformation of patient-centered health care. Implications of informatics for advanced nursing practice and health care in general are explored. Impact on consumer-provider relationships, ethical and legal issues, global/future informatics issues and electronic health record issues are being examined. The course prepares the student to become proficient at selecting and using technology for organizing, analyzing, managing, and evaluating information in nursing administration, education, and clinical practice settings. The use of technology as an adjunct to inquiry and how it supports clinical and professional decision-making is explained and demonstrated.

NSG 555 | PHARMACOTHERAPEUTIC IMPLICATIONS FOR THE OLDER ADULT | 2 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course examines various factors that impact the pharmacokinetics and pharmacodynamics of drugs used in the care of the older adult. The primary focus will be on drug therapy in the older person, ensuring the appropriate use of frequently prescribed medications. Economic and policy issues regarding pharmacotherapy of the older adult will be explored. Students are expected to develop nursing assessments skills and plan nursing interventions that can promote the appropriate use of medications in this complex older adult patient population. (2 quarter hours)

NSG 556 | EVIDENCE BASED MANAGEMENT | 3 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course provides an introduction to the utilization of best evidence in managing healthcare issues. The curriculum is intended to prepare the student to identify management problems and develop a related path of focused inquiry, evaluate reliable databases and searching strategies to find evidence, and base management decisions on the best evidence available. This course is offered through a consortium agreement with Rosalind Franklin University and follows the Rosalind Franklin calendar. (3 quarter hours)

NSG 557 | ORGANIZATIONAL BEHAVIOR AND HUMAN RESOURCES | 3 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course in Organizational Behavior (OB), and Human Resources (HR), is designed to introduce organizational behavior theory; organizational communication, and human resource management principles to effectively lead and manage an organization. The OB Students will apply management and leadership techniques garnered from successful healthcare organizations to understand and practice management functions, including: understanding employee behavior and motivation, assessing performance, employing groups and teams, operationalize communication, evaluating conflict, and making appropriate business decisions. The HR functions of planning, recruiting, selecting, training, and appraising will be emphasized. Realistic case studies, collaborative discussions, practical research and peer reviews will be used to develop students’ skills in organizational behavior and human resource management. This course is offered through a consortium agreement with Rosalind Franklin University and follows the Rosalind Franklin calendar. (3 quarter hours)
NSG 565 | STRATEGIC PLANNING AND LEADERSHIP IN HEALTHCARE | 3 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is intended to introduce the student to leadership skills and strategic planning in healthcare organizations. Creative, collaborative problem solving within the context of current strategic issues in healthcare will be explored. The course content provides an overview of the strategic planning process including the elements required to successfully develop and implement short and long-term plans. The course focuses on leadership skills and qualities necessary to succeed and thrive in the healthcare industry as well as assist the students in applying theories of leadership, motivation, communication and conflict management. Students will learn the construction of a strategic plan and analyze the state of strategic planning in the healthcare industry. Additionally, students will have the opportunity to analyze their own leadership skills and create an action plan for leadership development. This course is offered through a consortium agreement with Rosalind Franklin University and follows the Rosalind Franklin calendar. (3 quarter hours)

NSG 566 | CURRENT TOPICS IN HEALTHCARE ADMINISTRATION AND MANAGEMENT | 3 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Healthcare administrators and managers must be knowledgeable about current topics that face their profession. Using critical inquiry and research skills, students will explore current topics and controversies in the field of healthcare administration and management. The ability to analyze, research and apply the findings to contemporary issues will be stressed.

NSG 567 | HEALTHCARE POLICY AND DELIVERY SYSTEMS | 3 quarter hours
(Graduate)
The historical evolution of health services provides a backdrop for the core focus of this course: the study of the healthcare system. The curriculum includes an analysis of the current changes in the healthcare environment and the problems affecting the delivery of healthcare in the United States that create a demand for government action. A study of the process of policy formation underscores the complexity and difficulty of government action. Economic and political approaches to health policy analysis will be introduced with a particular focus on contrasting competitive and regulatory approaches to the resolution of health policy problems.

NSG 569 | TOPICS IN HEALTHCARE ADMINISTRATION | 3 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is offered through a consortium agreement with Rosalind Franklin University and follows the Rosalind Franklin calendar. (3 quarter hours)

NSG 570 | LEARNING THEORIES | 3 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Students will examine domains of learning and adult learning theories and how they apply to health professions students. Topics include best practices for motivation, adapting to various learning styles, teaching models/strategies, instructional paradigms, and interprofessional learning environments. The concept of lifelong learning is introduced and students will explore the role that higher education and corporate education/training play in instilling a desire for lifelong learning. In addition, students will develop statements of Teaching Philosophy and Philosophy on Interprofessional Education. This course is offered through a consortium agreement with Rosalind Franklin University and follows the Rosalind Franklin calendar. (3 quarter hours)

NSG 574 | CLASSROOM ASSESSMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Students will examine various tools to assess student learning in the classroom setting. Topics include annotated portfolios, concept maps, memory matrix, process analysis, rubrics development, and the use of reflective statements. Students will also discuss how to adapt assessment tools to include interprofessional students. This course is offered through a consortium agreement with Rosalind Franklin University and follows the Rosalind Franklin calendar. (3 quarter hours)

NSG 575 | COURSE DEVELOPMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Students will apply curriculum design techniques to develop a course in a health-related area of their own choosing. Activities will include writing learning objectives, planning and organizing content, selecting instructional methods and materials, and designing assessment tools. Students will also discuss how to adapt courses to include interprofessional students. This course is offered through a consortium agreement with Rosalind Franklin University and follows the Rosalind Franklin calendar. (3 quarter hours)

NSG 579 | EVALUATING CLINICAL COMPETENCE | 3 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Student will develop appropriate tools to evaluate student performance in a clinical setting. In addition, students will develop a clinical rotation manual in their area of interest. This course is offered through a consortium agreement with Rosalind Franklin University and follows the Rosalind Franklin calendar. (3 quarter hours)

NSG 580 | BIOSTATISTICS & RESEARCH METHODS FOR ADVANCED PRACTICE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course provides an overview of the logical and appropriate use of epidemiological statistics (rates, proportions, relative and absolute risk), descriptive statistics, and most parametric and nonparametric procedures, including correlational and repeated measures analyses in the health profession as applied to health and disease in diverse populations. The course will develop the student’s ability to apply and understand statistical and epidemiological concepts to guide evidence-based practice in a dynamic health care environment.

NSG 585 | PORTFOLIO PRESENTATION | 1 quarter hour
(Graduate)
Students will assemble and present their teaching portfolio. The portfolio documents student mastery of each core objective: facilitation of learning, curriculum design, student assessment and program evaluation, and educational leadership. Students will present an analysis of each item included in their portfolios along with reflections for each item. In addition, students will perform a self-evaluation regarding their teaching preparedness, including cultural competence and establishment of interprofessional relationships.

NSG 590 | INDEPENDENT STUDY IN NURSING | 2-4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
The student will work with a faculty mentor to develop an individualized plan of work involving in depth study in an area related to nursing and healthcare. This can include, but is not limited to, reviewing literature for evidence of best practices, developing a research project, collecting data on an ongoing project, coding or analyzing data, developing a research presentation, or working in the community on research or evidence-based intervention projects. (2 quarter hours)
NSG 596 | CAPSTONE IN NURSING ADMINISTRATION | 6 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course provides a reflective synthesis of the coursework for Health Administration with an emphasis on the American Organization of Nurse Executive competencies. This final Practicum will include a formal synthesis paper and oral presentation that documents achievement of the MS degree outcomes and the competencies in the selected area of specialization. The paper will provide evidence of students’ achievement of the program outcomes and the competencies required to become a nurse administrator and to sit for the certification exam in Executive Nursing Practice. Critical concepts covered will include communication, relationship-building, healthcare environment, leadership, professionalism, and business skills. Requires 200 hours of practicum plus online lecture/seminar. (6 quarter hours)

NSG 597 | CAPSTONE IN NURSING EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course provides a reflective synthesis of the coursework for Nursing Education. This final Practicum will include a formal synthesis paper and oral presentation that documents achievement of the MS degree outcomes and the competencies in the selected area of specialization. The paper will provide evidence of students’ achievement of the program outcomes and the competencies required to sit for the Certified Nurse Education Examination (CNE) and become a nursing educator. Critical concepts covered will include effective teaching strategies, evaluation, measurement, and educational processes, and psychometric testing for academic outcomes. Current pedagogical, ethical, social and legal aspects of nursing education will be included. Requires 200 hours of practicum plus online lecture/seminar.

NSG 598 | GRADUATE RESEARCH SYNTHESIS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course focuses on a capstone experience synthesizing the science of professional nursing practice impacting quality and safety care of vulnerable populations. Leadership and advocacy skills occur through the translation of the critical examination of literature into quality improvement initiatives and policy recommendations for clinical practice.

NSG 401 and NSG 481 are a prerequisite for this class.

NSG 599 | THESIS RESEARCH | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Students conduct supervised original research terminating in a completed and bound thesis. The study must be approved by the faculty advisor and the thesis committee approved by the School of Nursing prior to registration and must be completed during the term.

NSG 401 and NSG 481 are a prerequisite for this class.

NSG 600 | EVIDENCE-BASED PRACTICE RESEARCH | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course will focus on the evidence based practice process, theories, concepts, and methods. This will include the synthesis and application of scientific evidence to nursing and healthcare practice within a systems framework. Students will develop a proposal for an evidence-based, scholarly leadership proposal, which will translate science into practice. In order to accomplish this, the student will focus on a specific aggregate population, and develop the program to make a positive impact on healthcare delivery. This proposal will be presented to a faculty committee consisting of three faculty members for their approval.

NSG 580 is a prerequisite for this class.

NSG 601 | EVIDENCE-BASED PRACTICE RESEARCH II | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Students will submit individual objectives to the faculty advisor and committee who will guide the student through project implementation. Students will implement their evidence based Scholarly Leadership Project during this course.

NSG 600 is a prerequisite for this class.

NSG 602 | DNP PROJECT PRACTICUM | 2 quarter hours (Graduate)
Students will implement and evaluate their evidenced-based DNP Project during this 100 hour practicum. Upon completion of this project the results will be presented to their DNP Committee with a publishable quality manuscript and oral presentation for their approval. Course includes 100 project hours. (2 quarter hours)

NSG 601 is a prerequisite for this class.

NSG 603 | DNP PROJECT CANDIDACY CONTINUATION | 0 quarter hour (Graduate)
Students who have completed their coursework but who are actively working on the requirements for implementation and evaluation of their evidenced-based DNP project. Students must enroll in candidacy continuation each quarter of the academic year until the DNP project requirements have been completed. The course carries the equivalent of less than half-time enrollment status. Course requires graduate program director approval and proof of work each quarter. Pass/No Pass grading. (0 credit hours)

NSG 610 | ANESTHESIA PRACTICUM I | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
An introduction to the clinical practice of nurse anesthesia with an emphasis on the principles introduced in ANES 500-504, 507, and 508. Includes administration of anesthesia for select patient populations under direct instruction and supervision of a certified registered nurse anesthetist (CRNA) or anesthesiologist. The course content focuses on specific general surgical procedures, including intra-abdominal, gynecological, urologic, ear, nose and throat, orthopedic, and endoscopic procedure. Content knowledge will be assessed through objective examinations. The preparation, implementation and evaluation of an appropriate nurse anesthesia care plan for these populations will be assessed through clinical performance evaluations and written care plans. Course includes Human Patient Simulation (HPS) assignments. Course includes 40 clinical hours/week and 20 lab hours/quarter.

NSG 504 and NSG 507 are a prerequisite for this class.

NSG 611 | ANESTHESIA PRACTICUM II | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Includes administration of general and regional anesthesia for patients undergoing a variety of elective and emergency surgical procedures and diagnostic procedures. Management of special populations, including pediatric, obstetric, and geriatric patients is emphasized with a focus on the anatomical and physiological differences and pathological disorders that characterize each population. Content knowledge will be assessed through objective examinations. The preparation, implementation and evaluation of an appropriate nurse anesthesia care plan for these populations will be assessed through clinical performance evaluations and written care plans. Course includes Human Patient Simulation (HPS) assignments. Course includes 40 clinical hours/week and 12 lab hour/quarter.

NSG 612 | ANESTHESIA PRACTICUM III | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Includes administration of general and regional anesthesia for patients undergoing a variety of elective and emergency surgical procedures and diagnostic procedures. In addition to anesthetic management of the trauma patient, the course includes acute and chronic pain management, and advanced regional anesthetic techniques. Content knowledge will be assessed through objective examinations. The preparation, implementation and evaluation of an appropriate nurse anesthesia care plan for these populations will be assessed through clinical performance evaluations and critically assessed topics (CAT assignments). Course include Human Patient Simulation (HPS) assignments. Course includes 40 clinical hours/week and 12 lab hour/quarter.
NSG 611 is a prerequisite for this class.

NSG 613 | ADVANCED ANESTHESIA PRACTICUM I | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
The first in a series of advanced practicums that provides the third year DNP student with the opportunity to develop, implement, and evaluate an anesthesia care plan for all patient populations with an emphasis on specialty surgical procedures, insertion of invasive monitoring and advanced airway management. Emphasis is placed on application, integration, and synthesis of knowledge, skills, and attitudes that are representative of the advanced practice of nurse anesthesia. This advanced practicum provides the opportunity to explore the professional aspects of nurse anesthesia practice, link policy making with clinical systems, and translate research into practice. Includes seminar presentations on selected topics relative to the advanced practice of nurse anesthesia and self assessment assignments. Course includes 45 clinical hours/week and 4 lab hours/quarter.
NSG 612 is a prerequisite for this class.

NSG 614 | ADVANCED ANESTHESIA PRACTICUM II | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Description: The second in a series of advanced practicums that provides the third year DNP student with the opportunity to develop, implement, and evaluate an anesthesia care plan for all patient populations undergoing a wide variety of diagnostic, surgical and therapeutic procedures. This advanced practicum provides the opportunity to explore the professional aspects of nurse anesthesia practice, link policy making with clinical systems, and translate research into practice. Includes critically appraised topics, case narratives and seminar presentations on selected topics relative to the advanced practice of nurse anesthesia. Course also includes Crisis Resource Management in the Human Patient Simulator (HPS). Course includes 45 clinical hours/week and 4 lab hours/quarter.
NSG 613 is a prerequisite for this class.

NSG 615 | ADVANCED ANESTHESIA PRACTICUM III | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
The third advanced practicum for DNP students provides an opportunity to develop, implement, and evaluate an anesthesia care plan for all patient populations undergoing a wide variety of surgical and therapeutic procedures. This advanced practicum provides the opportunity to opportunity to explore the professional aspects and link policy making with clinical systems, translate research into practice and serve as change agents for health care. Includes critically appraised topics, case narratives, seminar presentations on selected topics relative to the advanced practice of nurse anesthesia, and Crisis Resource Management in the Human Patient Simulator (HPS). Course includes 45 clinical hours/week and 4 lab hours/quarter.
NSG 614 is a prerequisite for this class.

NSG 616 | ADVANCED ANESTHESIA PRACTICUM IV | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
The final advanced practicum in which the third year nurse DNP student demonstrates the advanced knowledge and skills that comprise a foundation for nurse anesthesia practice, the ability to work independently or as a contributing member of the anesthesia care team, adherence to professional standards as well as ethical and moral principles while providing care to a multicultural patient population, analysis and synthesis of current research that support evidence based anesthesia practice, an awareness of limited healthcare resources and cost containment strategies, the ability to perform a comprehensive self evaluation; and display of a professional attitude toward lifelong learning. The practicum includes completion of a final comprehensive exam, the Self Evaluation Exam (SEE) and professional portfolio, and presentation and dissemination of the Scholarly Leadership Project. Course includes 45 clinical hours/week.
NSG 615 is a prerequisite for this class.

NSG 700 | ADVANCED PRACTICUM FOR NURSE PRACTITIONERS I | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
First of a series of two clinical courses that focus on developing proficiency in advanced nursing assessment and management for health promotion and disease prevention, management of complex health conditions, and working with interdisciplinary teams to provide care and services for persons across the lifespan. Students will ground their studies in the science of nursing interventions, moral/ethical issues, and nursing research. Practicum experiences are arranged to meet the individual needs of students while also meeting accreditation and certification requirements. This practicum provides an in-depth clinical experience for students in assessing an aggregate population within the context of a clinical setting, and developing programs to creatively and cost effectively affect changes in health care delivery. The clinical residency experience is facilitated by an advanced practice expert clinician, and forms the setting and basis for the Scholarly Leadership Project. There is no lecture/discussion component to this course. The student will meet with his/her course instructor on a regular basis for individual discussion and guidance in this Practicum course. Course includes 150 residency clinical hours.

NSG 701 | ADVANCED PRACTICUM FOR NURSE PRACTITIONERS II | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Second of a series of two clinical courses that emphasizes incorporating current research and demonstrating increasing autonomy and proficiency in decision making and case management. This advanced practicum provides the student with the opportunity to link policy making with clinical systems, translate research into practice, and serve as change agents for health care. In addition, this course provides the student with an opportunity to demonstrate expert knowledge, and expert clinical assessment and diagnostic skills when working with various patient populations. This practicum provides an in-depth clinical experience for students in assessing an aggregate population within the context of a clinical setting, and developing programs to creatively and cost effectively affect changes in health care delivery, and to evaluate those programs. The clinical residency experience is facilitated by an advanced practice expert clinician, and forms the setting and basis for the Scholarly Leadership Project. There is no lecture/discussion component to this course. The student will meet with his/her course instructor on a regular basis for individual discussion and guidance in this Practicum course. Course includes 150 residency clinical hours.
NSG 700 is a prerequisite for this class.
Organizational Communication (ORGC)

ORGC 201 | BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL COMMUNICATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Employers demand strong communication and presentation skills. In order to compete effectively in the job market, students need to acquire and practice the written and oral communication skills needed to interview successfully. Furthermore, as a professional you will not only be expected to be a confident speaker, but also to organize and prepare clear, concise and interesting presentations. You will also need to communicate effectively while working as the member of a team or in other group contexts. In developing the knowledge, competencies and skills needed to communicate effectively in these and other contexts, this course will embrace opportunities for both critical thinking and applied problem solving. (Formerly CMNS 201)

ORGC 212 | SMALL GROUP COMMUNICATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A survey of the variables operating in group interactions. Combines principles with practice through participation in small group experiences. Topics include group formation, group formats, organizational approaches, decision-making models, group observation and evaluation. (Formerly CMNS 212)

ORGC 251 | ORGANIZATIONAL COMMUNICATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course focuses on the role of communication in organizational life. Attention will be devoted to exploring how communication simultaneously shapes and is shaped by organizations. Topics include conflict and mediation, stress and social support, the supervisor-subordinate relationships, workplace diversity, organizational consultation and new communication technologies in organizations. (Formerly CMNS 251)

ORGC 290 | ORGANIZATIONAL COMMUNICATION WORKSHOP (VARIABLE TOPICS) | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course allows students to sample a range of hands on, practical offerings in communication that can enhance their knowledge and expertise. (2 quarter hours)

ORGC 316 | COMMUNICATION AND GROUP DECISION-MAKING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Advanced undergraduate course in small group communication. Students develop skills and abilities in identifying various factors that contribute to the success and failure of group decision-making in organizational contexts. Class sessions will focus on theories, research, and practices in group processes, and their applications to issues in real life. (Formerly CMNS 316)

ORGC 352 | COMMUNICATION AND THE CORPORATE CULTURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Focuses on the communicative implications of such cultural elements as values, heroes, rites, rituals, symbolism and storytelling. Analyzes and presents ways of adapting to the diverse components of a culture. (Formerly CMNS 352)

ORGC 353 | COMMUNICATION AND ORGANIZATIONAL CHANGE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Explores the impact of change on the day to day work experience of organizational members. How culture, management philosophy and individual performances are influenced by change. Political, symbolic interactional, and human resource perspectives are explored. (Formerly CMNS 353)

ORGC 354 | EMPLOYMENT INTERVIEWING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course examines the theory and practice of on-the-job interviewing and is especially helpful to those students who will soon graduate and transition into the world of full-time work. Through the class, you will learn to: a) identify personal transferable skills acquired through a range of school and work activities and jobs; b) identify careers/professions whose functional makeup requires professionals with your skills; c) apply to an ideal job through a carefully crafted cover letter and resume; d) open and close any interview effectively; e) build an interview schedule for any information-seeking interview; f) align different types of questions with interview goals and in-the-moment interview developments; g) learn to avoid question-asking pitfalls; and h) respond effectively to competency-based employment interview questions. In this class, you will have the opportunity to practice your interviewing skills in simulated probing and employment screening interviews. While the principal emphasis of the class is on the employment screening interview, many interviewing skills and pitfalls that translate equally well to other interview contexts will be learned as well.

ORGC 355 | DARK SIDE OF ORGANIZATIONAL COMMUNICATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The dark side of organizational communication introduces students to some of the more unsavory dimensions of organizational life. While it is not a guarantee that you will experience all of the dysfunctional organizational activities reviewed in this course, it is a certainty that you will personally encounter, or at the very least witness a few. Throughout the quarter, attention will be devoted to reviewing what is known about a variety of dysfunctional and harmful organizational communication activities and to identifying ways of coping with them. Topics covered in this particular class include incivility, bullying and violence, social ostracism, gossip, prejudice and discrimination, sexual harassment, group (dy)synergies, and stress and burnout.

ORGC 356 | COMMUNICATION CONSULTING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Examines how to partner with a client to facilitate constructive organizational change and behavioral growth in the workplace. Focuses on contemporary consulting through case studies. Previous courses in organizational, small group, or interpersonal communication are suggested. (Formerly CMNS 356)

ORGC 357 | TOPICS IN GROUP AND ORGANIZATIONAL COMMUNICATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Topics covered in this course might include: communication and customer service, assessment and intervention in organizations, comparative management, democratic participation in organizations, gender in the workplace, etc. (Formerly CMNS 357)
ORGC 358 | DIVERSITY, LEADERSHIP, & TEAM BUILDING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This is an advanced undergraduate course in small group communication that addresses how teams can benefit from effective leadership. Class materials will focus on various leadership theories and research, and their applications to leadership issues in real-life organizational teams. Students will acquire knowledge about what separates successful leaders from their unsuccessful counterparts, learn analytical tools to observe, diagnose, and choose appropriate responses to different leadership and team-related problems, and have opportunities to recognize and reflect on one's own leadership skills in a team context.

ORGC 359 | VIRTUAL TEAMS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Knowing how to work with others is crucial in the contemporary workplace. In fact, teamwork skills are consistently ranked high as one of the top qualities that employers look for in new hires. Particularly, as work teams grow to be more diverse across national, temporal, and geographic boundaries, working in the technology-mediated environment is becoming almost a necessity. In this course, students will learn what it takes to be a good team member and a leader in virtual teams - teams that primarily use communication technologies for collaboration. The class is fully online, and students will have hands-on experiences in a virtual team of their own through online simulations, virtual discussions, and team projects.

ORGC 360 | HUMAN RESOURCES COMMUNICATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Skillful communication lies at the heart of all effective human resource management practice. This course reviews research and best practices in human resources communication. Topics covered include: recruitment and selection; orientation and socialization; crafting policies; performance appraisal and professional development; and leaving the organization.

ORGC 363 | WORK/FAMILY COMMUNICATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course focuses on communication at the intersections of paid work and family life. Students will approach work/family "balance" as an essentially communicative process. Throughout the quarter, students will critically analyze how communication and discourse at micro- (interpersonal), meso- (organizational), and macro- (cultural) levels enables and constrains individuals and organizations as they navigate and manage the work/family interface. (Cross-listed with CMNS 343)

ORGC 393 | ORGANIZATIONAL COMMUNICATION PRACTICUM | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Structured and supervised student participation group presentations for various audiences. Includes practical experience in research, rehearsal and performance. Students may take a maximum of 2 credit hours in one quarter, 4 credit hours in the major, and 8 total credit hours. (2 quarter hours)

Peace, Justice and Conflict Studies (PAX)

PAX 101 | EVERYDAY CONFLICT: ANALYSIS, EVALUATION, AND PRACTICES FOR MOVING FORWARD | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course investigates the types of conflict that we encounter throughout our everyday life—with friends, families, or co-workers. It begins with the thesis that not all conflict is immediately harmful, since some can become fruitful. The course takes an interdisciplinary approach to study the various sources of conflict: value differences, personality styles, identity needs, etc. and viable strategies for approaching and even resolving them in a nonviolent way.

PAX 102 | CHICAGO AND STRATEGIC NONVIOLENCE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This introductory course explores active nonviolence as a multifaceted approach for challenging and overcoming violence without using violence in any of its manifestations, but particularly the forms of psychological, cultural, and structural violence that often undergird direct physical violence. The course investigates the many ways in which nonviolent approaches have been used strategically in Chicago by antiviolence organizations, religious institutions, and community development groups. The course will introduce some history and theory of active nonviolence and study two to three specific issues in Chicago.

PAX 112 | CHICAGO JUSTICE AND THE WORK FOR SOCIAL CHANGE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Using a multidisciplinary approach, this course investigates the variety of ways in which Chicago social and cultural changes result in a more just Chicago. The city has many agents working through multiple approaches using the ideas and tools from many institutions, such as religious, artistic, and educational ones, as well as community development and advocacy groups, which work to reduce the impact of historical oppression on, e.g., education, housing, and health care access. The course will introduce some history and theory of social justice and study two to three specific issues in Chicago.

PAX 200 | COMMUNITIES WORKING FOR SUSTAINABLE JUSTICE AND PEACE: SERVICE IN CHICAGO AND THE U.S. | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The course introduces central concepts and strategies that can help U.S. society move toward sustainable justice and peace. A selection of issues relevant to students’ service sites may include: a study of different forms of violence, such as structural and direct violence, an examination of nonviolent interventions for action and social change, and a recognition of the links with other parallel concerns (poverty, women’s issues, social inequity). Students work 25 hours at community service organizations to provide a key learning resource.

PAX 201 | FRAMEWORKS FOR PEACE: PRACTICAL MODELS FOR SOCIAL CHANGE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
An introductory course to positive models for building a peace culture, addressing structural conflicts and injustice, and discovering viable resolutions.
This course will look at the various ways in which people across the globe become engaged in social issues of importance, particularly those dealing with achieving justice and peace. Examples are human rights, environmental protection, labor issues, sustainable development alternatives, political representation, and gender issues.

PAX 225 | TRANSNATIONAL GRASSROOTS SOCIAL MOVEMENTS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is an introductory course on that ways in which ordinary communities of people have promoted peace through nonviolent resistance and transnational connections. Each section of the course may take one specific situation of such collaborative efforts as the main case study or arena of action. Such situations will involve developing understandings of a history of the involvement of the United States with another country, whether through foreign aid or military interventions, and the efforts of citizens of both countries in working for a sustainable peace. The value of transnational solidarity and the complexities of power dynamics in both countries and between citizens will be studied. Formerly PAX 245.

PAX 228 | IDENTITY, PRIVILEGE, AND SOCIAL CHANGE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The course investigates the social impact stemming from disparities in social privilege and advantage. It asks which type of these help to achieve a true democracy and the equity of opportunity for that. It investigates those socially constructed disparities grounded in or producing failures in justice, yet existing as part of an institutional or structural background. Strategies for analyzing these in relation to social justice lead to discussions of the need for social change.

PAX 231 | ANALYZING POVERTY, ITS CAUSES AND CONSEQUENCES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course reviews the current poverty debates from the economic, policy, social, political, cultural and moral perspectives that influence the implementation of poverty reduction programs.

PAX 235 | THE ETHICS OF POVERTY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course reviews the current poverty debates from the economic, policy, social, political, and cultural perspectives that influence the implementation of poverty reduction programs, in order to bring an ethical analysis to bear on the degree of moral responsibility that can be argued for when seeking appropriate solutions to global poverty. Several ethical frameworks will be consider, allowing students to learn the critical application of arguments and evidence to a seemingly intransigent phenomenon.

PAX 238 | TOPICS ON HOMELESSNESS AND POVERTY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will investigate one topic touching on the intersections of those living in poverty and those living without a home, whether temporarily or chronically. It will locate its discussion by drawing on several disciplines, both in the humanities and the social sciences, that can contribute toward the chosen topic. It will evaluate both historical and recent interventions to address the unhoused and those living in poverty (such as housing first programs), in particular attending critically to the value issues that can underlie such interventions.
PAX 240 | VOICES OF WAR AND PEACE: ART, LITERATURE AND FILM | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is an overview of the ways in which the arts, including literature and film, portray warfare and the attempts to end violence and build reconciliation and peace.

PAX 241 | HUMAN RIGHTS UNDER THE LENSES OF FILM AND OTHER ARTS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is an overview of the ways in which the arts, including literature and film, portray situations in the United States and globally that limit human rights. Analyses of both the theoretical literature on human rights and the cinematic and other artistic attempts to capture both violations of human rights and the restoration and protection of these will be central to the course.

PAX 242 | PICTURES OF INJUSTICE: NARRATIVE ARTS IN SOCIAL JUSTICE MOVEMENTS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will critically examine social justice themes in documentary and feature films in order to consider the role film and filmmaking can play in social justice movements. Together, we will carefully analyze a wide variety of films with the goal of critically examining their representations of race, gender, class and their depiction of agency of their subjects. We will also examine the storytelling and technical techniques used by filmmakers and how those techniques support the goals of filmmakers. Finally, we will examine case studies of activists who are using film and film-making as a part of movements for social justice. Students will leave this course with a better understanding of the ethics of filmmaking and the use of film in social movements. They will be more critical consumers of media and more familiar with a variety of social justice issues. Cross-listed with CPL 242.

PAX 243 | VISUALIZING POVERTY THROUGH FILM AND NARRATIVES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Poverty is a complex and multidimensional condition often difficult to measure, comprehend and change. The use of film, literature and other arts allow for those who do not directly experience poverty to develop an understanding through their empathic responses to persons living in poverty. The course will use the lenses of film and literary analysis to measure the success of those uses, in light of a critical analysis of the need to alleviate poverty and its effects.

PAX 244 | ARCHEOLOGY OF POWER: TESTIMONIES FROM FILM, LITERATURE, AND NARRATIVES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is an overview of the ways in which the arts, including literature and film, portray power and its effects, particularly where these are unjust and oppressive. Different theories of power are investigated, so that students can begin a critical analysis of both the benefits and the limitations of the use of power and its effects on those using it well and abusing it. The ability of the arts to aid our understanding of power will be central to the course.

PAX 250 | TOPICS: TOOLS FOR SOCIAL CHANGE | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A workshop covering practical instruction in mediation, conflict resolution, peace circles, the arts, meditative practices, critical pedagogy, and other strategies and practices for promoting social change with active nonviolence.

PAX 251 | TOPICS: TOOLS TO SUPPORT JUSTICE, HUMAN RIGHTS, AND PEACEBUILDING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A course giving practical training, along with theoretical and historical background, for practices that enhance work on nonviolent strategies for social change.

PAX 252 | FORGIVENESS AND RECONCILIATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A study of various understandings of "forgiveness" and "reconciliation" in several religions and cultures. The nature and dynamics of forgiveness and reconciliation will be examined both theoretically and in relationship to specific conflicts. Cross-listed with REL 252.

PAX 253 | DESPAIR AND HOPE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course addresses the important religio-ethical concepts of despair and hope from both theoretical and applied perspectives. The course explores: a) various religious, ethical, and psychological understandings of these concepts and b) applications of these concepts, along with various methods and approaches, to a number of case studies involving personal and/or societal challenges. Cross-listed with REL 253.

PAX 254 | INNER PEACE: EXPERIENCE AND PHILOSOPHICAL APPROACHES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The idea of inner peace is a theme throughout the histories of many civilizations since recorded history. It provides a twin to the more obvious idea of outer peace, or peace in the environments surrounding us, whether the neighborhood, our tribes and social groups, our nation with other nations. This course will study theories of peace and how these correlate with the theme of "inner" peace. It will ask what practices have been used to promote or foster inner peace. It will bring a philosophical and critical lens to these theories and practices, whether they are found in religious texts, political understandings, personal narratives or fictional accounts, psychology, or phenomenological and other philosophical approaches to peace.

PAX 255 | LOVE, HATE AND RECONCILIATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Reconciliation between people when there is disagreement or other forms of conflict or violence is a crucial process to alleviate the negative side of conflict. Love and hate are two of the strongest emotions and consequently can generate conflict. A philosophical analysis of these aspects of human existence can uncover resources for creative approaches to the forms of peace-building that include reconciliation processes, as well as provide ethical arguments for their value.

PAX 256 | DISABILITY STUDIES: AN INTRODUCTION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course explores disability from an interdisciplinary perspective: first-person accounts, disability rights "theory," history, and institutional and legal frameworks. The course considers a number of related topics: What is disability? Is disability socially constructed? What history led to the disability rights movement? We will then turn to readings about power and control, oppression and freedom in relation to disabilities, as well as the challenges of identity, inclusion, and self-determination, and the wide variety of disabilities.
PAX 270 | PEACE MOVEMENTS THROUGHOUT HISTORY | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
An exploration using the tools of both peace studies and historical studies to understand the different attempts to bring about a peaceful solution to a conflictual situation, whether this involves citizen refusal to accept a governmental stance (e.g., for military dictatorship, laws such as those for immigration) or actual aggressive events (international war, civil strife, oppressions through structural situations). The course will be comparative and interdisciplinary, but may focus on a single movement.

PAX 271 | GLOBAL REFUGEE CRISIS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This is a survey of global refugee crisis and internal displacement between 1945 and the present. The course will focus on the following issues and challenges: human rights, definitions and causes of crisis, internal/external displacements, ‘environmental’ refugees, protection and integration, refugee children, and conflict resolutions in post-war societies. Cross-listed with HST 241.

PAX 275 | MOVEMENTS FOR GENDER AND TRANS JUSTICE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
An exploration using the tools of both justice studies and historical studies to understand the different aspects to bring about changes in the lives of those affected by unjust social structures and persons acting to limit their freedom due to gender or transgender factors. The course will be comparative and interdisciplinary, but may focus on a single movement.

PAX 278 | DISABILITY RIGHTS MOVEMENT | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
An exploration using the tools of both justice studies and historical studies to understand the different aspects to bring about changes in the lives of those affected by disabilities and the ways in which a culture and its laws and persons limit the freedom and basic rights of those living with disability. The course will be comparative and interdisciplinary, but may focus on one or several aspects of the disabilities movement.

PAX 290 | TOPICS ON JUSTICE AND PEACE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
A topics course geared to introductory level discussions of the core elements of justice and peace-building as they occur in specific venues, such as religion.

PAX 299 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
The student and faculty member will design a syllabus with readings and assignments appropriate for a lower division course in PJC. Sophomore or above standing and at least one PAX course is a prerequisite for this class.

PAX 300 | TOPICS SEMINAR | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
A seminar on a key theoretical topic in the interdisciplinary fields covered by the Peace, Justice, and Conflict Studies Program, using a variety of theoretical positions. (Two from PAX 200, 210, 212, 214, 220) or permission of the Program Director is a prerequisite for this course.

PAX 301 | THE THEORY AND PRACTICE OF NONVIOLENT ACTION | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course will cover the basic theoretical groundwork on the practice of nonviolent action. As such, it will deal in depth with the subject matter of peace and justice making in the context of domestic and international conflict, specifically through a close reading and critical analysis of Gene Sharp’s seminal The Politics of Nonviolent Action and other selected texts. Through this text, we will critically examine the philosophy and methods of nonviolent action, asking about their effectiveness and desirability in the context of real-world conflict situations, and analyzing their tactics as resources for thinking creatively about the practice of nonviolent action in the context of struggles for social change in the contemporary world.

One 200-level PAX course or instructor permission is a prerequisite for this course.

PAX 303 | BORDER MATTERS: LITERATURE & CULTURE IN THE LATINO/A BORDERLANDS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
In this course, we will study the values and dynamic that is promoted in different Latino communities in the United States. In order to give context to the present situation of Latinos in the U.S. we will study some of the social issues in the countries of origin which have resulted in immigration and their encounter with borderlands. The notion of a Latina and Latino cultural “borderlands” has proven a ubiquitous and powerful conceptual paradigm in recent years, organizing distinct ethnic groups (Cuban American, Mexican American, Central American, Puerto Rican, etc.) according to the rubrics of pan-ethnic identity labels (Hispanic, Latina/Latino, etc.) and transnational geographies (Latin America, the Americas, etc.). This course will examine a wide range of Latino/a literary expressions produced in the Latina/Latino borderlands, particularly in areas of cultural contact and conflict. While the most obvious focus will be the Texas-Mexico border region, including ongoing efforts to establish the public meaning of the Alamo, additional borderlands, literal and figurative, will be considered. The Latina and Latino borderlands have also inspired critics and theorists to imagine postmodern, post-national subject formations, in which questions of ethnicity, gender, and sexuality are shifted from the margins to the center of critical discourse. We will therefore investigate the use and limits of recent “border theory”. Cross-listed with LST 303.

PAX 304 | TOPICS IN MIGRATION AND FORCED MIGRATION | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course examines the integral role that different processes of mobility play in shaping today's world: emigration, immigration, displacement, refugee and internally displaced persons flows. Students study the causes and effects of population movements including push-pull factors, demographic, economic, and political variables. Students also look at the role of state and non-state actors and organizations.

PAX 306 | GLOBAL EMPIRES | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
In this course, students gain an acquaintance with theories of imperialism and post-colonial theory through historically situated studies. ‘Power’ serves as the generative concept for this course, to be understood as emergent at multi-scalar levels. Cross-listed with INT 306.
PAX 308 | NATURE, SOCIETY AND POWER | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is an interdisciplinary exploration of environmental issues pertinent to international studies. The reproduction of human societies occurs in a symbiotic relationship with the natural world, yet in the modern era nature has come to be increasingly conceptualized as a resource. This course explores the repercussions of this instrumental separation of nature from culture and society. Cross-listed with INT 308.

PAX 309 | CRITICAL DEVELOPMENT THEORY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The uneven integration of the world economy has been shaped by a succession of policies and theories of development, modernization, and globalization. This course investigates how these theories and policies have contributed to centrally organizing concepts such as poverty, inequality, growth, and progress, which have been instrumental in ordering contemporary societies. Cross-listed with INT 309.

PAX 310 | TOPICS IN CRITICAL THEORY, PHILOSOPHY, POLICY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

PAX 311 | NURSING RIGHTS LAW | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

PAX 312 | TRANSCENDING COEXISTENCE: TRUTH, JUSTICE, AND RECONCILIATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course looks at a number of post-conflict situations and draws on a multi-perspectival series of reports concerning the processes and outcomes of them. It considers several of these questions: What happens after a ceasefire? What signifies peace: the signing of a peace agreement, or a free and fair democratic election, or a long-awaited atmosphere of calm? How do complex processes of reconciliation involve tending to the individual and societal needs associated with the transition from chaos and conflict to a new, shared, post-conflict future. How might a society’s search for the “truth” its public grappling with justice and forgiveness, and the possibilities of accountability, (re-)building trust, and restoring relationships fortify a post-conflict area against the recurrence of conflict as well as empower all concerned (oppressed and oppressors) to pursue a collaborative, just, and peaceful coexistence? Examining multiple case studies through the lenses of theory, best practices, and primary source transcripts and footage of Truth and Reconciliation Commission proceedings, the course explores the possibilities and challenges of reconciliation.

PAX 210 or instructor permission is a prerequisite for this course.

PAX 313 | BEYOND CONFLICT RESOLUTION: THE EVOLUTION OF GRASSROOTS PEACEBUILDING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is an interdisciplinary inquiry that draws on learning from different disciplines as well as our experiences in service, activism, and other forms of civic engagement. Through readings, discussions, and research, students will deepen their capacity for critical inquiry and integrative analysis concerning the causes, sustaining factors, and possible resolutions of conflict, violence, and injustice. We will ask challenging questions about conflict resolution, investigate contemporary developments in grassroots peacebuilding, and assess the comparative advantages and distinct applications of various conflict resolution modalities.

PAX 210 or instructor permission is a prerequisite for this course.

PAX 314 | PEACE AND CONFLICT RESOLUTION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

PAX 315 | NATURE, SOCIETY AND POWER | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

PAX 316 | TRANSFORMATIVE JUSTICE: THEORY AND PRACTICE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course introduces students to transformative justice responses to violence that do not rely on state institutions. These include collective processes for support and healing, intervention, accountability, and prevention. The pedagogical praxis of learning will be through communal peacemaking circles and collective strategy sessions to create community responses to violence. Cross-listed with WGS 320.

PAX 321 | PRINCIPLES AND PRACTICES OF RESTORATIVE JUSTICE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Together we will examine the principles of restorative justice in relation to a number of systems and sites of justice in contemporary society. The topics of our inquiries include: justice/injustice, peace, violence/ non-violence, reconciliation, harm/accountability, traditional values and practices, rights, conflict, diversity, structural (social) inequality, and local-state-global initiatives. Importantly, we will practice peace circles throughout the semester as our mode of engagement in class.

PAX 330 | THE UNIVERSAL DECLARATION OF HUMAN RIGHTS: ORIGINS AND CONTROVERSIES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This seminar will examine the intellectual origins and historical traditions of “human rights” that led to the formal development of the UN Declaration of Universal Human Rights in 1948. While we will address 18th and 19th century influences on human rights thinking and practices, we will concentrate on 20th century contexts of two world wars, revolution, and genocide as they created the imperative for an agreed-upon international statement on human rights. The seminar will also examine the debates and negotiations among the authors of the Universal Declaration, the significance of the declaration during the cold war, and contemporary controversies about human rights in the post-9/11 world.

PAX 218 or permission of the instructor is a prerequisite for this course.

PAX 331 | LIBERATION THEOLOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Liberation Theology focuses upon a radical movement for the transformation of Christianity that originated in the “Christian Base Communities” of Latin America and spread from there to North America and the Third World. Tested in the fires of civil wars in Central American and political repression in Brazil and other parts of Latin America in the 1970s and 80s, Liberation Theology today seeks to respond to the forces of globalization. Liberation theology and Christian base communities will be studied in comparison to other religious movements in Latin America such as Pentecostalism. This course is offered in conjunction with the Peace, Justice and Conflict Studies program, the Master of Arts in Liberal Studies program and the Catholic Studies Program. We will give special attention to the impact of the new global economic order on the poorest segments of Latin American societies and to the issue of global migration. Cross-listed with REL 351 and CTH 341.

PAX 340 | HUMAN RIGHTS IN THE GLOBAL CONTEXT: CHALLENGES AND INTERVENTIONS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The course investigates the ways in which the differing relations among nation-states, global non governmental organizations, and other groups of human rights supporters function to deal effectively with human rights protections and violations that are increasingly transnational in strategies and outcomes.

PAX 218 or permission of the instructor is a prerequisite for this course.
PAX 344 | TOPICS IN ENVIRONMENTAL JUSTICE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course explores a specific topic in environmental justice, such as advocacy. For example, the roles of individuals and organizations in advocacy are discussed, particularly how power arrangements facilitate or impede consensus building, how legislation is written, and how this process impacts communities of color. Special attention is paid to advocacy techniques such as lobbying, movement-building, public education and litigation.

PAX 345 | WOMEN, WAR, AND RESISTANCE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course aims to make feminist sense of contemporary wars and conflicts. It analyzes the intersections between gender, race, class, and ethnicity in national conflicts. The class traces the gendered processes of defining citizenship, national identity and security, and examines the role of institutions like the military in the construction of femininity and masculinity. The course focuses on the gendered impact of war and conflict through examining torture, mass rape, genocide, and refugee displacement. It analyzes the strategies used by women's and feminist movements to oppose war and conflict, and the gendered impact of war prevention, peacekeeping, and post-war reconstruction. The class draws on cases from Africa, the Americas, Asia, Europe, and the Middle East and North Africa. The class is interdisciplinary and gives equal weight to theory and practice while drawing on writings by local and global activists and theorists. Cross-listed with WGS 345.

PAX 348 | INDIGENOUS POLITICAL STRUGGLES | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course explores the struggles for social justice and the right to have rights by indigenous peoples. It emphasizes contemporary cases and the cultural contexts in which indigenous political strategies have developed and transformed. It uses historical data to understand the issues faced by indigenous peoples. Students conduct research on indigenous struggles and their connections to other social movements at the local, national, and international levels. Cross-listed with WGS 348.

PAX 350 | CAPSTONE IN PEACE, JUSTICE & CONFLICT STUDIES | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
An integrative seminar drawing together students' theoretical work and hands-on expertise.

Three 200-level PAX courses or instructor permission is a prerequisite for this course.

PAX 351 | GEOGRAPHY, FOOD AND JUSTICE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
While the need for food is universal, geographies of food production, distribution and consumption are anything but even. This leads to multiple issues of food injustice at a variety of scales. This course critically examines the contemporary global food system with the goal of providing students with skills and knowledge to engage in food justice activism. Students study the development of food systems and how inequalities have emerged in production, distribution and consumption. The course then explores food justice movements including the emergence of alternative food networks in the U.S and internationally. Assignments may engage students in local food projects and/or advocacy campaigns. Cross-listed with GEO 351 and INT 329.

PAX 360 | TOPICS IN DEVELOPMENT STUDIES | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
A survey of the problem of endemic poverty in the Third World, together with a consideration of the various forms of public action designed to alleviate poverty. Considerable attention will be paid to the problems of rural poverty and the pitfalls and possibilities of industrialization.

PAX 362 | LANGUAGE AND THE POLITICS OF TERROR | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Politics is, among other things, the arena in which human bodies are broken. This course will concern itself with the breaking of human bodies through torture, genocide, war and poverty. Throughout, a focus will be maintained on the interface between bodies and language, on how bodies placed under extremes of pain and degradation lose their capacity for speech, and how language reaches its intrinsic limits in trying to represent bodies in pain. Cross-listed with INT 362.

PAX 364 | POLITICAL AUTOBIOGRAPHY: TRANSMATIONAL FEMINIST TALES OF HEALING AND RESISTANCE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This class explores the interplay of political, social, economic and aesthetic factors in feminist autobiography from a transnational perspective. We examine the ways that women's autobiography is being used to write themselves into history. Story is integral in the process of healing and building solidarity and coalitions for gender based organizing. Further, autobiography creates a space for the "alter-history" to be told: the absence of testimony and experience is created for others to gain hope, strength, and deeper understanding of others and themselves. Various forms and critiques of feminist autobiographies are explored, and how each impacts the political possibilities for readers. Cross-listed with WGS 364.

PAX 365 | TOPICS IN WAR AND PEACE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course will deal with one of many ways to discuss the large-scale conflict that is war and the different methods to prevent, delay, and conclude such conflicts, in order to have peace. Cross-listed with INT 365.

PAX 372 | TRAUMA, ART & RESILIENCE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
The goal of recovery from trauma response engages the natural resilience of individuals through a multimodal healing process that often engages in arts activities, both individually or through community efforts. PAX 373 | LITERATURE OF WAR IN THE 20TH CENTURY | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
For as long as there has been recorded history, there have been war...and literature of wars. Though a good deal of this literature has lauded the exploits and heroicism of individual warriors, much has also described the deprivations and destructiveness of war itself. The 20th century was one of the most violent epochs in world history and generated a rich literature of war, both starkly realistic and imaginatively symbolic. This course will examine the literature of war in the 20th century, beginning with the First World War, then touching on the Second World and Cold wars, as well as wars of repression and national liberation. We will explore memoirs, novels, short stories, poetry, and films of these conflicts to gain a deeper understanding of “the pity of war.”

PRF 594 | MFA MAKEUP | 2 quarter hours
(Graduate)

MFA Makeup is a quarter-long course designed to give the graduate actor facility in conceiving and creating the makeup for a given character he or she might have to portray on stage. The goal of the course is to demystify the art of makeup by doing ten weeks of character development, visual research and hands on painting that will produce a basic level of comfort with makeup techniques. Basic light and shade sculpting will be reviewed. Aging the face, making the face look younger, white face techniques, trauma, animal techniques, and non-realistic makeups will be explored and applied to the various theatre sizes we encounter here at DePaul as well as in stages all over Chicago. (2 quarter hours)
Status as an Undergraduate or Graduate Theatre student is a prerequisite for this class.

PRF 595 | SOLO PERFORMANCE WORKSHOP | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)

Designed for advanced BFA and MFA acting students, Solo Performance Workshop offers students the opportunity to conceive, create and develop original solo works through writing exercises, structured improvisation, character creation and formal experiments. At the end of the quarter, students share their works-in-progress with the TTS community.
Status as an Undergraduate or Graduate Theatre student is a prerequisite for this class.

PRF 596 | ADVANCED STAGE COMBAT | 1 quarter hour
(Graduate)

An advanced movement class which, as an elective, builds new skills and further proficiency gained in the required Stage Combat class. Realistically portraying violence while remaining safe, good partnering, balance, and coordination are some of the movement skills that are honed through this course. Work continues on perfecting techniques and performance in Rapier-and-Dagger and Unarmed combat. Students may take this course more than once as a different third weapon (either knife, smallsword, quarterstaff, or broadsword) is added to the course-work each quarter. The students have the option to have their final scene-work adjudicated by a Fight Master from The Society of American Fight Directors, which, if successful, offers the opportunity to become a recognized "Actor-Combatant" with that institution. Entrance into class is competitive and is partially decided in accordance with discipline shown in the earlier course. (1 quarter hour)
Status as an Undergraduate or Graduate Theatre student is a prerequisite for this class.

PRF 599 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 1-4 quarter hours
(Graduate)

Independent Study (variable credit)
Status as Graduate Theatre student is a prerequisite for this class.

PRF 611 | GRADUATE ACTING II: CLASSICAL | 5 quarter hours
(Graduate)

The goal of this year-long course in Heightened Text/Classical Acting is to join the emotional, physical and imaginative life of a role with the technical skills needed to express that character to its fullest. This is achieved through rigorous foundation work and applying the basic tenets of acting to the acting of plays in verse; making strong choices that are grounded in the text, establishing a connection to the scene partner, listening and responding to what is happening in the scene, and integrating the work done in other voice, speech and movement classes. (5 quarter hours)

PRF 612 | GRADUATE ACTING II: CLASSICAL | 5 quarter hours
(Graduate)

In winter quarter, students work with dramatic monologues, explore and study Shakespeare's prose and scenes from the Jacobean playwrights John Webster, John Ford and Thomas Middleton. Though prose lacks meter, it has its own rhythm, in part defined by punctuation and rhetorical shape. Finding that rhythm of thought is essential to the clarity and life of the prose. With prose, as with meter, rhetoric, and imagery, we approach the work through both brain and body: balancing analytical and physical techniques for understanding and harnessing the dynamics of Shakespeare's language. (5 quarter hours)

PRF 613 | GRADUATE ACTING II: CLASSICAL | 5 quarter hours
(Graduate)

The spring quarter will focus on comedies by Shakespeare, Moliere, Sheridan, Wilde and Coward. Students will call upon all of the truth-seeking, risk-taking and relish-making that comedy and heightened language requires. Only farce and commedia are larger. The resulting agility with text provides a firm foundation for confident performance of all classical and modern roles. Exploration of Shakespeare's comedies will include collaboration with M.F.A. Directors with scenes to be presented as an invited-audience showing. (5 quarter hours)

PRF 614 | THE DIRECTOR AND THE ACTING PROCESS | 3 quarter hours
(Graduate)

This year-long class focuses on how the director helps the actor. Through both participation and observation in this undergraduate scene study class taught by a senior member of the acting faculty, the directing student acquires the skills and strategies necessary in helping the actor personalize and embody the text. (3 quarter hours)
Status as Graduate Theatre student is a prerequisite for this class.

PRF 615 | THE DIRECTOR AND THE ACTING PROCESS | 3 quarter hours
(Graduate)

This year-long class focuses on how the director helps the actor. PRF 680 | ADVANCED STAGE COMBAT | 1 quarter hour
(Graduate)
In this course students will continue their study of unarmed and rapier&-dagger techniques, as well as adding a third weapon discipline as taught by The Society of American Fight Directors (past options have included knife, broadsword, quarterstaff, small sword) for use in stage and film performance. The students will perform choreography in all three disciplines, in scenes which they themselves select but which are choreographed by the instructor. The students are then given the opportunity to take the SAFD's Skills Proficiency Test for all three weapons, with an outside adjudicator, in the hope of reaching 'Actor
Combatant' status within the SAFD. (1 quarter hour)
PRF 580 and status as a Graduate Theatre student is a prerequisite for this class.

PRF 681 | DIRECTING II | 3 quarter hours
(Graduate)

PRF 691 | GRADUATE ACTING III: COMPANY CREATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is a journey with toolbox through creating and producing ensemble-based theater. Students follow two pathways: creating theater and producing theater. The path of creating follows on the self-generated work of MFA I and II Workshops, empowering the class to imagine and rehearse an original piece of theater through an invented process. Weekly rehearsal meetings build the piece into a "producer's rehearsal" at the end of the quarter. The path of producing introduces the class to tools necessary for mounting theater in Chicago or elsewhere. Using the piece under construction as their example, the students delegate and coordinate work on mission statement, company structure/contracts, by-laws, board formation, not-for-profit/tax-exempt status, grant writing, fundraising, space rental, rehearsal process, press relations, advertising, audience development, festivals, transfers, documentation, and touring.
PRF 613 and status as a Graduate Theatre student is a prerequisite for this class.

PRF 712 | GRADUATE ACTING III: PROFESSIONAL PREPARATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course follows on the Audition class from fall quarter bringing the students into simulated auditions for weekly guests including professional casting directors, casting agents, talent managers, artistic directors, and filmmakers from Chicago and beyond. Feedback will focus on empowering the actors to strengthen their approach, courage, effectiveness and flexibility in the casting process as felt in the "real world.

Philosophy (PHL)

PHL 100 | INTRODUCTION TO PHILOSOPHY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

This course provides an introduction to basic philosophical concepts, methods, and problems, through the readings of major texts and authors in the history of philosophy. Subjects treated may include knowledge, community, beauty, love, freedom, and justice. Questions concerning the nature of the body and soul, the meaning of life and death, or the relationship between the human and non-human may also be considered, alongside other central inquiries taken up by philosophical thinkers.

PHL 202 | PHILOSOPHY OF GOD | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

This course examines theoretical approaches to determining the existence and nature of God. Readings are selected from seminal figures in the history of philosophy describing God as, for example, all-knowing, creator and the ultimate source of moral goodness. Issues of concern for both philosophy and religion are possible topics-free will, the reality of evil, the afterlife. Atheism, the denial of God's existence, may also be critically reviewed.

PHL 204 | EXISTENTIAL THEMES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

In this course we study the principal ideas regarding the human condition, such as birth, death, responsibility, absurdity, alienation, freedom, God, and authenticity. Offering a careful examination of the "big questions" of philosophical inquiry, the course equips students with tools to critically reflect on themselves and their place in the world.

PHL 206 | TOPICS AND CONTROVERSIES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

This class is an exploration of questions that have awakened interesting and controversial discussions in the history of philosophy, and/or of topics that have been particularly challenging for philosophical inquiry. Students will broach such controversies from multiple perspectives and are encouraged to develop their own views after careful reflection and examination of differing standpoints. Comparative and critical analysis are central to this course.

PHL 208 | WHAT IS A PERSON? | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

This course examines how our selfhood and identity are shaped by ethical, political, and aesthetic values. Possible topics include: human existence and the personhood of animals; singularity and community; the standpoint and situatedness that shape our knowledge as persons and of persons; relationality and vulnerability; the human conditions of birth and death; consciousness and self-consciousness; the relationship between the body and the soul; the role that colonial, sexist, and racist assumptions have played in determining personhood; and reflections on selfhood in the context of modern technology, artificial intelligence, or discourses about the post-human.
PHL 209 | CRIME AND PUNISHMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course examines the nature of crime and the justification of punishment. Through historical and contemporary readings, basic issues such as what crime and punishment actually are, how punishment has been and continues to be justified, and the various forms that penal practices have taken will be explored. The course will also examine the question of social justice as it relates to punishment and the vexed problem of whether any forms of crime can ever be morally justified.

PHL 228 | NEUROETHICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course examines moral standards and issues as these arise in the practice of neuroscience. Advances in this field have developed unprecedented ways of understanding, predicting, and even, influencing and controlling the human mind and, through this, human behavior. Neuroethics considers the ethical dilemmas that emerge in such research and the technologies that it fosters as well as the challenges these advances pose to some of the fundamental underlying concepts of moral theory: human nature, personal identity, and moral responsibility itself. Cross-listed with NEU 228.

PHL 229 | BIOMEDICAL ETHICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course examines moral standards as they apply to the various dimensions of medical institutions and practices. It reviews the major ethical theories, and discusses the ways in which the moral principles of nonmaleficence, autonomy, beneficence, and justice ought to govern the delivery of health services, as well as how they are to serve as the ethical framework for the various kinds of social structures in which these services are provided.

PHL 230 | CONTEMPORARY TOPICS IN ETHICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course examines a range of ethical issues of contemporary concern, such as abortion, euthanasia, and capital punishment. Students develop the tools to make moral judgments about complex and pressing issues with reference to moral theories and key figures engaging these issues. Comparative and critical analysis are central to this course.

PHL 231 | PHILOSOPHY AND RACE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course explores a set of topics and issues having to do with the construction of race, racial identity, and racial difference, in the United States and beyond. Philosophical analysis and inquiry into issues such as racism, anti-Semitism, and genocide are also central to the course objectives. Students might reflect on the intersection between racial dynamics and other identity categories, such as gender, class, and sexuality.

PHL 232 | WHAT IS FREEDOM? | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course investigates various conceptions of freedom and what it means to ask such questions as "What is freedom?" in different historical times and cultural settings. Topics that might be covered include: free will vs. determinism; hard vs. soft determinism; the role of science in our conception of freedom; political notions of freedom; existential conceptualizations of freedom; and the difference between freedom and "doing or saying whatever you wish.",

PHL 233 | ISSUES IN SEX AND GENDER | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course examines the relationship between, and the making of, sex and gender. It tackles the question of how we are and become sexuated, and critically explores the fluid boundary between the biological and the social. Topics that might be covered include: the social construction of masculinity and femininity; the nature of sexism and how it can be challenged and resisted; the ways in which intersex and trans experiences have shaped current discourse about sex and gender; binary vs. non-binary models of sex and gender; the materiality of bodies; and the policing of non-conforming bodies and identities. Students might reflect on the intersection between sex, gender, and other identity categories, such as race, class, and sexuality.

PHL 234 | PHILOSOPHY AND MODERN SOCIETY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will consider such issues as the relation between society and the state, the connections between work, leisure and poverty, and the social effects of prejudice and resentment.

PHL 235 | ENVIRONMENTAL PHILOSOPHY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course offers an introduction to environmental philosophy and the philosophical significance of environmental questions. Topics that might be covered include: philosophical conceptions of nature and the precarious boundary between nature and culture; the legacy of ancient cosmology; the development of a scientific view of nature; environmental crises such as global warming, the extinction of species, or toxic waste; environmental justice; eco-feminism and indigenous conceptions of nature; the role of technology in our relating to nature; and ethical considerations around sustainability, our treatment of animals, or deforestation.

PHL 236 | PHILOSOPHY AND THE CITY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course examines the meaning of the city for philosophy and the meaning of urbanization for the formation of values. At its inception, philosophy concerned itself with questions having to do with community and the political organization of city-states (the Greek polis). These early concerns reverberate into our own times as philosophers across the world reflect on issues such as the modernization of cities; the dynamics of city life; urbanization in relation to globalization; the public sphere and our access to public spaces; the aesthetics of urban environments; and political concerns such as gentrification, racial justice, and zoning. Students might reflect on their own situatedness in the city of Chicago as it pertains to assigned readings and to the philosophical analysis of urban spaces.

PHL 237 | PHILOSOPHY, CONFLICT AND PEACE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course engages in philosophical reflection upon the causes of war and the possibilities for peace. Emphasis will be placed on both revealing the lived realities of conflict and in situating that lived reality in terms of both local and global structures of power and oppression. Topics and perspectives that may be considered include: epistemic perspectivism; structural violence; hierarchical and lateral power relations; colonialism, neocolonialism and decolonial approaches; revolution; positive and negative peace; and strategies of humanitarian engagement.
PHL 238 | FEMINIST PHILOSOPHIES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course offers an examination of diverse feminist philosophies and their development throughout the 20th and 21st centuries. Feminist approaches that may be considered are: existential feminism; egalitarian feminism: feminisms of sexual difference: radical lesbian feminism: queer and trans feminisms: feminisms of color; and intersectional and transnational feminisms. Possible topics include: feminist readings and critiques of canonical philosophical texts and ideas; debates around biological determinism and social constructivism: feminist ethics, aesthetics, or philosophies of science; questions having to do with the relationship between sex, gender, and sexuality; the "woman" problem and the place and role of women in feminist thought; the coloniality of gender; women of color critiques of white feminisms; and debates around materiality and embodiment.

PHL 240 | LOVE, HATRED, AND RESENTMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course examines love, hatred, and resentment through various philosophical texts and methods. Questions addressed may include: What are emotions or affects? How do they arise? Are emotions such as love, hatred, and resentment legitimate and/or rational responses to particular situations? How do social conditions influence our emotions and how do emotions influence social conditions and/or actions? Do emotions play a role in forming knowledge? How have love, hatred, and resentment influenced culture, politics, aesthetics, and literature? How has philosophy treated these emotions historically and within contemporary work?

PHL 241 | ETHICS AND PUBLIC POLICY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A study of the ways in which ethics can assist us in thinking about matters of public policy.

PHL 242 | PHILOSOPHY AND TECHNOLOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course raises classic philosophical questions within today's world of technological objects, systems, and thinking. Ethics, epistemology, aesthetics, and other philosophical frameworks are used to help understand the co-existence of humanity, nonhumans, and technologies. Specific topics of discussion may include: robots; social media; digital life; algorithms; weaponry; the "singularity"; genetic engineering; and geotechnology. Traditional and contemporary works of philosophy are supplemented by critical commentaries on techno-culture and an exploration of a variety of relevant creative work.

PHL 243 | PHILOSOPHY AND FILM | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course examines philosophical themes that arise in films, and/or the philosophical significance of film. The course seeks to achieve a fluency not only in philosophy (its history, objects of concern, and critical practices), but also in the language of film interpretation (based primarily in an understanding of the practical and symbolic function of the medium).

PHL 244 | PHILOSOPHY OF RELIGION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course broaches the significance of religion and religious phenomena for philosophy. Central issues of inquiry may include: religious skepticism; pluralism in religion; arguments for the existence of God; the impact of science on religious beliefs; the place of ritual and symbolism in human life; and religious language.

PHL 245 | REASON AND SOCIETY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A study not aimed at the production of particular skills but at understanding of the proper role of reason in social institutions and the formation of public opinion.

PHL 246 | BLACK AESTHETIC THOUGHT | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In this course we examine the contributions to aesthetics made by black intellectuals in the United States and globally. The philosophical importance of black aesthetics in the areas of music, literature, and visual art will be considered as we address the historical circumstances of oppression and injustice that shaped the lives and work of the thinkers we shall study. Cross-listed with ABD 234.

PHL 247 | PHILOSOPHY AND THE VALUE OF MUSIC | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In this course, we will explore the role of music in philosophy, in particular, the value of music as a tool of social critique. Topics of investigation might include: an examination of the value of music as presented by various philosophers, the role of music in our cognitive development, and the culturally transformative power of music.

PHL 248 | BUSINESS ETHICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
An examination of various ethical and moral issues arising in contemporary business and its activities, which affect our society and the world. Topics may include choice distortion of various sorts at the individual level: ethically better and worse corporate cultures; ethical business leadership; larger macro-economic and social trends, including developments within global capitalism; and capitalism as an ideology.

PHL 250 | PHILOSOPHY AND SOCIAL CHANGE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is based upon the premise that students can learn more by actively forming their own understanding. In this community engagement course students will assume a leadership role in the investigation of theories and concepts and in the interpretation of real-world experiences with the assistance of the instructor as a guide. Besides class assignments and class discussions, students will attend an array of community meetings, informational on-site sessions, and perform productively in a community setting. Course content and community engagement activities are geared to be comprehensive and thus will call on students to bring their intellect and prior experience to the forefront while working on specific tasks and providing tangible benefits for their community partner. Students will be encouraged to synthesize academic knowledge, community engagement experience, and their particular individual abilities with the aim of promoting the goals of their service site community as well as their classroom community. This course fulfills the Junior Year Experiential Learning requirement of the Liberal Studies Program.

PHL 263 | GENDER, RACE, AND CLASS: PHILOSOPHICAL PERSPECTIVES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This class takes intersectional analysis as a fundamental premise for examining a range of philosophical perspectives on issues surrounding gender, race, and class, and the relationship between them. Drawing from diverse bodies of work, the course focuses most extensively on Black, Latinx, and decolonial feminisms, and their impact on contemporary philosophical discourse on these issues.
PHL 264 | PHILOSOPHICAL CRITIQUES OF COLONIALISM | 4 quarter hours

PHL 339 | BIOETHICS IN SOCIETY CAPSTONE SEMINAR | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

This seminar is an interdisciplinary study of the function of bioethics in society. As a discipline and as a profession, bioethics stands as a distinctive barometer of our evolving and shifting conceptions not only of health and well-being, but of the world, society, and even ourselves. The seminar explores the history of bioethics, bioethics as a clinical practice, and the various questions that arise at this crossroad from health science, medical humanities, religious studies, sociological, and philosophical perspectives. Cross-listed with REL 339 and SOC 339.
PHL 229 or HLTH 229 or REL 229 is a prerequisite for this class.

PHL 341 | AESTHETICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

This course engages in a study of philosophical aesthetics as well as of the philosophy of art, as taken up by modern thinkers such as Kant, Schiller, and Hegel. Questions to be explored might include: the meaning of concepts such as beauty and the sublime; the role of art in our way of approaching and understanding the world, and its relationship to philosophy; the role of beauty and art in education; and the philosophical analysis of aesthetic judgments. Contemporary conceptions of art and beauty from perspectives such as feminism, decoloniality, black and Latino aesthetics may be included too.
(PHL 100 or HON 105 or any 200-level PHL course) is a prerequisite for this class.

PHL 342 | PHILOSOPHY OF LAW | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

One of the most important contemporary legal theorists, H.L.A. Hart, begins The Concept of Law by pointing out that "few questions concerning human society have been asked with such persistence and answered by serious thinkers in so many diverse, strange, and paradoxical ways as the question ‘What is law?’ “ This course focuses on this question by considering various issues in the conception and practice of law such as the purpose and limits of law, the nature of judicial reasoning, property law, international law, and the relationship of law to morality and politics. The course examines different theories of law, including legal positivism, legal realism, critical race legal theory and critical feminist legal theory, asking how these different theories offer different conceptions of human rights, legal duties, liability and legal responsibility.
(PHL 100 or HON 105 or any 200-level PHL course) is a prerequisite for this class.

PHL 377 | PHILOSOPHY AND DECONSTRUCTION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is intended to be an introduction to the issues and methods of deconstruction. It begins with a look at the origins of deconstruction in thinkers such as Nietzsche, Kierkegaard, Heidegger, and Benjamin, before turning to the work of Jacques Derrida, the thinker most closely associated with the philosophical notion of "deconstruction." Through readings of Derrida and those who came to be identified with him (e.g., Blanchot, De Man, Kofman, Lacoue-Labarthe, Nancy, etc.), the course considers how deconstruction challenges such traditional philosophical notions as time as a series of linear presents, subjectivity as self-presence, representation as mimesis, and so on.

PHL 389 | LATIN AMERICAN PHILOSOPHY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
What does it mean to speak of Latin American philosophy? What is the difference between merely doing philosophy in Latin America and doing Latin American philosophy? These are issues that some thinkers in Latin America grapple with. This course explores the history and nature of Latin American philosophy. Moreover, it examines some of the reasons why, in sharp contrast to the European and Anglo-American philosophical traditions, questions of the very existence of an автоchthonous Latin American philosophical tradition are heatedly debated both in Latin America and beyond. Subjects may also include decolonial approaches to philosophy from a Latin American perspective, and connections between art, literature and philosophy in Latin America.
(PHL 100 or HON 105 or any 200-level PHL course) is a prerequisite for this class.

PHL 529 | THE PHILOSOPHICAL FOUNDATIONS OF BIOETHICS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course examines and critically assesses the conceptual foundations of various theoretical approaches to bioethics. It is divided into three parts. Part I reviews the main Western ethical traditions?Utilitarianism, Kantianism, and Virtue Ethics?and discusses how they lay the foundation for as well as challenge the canonical principles of bioethics, biomedical ethics, and medical ethics: autonomy, beneficence, justice, and non-maleficence. Part II examines the core concepts that define, in many ways, the field of bioethical inquiry?health, death, and dying?as well as the concepts that frame the practice of healthcare itself and thereby shape and mold the ethical issues arising from it: race, class, gender, disability, and culture. Part III seeks to contextualize critically the conventional account of the discipline of bioethics by exploring a number of theoretical approaches derived from the European philosophical tradition and beyond. Specifically, it investigates the use and significance of such methods as phenomenology, deconstruction, feminism, and biopolitical analyses for rethinking the clinical encounter, the meaning of new medical technologies, and the relationship between scientific knowledge and social and political power.

(Undergraduate)
This course introduces students to strength training principles and activities: free weights, resistance machines, and functional exercises. Emphasis is placed on the development of strength and flexibility of the major muscle groups. Health-related fitness guidelines are presented to assist the student in developing overall fitness. (2 credit hours)

PE 70 | ADVANCED AEROBIC CONDITIONING | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Advanced instruction in appropriate conditioning techniques and daily participation in monitored strenuous levels of aerobic exercise. (2 credit hours)

PE 060 is a prerequisite for this class.

PE 71 | FITNESS AND CONDITIONING | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
(2 credits)
The main components of health-related fitness: cardiovascular endurance, muscular strength, muscular endurance, flexibility, and body composition are integrated into the fitness sessions, topic presentations, and health/fitness assessments. Emphasis is placed on improving overall wellness through exercise and healthy lifestyle choices. (2 credit hours)

PE 72 | YOGA | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will introduce the philosophy, techniques, and benefits of Hatha Yoga to the beginning students and allow the experienced students to expand upon their knowledge. Participants will develop skills to deepen conscious awareness and focus through asana practice (physical practice of yoga), body alignment, breathing techniques, and relaxation. The emphasis of the class will be on how to properly practice yoga, how to incorporate it into daily life, and how to safely teach asana. Course modules will include physical practice, handouts, support materials, and a quiz. Students will be required to attend and participate in class. The development of an independent home practice of yoga outside of DePaul will be necessary for success in the course. (2 credit hours)

PE 76 | ADVANCED WEIGHT TRAINING | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Advanced instruction and participation in the use of free weights and various machines for body building and weight training. (2 credit hours)

PE 066 is a prerequisite for this class.

PE 80 | RAPE AGGRESSION DEFENSE SYSTEMS | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This 30-hour self-defense course is open to all female students and teaches awareness, prevention, risk reduction and avoidance techniques. In addition, students will learn the importance of physical fitness and perform exercises designed to improve their speed, physical strength and flexibility to aid them in self-defense. At the end of the course, students will be given the opportunity to test their knowledge and skills in various attack scenarios, under the supervision of at least one certified R.A.D. Basic Physical Defense instructor, in a safe and supportive environment. (2 credit hours)

PE 121 | SWIMMING | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is designed to provide the student with skill instruction and analysis of the most widely used swimming strokes and basic dives. Principles of hydrodynamics and basic water safety will also be emphasized. Various individual skill levels will be considered to provide a safe and inclusive experience. Additionally, this course introduces the student to the concepts and procedures for teaching basic swimming in a school setting. (2 credit hours)

PE 151 | GYMNASTICS | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course introduces the student to the concepts and procedures for teaching basic gymnastics in a school setting. Emphasis will be given equally to skill acquisition, spotting techniques, explanation/demonstration of skills, and the theoretical framework that supports a gymnastics program. Students will be provided with the opportunity to acquire skills and spotting techniques for basic stunts, tumbling, balance, balance beam, parallel bars, vaulting, and rhythmic gymnastics. (2 credit hours)

PE 317 | PHYSICAL EDUCATION AND CLASSROOM MANAGEMENT IN THE ELEMENTARY SCHOOL | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The course is designed to promote an understanding of the contribution that physical education makes to the elementary school curriculum and the development of the whole child. Lesson planning, instructional delivery, assessment of learning and classroom management will be focused as students engage in 15-20 hours of supervised field experience teaching whole classes of children in local schools. This course is for Physical Education majors only; however, EE majors will be considered if the course is needed for student teaching in the subsequent quarter.
A Physical Education major in Advanced Standing is a prerequisite for this class.

PE 325 | LANGUAGE AND LITERACY IN THE PHYSICAL EDUCATION SETTING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This survey course explores the roles of language and literacy in the physical education setting and the teacher’s responsibility for fostering them in all students. Through guided examination of prevailing theories of language acquisition and development that currently influence classroom practices across the K-12 continuum as well as across disciplinary and content areas, this course enables future teachers of physical education to grow in their understanding of the varied literacy-learning contexts that students bring to their physical education experiences. Issues that emerge in planning and conducting literacy instruction in programs with diverse student demographics are discussed and deliberated through University classroom sessions as well as required field experiences (10 hours, minimum; Level I). Course participants enjoy multiple opportunities to apply and analyze theories; to observe, critique, and practice planning as well as instructional strategies; to make informed curricular and instructional decisions; and to use assessment in conjunction with knowledge of child development to inform their planning. This course is designed to assist future teachers in producing students who are strategic readers, skilled speakers and writers, effective communicators, active listeners, independent and critical thinkers/learners, and problem solvers. Such teachers will exhibit awareness of their own metacognitive processes, respect for diversity, necessary social skills, and an ability to develop, set, and strive for professional goals. Candidates enrolled in this course will be encouraged to become education advocates, positive role models for their students, effective colleagues and collaborators, and lifelong learners.

PE 341 | HISTORICAL AND PHILOSOPHICAL FOUNDATIONS OF PHYSICAL EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will review the history of sport, fitness and physical education; the impact that events have had on their development; and how physical education, fitness and the use of sport is influenced by society. Emphasis will be placed on philosophical perspectives and ethical values of this profession, both for the educator and the sport & fitness management employee. Content is devoted to the study and understanding of sport and physical activity within numerous cultures throughout history to support diversity and help students consider the multiple perspectives expressed through the incorporation of sport and physical activity.

PE 346 | ORGANIZATION/ADMINISTRATION OF PHYSICAL EDUCATION, SPORTS & FITNESS PROGRAMS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Organization and Administration of Physical Education, Sports, and Fitness Programs. Emphasis is placed on understanding the management process: functions, application to various settings, program development, budget, facilities, marketing/promotion, and risk management.

Advanced Teacher Candidate Standing or status as an Exercise Science student is a prerequisite for this class.

PE 351 | KINESIOLOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Biomechanical analysis of the human body and how the human body moves. Scientific principals and their application to human movement are included. Application is made to fundamental and specialized motor skills. Development and maintenance of the human structure through intelligent selection of activities and efficient use. Lecture is supplemented with in class laboratory activities.

BIO 201 and BIO 202, Advanced Teacher Candidate Standing or students in BS-EXR-SCI plan, are prerequisites for this class.

PE 352 | PHYSIOLOGY OF EXERCISE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Effects of muscular activity on the systems of the body. Nature of neuro-muscular activity, circulatory and respiratory adjustments during exercise, metabolic and environmental aspects of exercise, fatigue and training fitness. Lecture is supplemented with in class laboratory activities.

BIO 201 and BIO 202, Advanced Teacher Candidate Standing or students in BS-EXR-SCI plan, are prerequisites for this class.

PE 360 | EDUCATIONAL PSYCHOLOGY AND MEASUREMENT OF LEARNING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course presents those principles of educational psychology specifically related to the psychomotor learning domain, the selection of tests to measure learning of physical skills for all populations, administration of tests, data collection, and the statistical analysis needed to evaluate the learning process. Specifically, measures of central tendency, variability and correlation statistics; and standard tests of health and skill related components of fitness, motor performance, anthropometry, and specific sport analysis will be included in this course.

Advanced Teacher Candidate Standing or status as an Exercise Science student is a prerequisite for this class.

PE 362 | FITNESS TESTING, ASSESSMENT AND PRESCRIPTION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is designed to provide theoretical knowledge of and select practical skills in fitness assessment, exercise program design, and client instruction in preparation for a national certification exam in personal training. Topics include guidelines for instructing safe, effective, and purposeful exercise, essentials of the client-trainer relationship, conducting health and fitness assessments, and designing and implementing appropriate exercise programming.
Liberal Studies program. This course is designed to provide an understanding of physical education curriculum planning, teaching methods, classroom management, unit and lesson plans in a secondary school setting. Students will engage in 20-24 hours of field work to observe and participate in whole class instruction, in an attempt to integrate theoretical classroom content with on-site experiences.

Advanced Teacher Candidate Standing is a prerequisite for this class.

PE 374 | ADAPTED PHYSICAL EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Diversified program of development activities, games, sports and rhythms suited to the interests, capacities, and limitations of students with disabilities who may not be able to participate in the general physical education program.

BIO 201 and BIO 202, Advanced Teacher Candidate Standing or students in BS-EXR-SCI plan, are prerequisites for this class.

PE 378 | PHYSICAL EDUCATION STUDENT TEACHING IN ELEMENTARY EDUCATION | 6 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Five school days a week of supervised teaching in a cooperating elementary school for half an academic quarter. Feedback and discussion of problems encountered in student teaching as well as new materials and techniques of student teaching. Application and approval required. Open to only DePaul students. (6 credit hours)

PE 379 | PHYSICAL EDUCATION STUDENT TEACHING IN SECONDARY EDUCATION | 6 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Five school days a week of supervised teaching in a cooperating secondary school for half an academic quarter. Feedback and discussion of problems encountered in student teaching as well as new materials and techniques of student teaching. Application and approval required. Open only to DePaul students. (6 hours)

PE 380 | INTERNSHIP IN EXERCISE SCIENCE | 10 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Four hundred hours of supervised training in a health, fitness, sport, or exercise setting will be completed through this course. Students will receive practical experience in fitness testing, individual and group training, class instruction, program planning, and other facets of exercise science programming. Students will complete a project that will relate their educational background to the practical setting as they have chosen to work in, and present their work to the internship site. Special interests of students will be addressed based on the internship site. Open only to students who have applied and been accepted by the exercise science program advisor and must have completed all coursework and clinical hours for the exercise science degree. (10 credit hours)

PE 384 | PHYSICAL EDUCATION CAPSTONE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The senior capstone course is designed to help students integrate the central emphases of their liberal learning studies curriculum into their professional behavior. It will provide prospective physical education teachers with opportunities to engage in activities requiring them to be reflective, to consider value commitments, to use critical and creative thinking, and to examine their practice from a multicultural perspective as they discuss issues specific to early childhood education. The course is grounded in the College of Education’s framework for an Urban Professional Multicultural Educator, which also reflects the goals of the Liberal Studies program.

PE 387 | CAPSTONE SEMINAR IN PHYSICAL EDUCATION & EXERCISE SCIENCE | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is designed to help candidates integrate the central emphases of their Liberal Studies curriculum with their professional knowledge and behavior. It provides opportunities and activities to prospective professionals that engage them in being analytic and reflective upon their major and related disciplines; guide them in further considering their value commitments and how they relate to their chosen profession; apply critical and creative thinking in addressing ‘real-time’ professional issues and needs; and examine extant practices from multicultural perspectives. Candidates develop a professional portfolio that reflects the standards of the various guiding professional organizations and/or the Illinois State Board of Education (ISBE). The course is grounded in the College of Education’s framework for an Urban Professional Multicultural Educator as well as the goals of the Liberal Studies program. The course is taken simultaneously with student teaching or internship. COREQUISITE(S): PE 378 and PE 379, or PE 380. (2 credit hours)

PE 390 | PSYCHO-SOCIAL ASPECTS OF EXERCISE AND SPORT | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Psycho-Social Aspects of Exercise and Sport. Principles of human behavior, psychology, sociology, and motivational theory are covered as they relate to exercise fitness and sport. Students are introduced to personality factors, leadership skills, psychological skills training, and group dynamics which play important roles in the psychological development of individuals involved in exercise and sport programs.

Advanced Teacher Candidate Standing or status as an Exercise Science student is a prerequisite for this class.

PE 391 | THEORY AND TECHNIQUES OF COACHING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is designed to introduce areas from which basic coaching theories and techniques of various sports can be developed, to expose students to situations which place the coach in a decision making position and encourage students to examine practical problems which will influence the quality of an athletic program.

PE 392 | ADVANCED ATHLETIC TRAINING TECHNIQUES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This is an advanced course dealing with the principles and techniques of prevention, recognition, and treatment of athletic injuries.

PE 303 is a prerequisite for this class.

PE 393 | THERAPEUTIC EXERCISE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course introduces students to the application and theory of specific exercise guidelines and program design for individuals with chronic illnesses, orthopedic conditions, and major athletic injuries. Special populations will also be addressed such as children, pregnant women, the elderly, blind, and deaf individuals. Emphasis is placed on planning and teaching techniques based on the basic FITT principle, and modifying programs to meet the needs of the specific individual. Students will learn specific modifications for all domains of exercise: cardiorespiratory, muscular strength and endurance, flexibility, and balance, with the focus on rehabilitation and health promotion.

Advanced Teacher Candidate Standing or status as an Exercise Science student is a prerequisite for this class.
PE 394 | SPORT AND EXERCISE NUTRITION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will provide the student with advanced knowledge of all areas of nutrition as they relate to the different types of exercise and sports. Prior basic nutritional knowledge is required for successful completion of this course. Topics will include but not limited to substrate utilization during different types of metabolic processes, hyper-hydration and nutrient loading prior to activity, nutrient maintenance during various types of exercise, recovery nutrition, nutrition planning for weight management, sport specific nutrition and consumer issues related to sport supplementation.

PE 273 is a prerequisite for this class.

PE 399 | INDEPENDENT STUDY IN PHYSICAL EDUCATION | 1-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Permission of Department Chair and Associate Dean are required. (1 credit hour)

PE 400 | INTRODUCTION TO THE SPORT, FITNESS AND RECREATION LEADERSHIP PROGRAM | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will provide an overall introduction to the Sport, Fitness and Recreation Leadership online graduate program (MSFRL). Coursework, pillars of knowledge, expectations, potential employment, and management concepts in sport, fitness, and recreational will be covered. Acceptance into the MSFRL program is a prerequisite for this course.

PE 410 | ORGANIZATIONAL LEADERSHIP AND MANAGEMENT IN SPORT, FITNESS AND RECREATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will examine concepts in administration and communication specific to supervisory relationships. Students will understand the function and application of administrative theory within the fields of sport and fitness.

PE 420 | FACILITY AND RISK MANAGEMENT IN SPORT, FITNESS AND RECREATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Students will be introduced to the planning, designing and management of sport, recreation, and fitness facilities. Students will identify strengths and weaknesses of major facilities and will design their own facility upon completion of this course.

PE 430 | ADVANCED HEALTH AND SCIENCE CONCEPTS IN SPORT, FITNESS AND RECREATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will present advanced concepts in health for the individual interested in Health Education or the Allied Health Professions. The content will include health principles related to individual athletes throughout the life span, wellness concepts, and strategies for coping with potentially dangerous behaviors. The students will reflect on how to incorporate knowledge of health into their physical education and health classes in schools or community settings.

PE 435 | ADVANCED CARE OF THE ATHLETE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is designed to expand the student's knowledge of athletic injuries, incorporating hands-on experience. Topics will include current issues in anatomy and physiology; athletic first aid and emergency situations; standard procedure for diagnosis and treatment; conditioning, pre-habilitation and rehabilitation; heat stress injuries; nutrition and eating disorders; taping, wrapping and bracing; and other related topics in sports medicine.

PE 440 | STRATEGIC COMMUNICATION AND MARKETING IN SPORT, FITNESS AND RECREATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Students will examine communications tools such as advertising, sales, and publicity, social media, media relations and public relations to examine how they are vital to an organization's marketing plan. Students will create a marketing plan specific to a chosen area of study. This course will also focus on leadership and communication skills vital in building professional relationships. Relationships between sport and fitness organizations and consumers will be examined.

PE 442 | ON-CAMPUS SEMINAR | 2 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will provide 1st year students with the opportunity to network with their peers and professionals in the field. They will also attend presentations by local professionals in sport, fitness, and recreational fields, as well as presentations of 2nd year students' research projects. (2 credit hours)

PE 445 | PROGRAM AND SPECIAL EVENTS MANAGEMENT IN SPORT, FITNESS AND RECREATION LEADERSHIP | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will also introduce students to planning, operating, fund raising, and evaluating events within their chosen area of sport or fitness. Principles of hospitality and public relations also will be studied. Students will plan a hypothetical event upon the completion of this course.

PE 450 | PSYCHOLOGY OF SPORT BEHAVIOR AND ATHLETIC PERFORMANCE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
A study of the philosophical and psychological concepts pertaining to sports, in general, and competitive athletic programs specifically. Students will analyze the various coaching and administrative techniques in sports programs. Emphasis will be given to intercollegiate sports. Elementary, secondary and professional sports programs will be examined and discussed. Motivation to exercise socially, recreationally, and in sport will be examined.

PE 452 | EXERCISE SCIENCE AND SPORT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
A study of the advanced concepts and theory pertaining to analysis of human movement. Application will be made for the teaching of fundamental motor skills as well as the specialized analysis made by the coach. Discussion of the various techniques, sophisticated equipment, and empirical evidence will support the conclusions determined in the seminar. The course will be designed for professional physical educators and individuals involved in the coaching profession.

PE 455 | LITERATURE REVIEW FOR CAPSTONE PROJECT | 0 quarter hour
(Graduate)
This course is included in the MS in Sport, Fitness, and Recreation curriculum as a pre-requisite for PE 555: Research in Sport, Fitness, and Recreation. Prior to beginning the research for capstone projects, students must complete a review of the literature related to their topic. This review must be approved by their faculty capstone advisor and the program director. The course can be taken at any time and a grade of PASS must be received prior to registering for PE 555 during spring of their second year.
PE 457 | ADVANCED COACHING THEORIES & TECHNIQUES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is designed to cover a review of basic coaching theories and techniques of various sports and then cover advanced theories and application of these theories. The goal of the course is to expose students to situations that will place the coach in a decision making position and encourage students to examine practical problems that will influence the quality of an athletic program. (Cross-listed with PE 391)

PE 460 | ETHICS AND DIVERSITY IN SPORT, FITNESS AND RECREATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will examine current issues and challenges related to the sport, fitness and recreation environments. The examination will focus on ethical behavior and decision making and ultimately to improve risk management in these area. Major consideration will be given to issues relating to development of goals and objectives, preparation of program budgets, financial considerations, media input, and legal ramifications of the various programs.

PE 470 | LEGAL ISSUES IN SPORT, FITNESS AND RECREATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will develop a student’s ability to apply legal principles to sport and fitness management situations. Students will examine legal liability of coaches, administrators and fitness professionals, negligence, constitutional and administrative law, product liability, and risk management. There also will be an analysis and study of the governing structure, rules, and legislative processes within the NCAA.

PE 480 | FINANCE AND REVENUE GENERATION IN SPORT AND FITNESS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Students will understand basic concepts of financial management and managerial economics relevant to recreation and sport settings, emphasizing financial analysis, short- and long-term financing, fundraising, sponsorship, financial troubleshooting, capital structuring and budgeting, fundraising, revenue and cost-control.

PE 490 | ON-CAMPUS SEMINAR | 2 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will provide 2nd year students with the opportunity to network with their peers and professionals in the field of sport, fitness, and recreation. They will also attend presentations by local professionals, as well as present their final research projects. (2 credit hours)

PE 500 | CAPSTONE IN SPORT, FITNESS AND RECREATION LEADERSHIP | 2 quarter hours
(Graduate)
The capstone experience will support the student during their last quarter in the program while completing program research and preparation for seminar presentation. (2 credit hours)

PE 555 | RESEARCH IN SPORT, FITNESS AND RECREATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Under the guidance of an advisor, students will complete a culminating research project for completion of the degree. PE 455 is a prerequisite for this class.

Physics (PHY)

PHY 104 | THE SUN & ITS PLANETS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course focuses on the development of our knowledge about the Solar System with an emphasis on the origin, structure and motion of the planets and the Sun. Topics include both historical astronomy and our current understanding based on information from spacecraft sent to other planets. Cannot receive credit for both PHY 104 and PHY 114.

PHY 110 | BASIC ELECTRONICS: PRINCIPLES & TECHNIQUES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Introduction to analog electronics that develops the basic principles needed to understand consumer electronics. Emphasis is given to audio applications, but the same basic principles are the foundation of modern computer technology.

PHY 114 | EXPLORING OTHER WORLDS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Activity-based course that compares the local environment of Earth in the Solar System to worlds and environments elsewhere in the Universe. Cannot receive credit for both PHY 104 and PHY 114.

PHY 120 | HOW THINGS WORK | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will develop an understanding of the physics of everyday objects and experiences such as bouncing balls, roller coasters, balloons, thermostats, violins, microwave ovens and sun glasses. The relevant physics concepts will be introduced through demonstrations and simple experiments.

PHY 150 | GENERAL PHYSICS I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course provides a comprehensive, non-calculus introduction to physics. Vectors, forces, Newtonia mechanics of translational and rotational motion. This course is intended for life science and health science majors.

MAT 131 or above is a prerequisite for this class.

PHY 151 | GENERAL PHYSICS II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Continuation of PHY 150. Topics include heat, thermodynamics, sound and light.

PHY 150 or PHY 170 is a prerequisite for this class

PHY 152 | GENERAL PHYSICS III | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Continuation of PHY 151. Topics include electricity, magnetism and modern physics.

PHY 151 is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 155 | GENERAL PHYSICS | 6 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A combination of Physics 150 plus half of 151. Summer only. (6 quarter hours)

MAT 131 or above is a prerequisite for this class.
PHY 156 | GENERAL PHYSICS | 6 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A combination of the last half of Physics 151 plus 152. Summer only. (6 quarter hours)
PHY 155, PHY 151, or PHY 171 is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 170 | UNIVERSITY PHYSICS I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course provides a comprehensive, calculus-based introduction to Newtonian mechanics. Topics include vectors, Newton's laws, linear and rotational motion. Course intended for majors in a physical science, required for the physics major. Offered in autumn quarter.
MAT 147 or MAT 150 or MAT 160 is a co-requisite for this class.

PHY 171 | UNIVERSITY PHYSICS II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A continuation of PHY 170. Topics include heat, sound and light. Offered in winter quarter.
MAT 148 or MAT 151 or MAT 161 is a co-requisite for this class.

PHY 172 | UNIVERSITY PHYSICS III | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A continuation of PHY 171. Topics include electricity and magnetism. Offered spring quarter.
MAT 149 or MAT 152 or MAT 162 is a co-requisite for this class.

PHY 190 | MATLAB PROGRAMMING FOR SCIENTISTS AND MATHEMATICIANS | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Introduction to the Matlab Programming environment with an emphasis on applications of interest to science and mathematics students. Topics include basic operations, functions and scripts, arguments and scope, and graphics. Applications include curve fitting, visualization of data, root finding, and solving systems of equations. (2 quarter hours)

PHY 200 | LIGHT AND ATOMS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A conceptual treatment of light and matter, which emphasizes the counter-intuitive behavior of atoms, electrons and photons. Topics covered include the electrical nature of matter, wave-particle duality, the uncertainty principle, and philosophical implications. Some applications to technology will also be discussed such as lasers, fiber optic communication, superconductivity, and magnetic storage of data.
LSP 120 or HON 180 or (MAT 130 or above) or consent of instructor is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 204 | FRONTIERS OF THE UNIVERSE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Focuses on the tremendous increase in our understanding of the universe beyond the Solar System that has occurred in recent years. Topics include stellar evolution, the properties of stars, supernova explosions, black holes, galaxies, and the origin of the universe.
LSP 120 or HON 180 or (MAT 130 or above) or consent of instructor is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 205 | EINSTEIN’S PECULIAR IDEAS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A conceptual treatment of Einstein’s groundbreaking ideas about space, time, and the nature of reality. Topics covered include special relativity, Einstein’s contributions to quantum physics, including his criticisms of its orthodox interpretation, and some aspects of his theory of gravity. Aspects of Einstein’s thoughts on social issues will also be briefly discussed.
LSP 120 or HON 180 or (MAT 130 or above) or consent of instructor is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 206 | SOUND AND ACOUSTICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Sound waves, their production, transmission and detection; applications to music, acoustics and noise pollution.
LSP 120 or HON 180 or (MAT 130 or above) or consent of instructor is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 220 | OCEANOGRAPHY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Develops the concepts of physical oceanography. Topics include the chemical and physical properties of seawater, the dynamics of ocean currents and circulation, the physics of water waves and tides, the interaction of the ocean with the atmosphere, the formation of coastlines, and the effects of pollution on the ocean. Cross-listed with GEO 220.
LSP 120 or HON 180 or (MAT 130 or above) or consent of instructor is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 223 | LIGHT, COLOR, AND PHOTOGRAPHY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
LSP 120 or HON 180 or (MAT 130 or above) or consent of instructor is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 225 | EARTH’S CHANGING CLIMATE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Develops the physical concepts needed to understand the atmosphere, the oceans, and their interactions with the aim of building a conceptual model of weather and climate. Long-term climate variability and climate related environmental issues are also discussed. Cross-listed with GEO 225.
LSP 120 or HON 180 or (MAT 130 or above) or consent of instructor is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 231 | LINEAR ELECTRIC CIRCUITS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Frequency response and feedback, operational amplifiers as linear amplifiers, active filters, oscillators, communication circuits and data conversion circuits.
PHY 110 is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 232 | INTRODUCTION TO DIGITAL ELECTRONICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
LSP 120 or HON 180 or (MAT 130 or above) or consent of instructor is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 236 | THE SCIENCE OF DIGITAL AUDIO | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Introduction to the physics and mathematics of digital audio, including the conversion of sound energy into electrical signals, the digitization of the signal, conversion of the signal to a standard format, storage of the signal on a hard disk or a CD, and manipulation of the digitized signal. Also includes a discussion of the ethics and legality of downloading digitized audio, in the context of intellectual property rights. This course assumes familiarity with trigonometric mathematical functions.
LSP 120 or HON 180 or (MAT 130 or above) or consent of instructor is a prerequisite for this course.
PHY 270 | UNIVERSITY PHYSICS IV | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
An introduction to 20th-century physics. Topics include special relativity, quantum mechanics, and statistical analysis of data.
PHY 172 is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 300 | METHODS OF COMPUTATIONAL AND THEORETICAL PHYSICS I | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Computational and theoretical methods in ordinary differential equations, complex numbers, systems of equations, phase plane analysis, bifurcations. Applications to damped, driven oscillators, electronics.
COREQUISITE(S): MAT 261.

PHY 301 | METHODS OF COMPUTATIONAL AND THEORETICAL PHYSICS II | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
PHY 300 is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 310 | MECHANICS I | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Newtonian motion in a one-, two-, and three-dimensional motion, conservative systems, variational principles, Lagrangian and Hamiltonian mechanics, central-force problems.
PHY 300 is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 311 | MECHANICS II | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Continuation of PHY 310. Topics include systems of particles, collisions and scattering, motion in rotating frames, rigid body motion.
PHY 310 is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 315 | CHAOS IN PHYSICAL SYSTEMS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Motion in phase space, characteristics of chaotic systems, Lyapunov exponents, stability of equilibrium solutions, strange attractors, bifurcations, discrete dynamics, and applications to lasers, fluids, and other physical systems.
PHY 300 is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 320 | ELECTRICITY AND MAGNETISM I | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Solutions to electrostatic, magnetostatics, and boundary-value problems. Introduction to Coulomb's law, Gauss's law, Biot-Savart law, and electric and magnetic potentials.
PHY 301 is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 321 | ELECTRICITY AND MAGNETISM II | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
A continuation of PHY 320. Topics include Maxwell's equations, time varying fields, electromagnetic waves, and radiation.
PHY 320 is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 325 | LASER PHYSICS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Interaction of radiation and matter, pumping mechanisms for lasers, optical resonators, cw and transient laser behavior, laser types, current topics in optical physics. Cross-listed as PHY 425.
PHY 300 is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 330 | SENIOR CAPSTONE PHYSICAL SCIENCE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Senior Capstone in the Physical Sciences. Topics in the physical sciences and their social, political, environmental and economic impact.
Student standing of at least junior level is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 335 | NON-EQUILIBRIUM PHYSICS AND SELF-ORGANIZATION | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
The spontaneous formation of structure is one of the most interesting phenomenon in nature and arises in fields as diverse as physics, chemistry, biology, management, economics, and sociology. Many self-organizing systems show similarities in the way the structure arises, indicating that there are underlying general principles that govern these systems. This course will investigate these principles. PHY 340 or consent recommended.
PHY 301 is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 340 | THERMAL PHYSICS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Statistical interpretation of the fundamental concepts of thermodynamics and its physical applications.
PHY 301 is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 342 | COMPUTATIONAL PHYSICS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Computational solution and simulation of physical systems; applications chosen from nonlinear dynamics, optics, central-force motion, fluids, condensed matter.
PHY 301 is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 345 | OPTICS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Matrix methods for image formation, diffraction, interferometry, coherence, scattering, polarization, holography, Fourier transform spectroscopy. PHY 320 recommended.
PHY 301 is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 350 | THERMAL PHYSICS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Solution of Maxwell's equations for dielectric waveguides, optical communications, nonlinear effects in dielectric waveguides, and current research. PHY 321 recommended. Cross-listed with PHY 456.
PHY 301 is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 356 | FIBER OPTICS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Introduction to quantum mechanics, including the solution of the Schrodinger equation in one and three dimensions for a variety of potentials. Applications to atomic systems and solids.
PHY 301 is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 360 | QUANTUM MECHANICS I | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Continuation of PHY 360. Applications of quantum mechanics, including time-independent and time-dependent perturbation theory, the variational principle, and an introduction to scattering theory.
PHY 360 is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 365 | NUCLEAR PHYSICS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Theoretical and phenomenological approaches to nuclear structure and strong, electromagnetic, and weak interactions of nuclei. Topics of study include the theory of scattering and decay of nuclei, resonances, nuclear models.
PHY 360 is a prerequisite for this course.
PHY 366 | RADIATION PHYSICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Radioactive decay processes, interactions of radiation with matter, general properties of radiation detectors, and applications to basic nuclear spectroscopy, health physics and medical physics. Cross-listed w/ PHY 466.
PHY 270 is a prerequisite for this course.
PHY 370 | ELECTRONICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A laboratory course covering analysis and construction of analog and digital circuits used in experimental research.
PHY 301 is a prerequisite for this course.
PHY 373 | STAR FORMATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will cover various topics related to Star Formation and the Interstellar Medium. Topics include: Molecular Line Radiation, Molecular Cloud Observations, Radiative Transfer, The Interstellar Medium, Physical Processes in Molecular Clouds, the Star Formation Rate: Galactic and Extragalactic, Magnetic Fields: Theory and Observations, Stages in Low Mass and High Mass Star Formation, Disks and Outflows.
PHY 301 is a prerequisite for this course.
PHY 375 | INTRODUCTION TO COSMOLOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Provides a foundation to the core concepts of cosmology, with an emphasis on developing physical insight. Discusses recent major developments in cosmology, such as the cosmological constant and accelerating universe, and key future developments, including details of the cosmic microwave background and gravitational wave detection. PHY 310 recommended.
PHY 301 is a prerequisite for this course.
PHY 376 | INTRODUCTION TO PHYSICS EDUCATION RESEARCH | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course covers effective teaching methods for physics, findings from physics education research, and the use of technology in physics classrooms. Course is required to serve as a Teaching Assistant within the department. Cross listed with PHY 485.
PHY 301 is a prerequisite for this course.
PHY 377 | TOPICS IN PHYSICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Current topics in applied physics, as determined by the interests of the instructor and students.
PHY 301 is a prerequisite for this course.
PHY 380 | EXPERIMENTAL PHYSICS I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Experimental techniques in optics, atomic and nuclear physics. Approved for Experiential Learning Credit.
PHY 270 and PHY 301 are a prerequisite for this course.
PHY 401 | ELECTRICITY AND MAGNETISM FOR TEACHERS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
The principles of electricity and magnetism, including electric circuits. This level is appropriate for regular and AP high school Physics teachers. Only offered by arrangement.

PHY 402 | ATOMIC AND NUCLEAR PHYSICS FOR TEACHERS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course provides a broad perspective for teachers. It includes atomic, nuclear and some particle physics. Only offered by arrangement.

PHY 403 | TOPICS IN PHYSICS TEACHING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Selected topics for high school teachers. May be taken more than once. Only offered by arrangement.

PHY 404 | OPTICS FOR TEACHERS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Geometrical and physical optics from the perspective of high school teaching. Applications to photography and holography. Only offered by arrangement.

PHY 406 | VIBRATIONS, WAVES AND SOUND FOR TEACHERS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Techniques for teaching high school science including musical acoustics and sound reproduction. Only offered by arrangement.

PHY 410 | CHAOS IN PHYSICAL SYSTEMS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Motion in phasespace, characteristics of chaotic systems, Lyapunov exponents, stability of equilibria, strange attractors, bifurcations, discrete dynamics, applications to lasers, fluids, and other physical systems.

PHY 411 | ELECTRODYNAMICS I | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Electrostatics and magnetostatics in vacuum and in media; electromagnetic induction; Maxwell’s equations; the Poynting vector; electromagnetic wave propagation.

PHY 412 | QUANTUM MECHANICS I | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Schroedinger equation, operators, eigenvalues; series of eigenfunctions; physical interpretation; one- and three-dimensional applications.

PHY 420 | ELECTRODYNAMICS II | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Further studies of electromagnetic wave propagation; scattering; dispersion; bounded structures and guided waves; electromagnetic radiation, including multipole radiations and radiation from systems of radiators.

PHY 411 is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 425 | LASER PHYSICS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Interaction of radiation and matter, pumping mechanisms for lasers, optical resonators, cw and transient laser behavior, laser types, current topics in optical physics. Cross-listed with PHY 325.

PHY 435 | NON-EQUILIBRIUM PHYSICS AND SELF-ORGANIZATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
The spontaneous formation of structure is one of the most interesting phenomenon in nature and arises in fields as diverse as physics, chemistry, biology, management, economics, and sociology. Many self-organizing systems show similarities in the way the structure arises, indicating that there are underlying general principles that govern these systems. This course will investigate these principles. PHY 340 or consent recommended.

PHY 440 | CLASSICAL MECHANICS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Variational principles; Lagrangian and Hamiltonian mechanics; small oscillations; canonical transformations; Hamilton-Jacobi theory.

PHY 442 | COMPUTATIONAL PHYSICS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Contemporary Topics in physics are examined via numerical solutions. Calculations using an interactive approach and graphical representation are used extensively.

PHY 445 | STATISTICAL MECHANICS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Principles of statistical mechanics; applications to weakly interacting systems such as the classical plasma and Fermi gas; strongly interacting systems; transport theory; fluctuations and irreversible processes, phase transitions.

PHY 450 | PHASE TRANSITIONS & CRITICAL PHENOMENON | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Applications of equilibrium statistical mechanics to the study of phase transitions and critical phenomena. Topics include the Ising model of magnetism, critical phenomena in fluids, mean field theory, Landau-Ginzburg theory, and the renormalization group.

PHY 340 and PHY 445 are prerequisites for this course.

PHY 454 | FOURIER OPTICS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Fourier Optics and optical processing of information. Topics include diffraction theory, optical transfer functions and holography. The Fourier Transform and Fast Fourier Transform are used extensively.

PHY 456 | FIBER OPTICS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
(Cross-listed as PHY 356) Solution of Maxwell’s equations for dialectic wave guides, optical communications, nonlinear effect in dialectic wave guides, and current research.

PHY 460 | QUANTUM MECHANICS II | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Review of basic quantum theory; vector spaces; linear operators; observables; commutators; projection operations; representations; angular momentum theory; systems of identical particles; invariance.

PHY 420 is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 465 | NUCLEAR PHYSICS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Theoretical and phenomenological approaches to nuclear structure and strong, electromagnetic, and weak interactions of nuclei. Topics of study include the theory of scattering and decay of nuclei, resonances, nuclear models.

PHY 360 is a prerequisite for this course.
PHY 466 | RADIATION PHYSICS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Interactions of X-rays, nuclear radiations, etc. with matter; radiation detectors; dosimetry; shielding; applications to medical physics. Cross-listed with PHY 366.

PHY 470 | ADVANCED GRADUATE LABORATORY TECHNIQUES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Advance laboratory techniques and measuring devices are used to study optics, atomic and nuclear, and condensed matter physics. Advanced data analysis techniques are also introduced. Emphasis is on individual research projects. Physics Graduate standing is a prerequisite.

PHY 475 | INTRODUCTION TO COSMOLOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Provides a foundation to the core concepts of cosmology, with an emphasis on developing physical insight. Discusses recent major developments in cosmology, such as the cosmological constant and accelerating universe, and key future developments, including details of the cosmic microwave background and gravitational wave detection.

PHY 476 | ASTRONOMICAL DATA ANALYSIS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will cover various topics related to data analysis in astrophysics across a multitude of wavelengths. Topics include: Ground-based and space-based optical observations, infrared, and X-ray observations, single-dish and interferometric radio observations, multi-wavelength data processing.

PHY 478 | TOPICS IN PHYSICS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course number is reserved for individual study at the graduate level. Special seminars organized from time to time to accommodate the needs of groups of students in specialized subjects of topical interest.

PHY 480 | THESIS RESEARCH | 1-8 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course number designates research performed to gather thesis material. Up to two registrations are allowed. No less than four quarter hours; no more than eight quarter hours total credit.

PHY 485 | INTRODUCTION TO PHYSICS EDUCATION RESEARCH | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course covers effective teaching methods for physics, findings from physics education research, and the use of technology in physics classrooms. Course is required to serve as a Teaching Assistant within the department. Cross listed with PHY 385.

PHY 490 | STRUCTURAL PROPERTIES OF MATERIALS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Periodicity, symmetry and classification of crystal structure; X-ray diffraction; reciprocal lattice; crystal binding. Debye theory of heat capacity; anharmonic interactions; point defects; surfaces. PHY 360 is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 491 | ELECTRONIC PROPERTIES OF MATERIALS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
The free-electron gas model; energy band theory; theory of metals and alloys; transport phenomenena; dia- and para-magnetism, ferromagnetism, and antiferromagnetism; superconductivity. PHY 360 is a prerequisite for this course.

PHY 495 | METHODS OF THEORETICAL PHYSICS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Special functions, complex integration, calculus of variations, coordinate transformations. Cross-listed with PHY 395.

PHY 701 | CANDIDACY CONTINUATION | 0 quarter hour
(Graduate)
Students who have completed their coursework and are actively working on the requirements for the Master’s thesis must enroll in candidacy continuation each quarter of the academic year until the Master’s requirement has been completed. This course carries the equivalent of half-time student enrollment status. Course requires graduate program director approval and proof of work each quarter. Pass/No Pass grading. (0 credit hours)

PHY 702 | CANDIDACY MAINTENANCE | 0 quarter hour
(Graduate)
This course is meant for Master’s students not actively working on their thesis. It is only used to maintain active student status. It will not give the student full- or half-time enrollment status and will not permit deferral of student loans. Course requires graduate program director approval each quarter. (0 credit hours)

Polish (POL)

POL 101 | BASIC POLISH I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Listening, speaking, reading and writing Polish in a cultural context for the beginning student. (Offered on a demand basis only)

POL 102 | BASIC POLISH II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Continued emphasis on the four skills in culturally authentic situations. (Offered on a demand basis only.)

POL 103 | BASIC POLISH III | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Further work on the basic elements of the Polish language, spoken as well as written, with due regard to the cultural context of Polish expression. (Offered on a demand basis only.)

POL 104 | INTERMEDIATE POLISH I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Intensive practice in the use of Polish through listening, speaking, reading and writing, and continued enhancement of the cultural awareness intrinsic to those skills. (Offered on a demand basis only.)

POL 105 | INTERMEDIATE POLISH II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Continuing practice in spoken and written Polish and further development of reading and listening abilities in an authentic cultural context. (Offered on a demand basis only.)

POL 106 | INTERMEDIATE POLISH III | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Developing more fluency in speaking, understanding, reading and writing Polish with a concomitant heightened awareness of the cultural dimensions of the Polish language. (Offered on a demand basis only.)

POL 110 | INTERMEDIATE POLISH FOR HERITAGE SPEAKERS I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Introduction to grammar and written composition for heritage speakers of Polish with little or no formal language training. For students who already speak Polish in their families or communities. (Offered on a demand basis only.)
POL 111 | INTERMEDIATE POLISH FOR HERITAGE SPEAKERS II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Introduction to grammar and written composition for heritage speakers of Polish with little or no formal language training. For students who already speak Polish in their families or communities. (Offered on a demand basis only.)

POL 112 | INTERMEDIATE POLISH FOR HERITAGE SPEAKERS III | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Introduction to grammar and written composition for heritage speakers of Polish with little or no formal language training. For students who already speak Polish in their families or communities. (Offered on a demand basis only.)

POL 197 | SPECIAL TOPICS IN POLISH | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
See schedule for current offerings. (Offered on a demand basis only.)

POL 198 | STUDY ABROAD | 1-8 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Variable credit.

POL 199 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 1-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Variable credit.

POL 205 | POLISH FOR THE NATIVE SPEAKER I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Introduction to grammar and written composition for native speakers of Polish with little or no formal language training. (Offered on a demand basis only.)

POL 206 | POLISH FOR THE NATIVE SPEAKER II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Continued emphasis on improved grammar and writing for native speakers of Polish with limited formal Polish language training. (Offered on a demand basis only.)

POL 207 | POLISH FOR THE NATIVE SPEAKER III | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Advanced conversation practice emphasizing standard Polish speech for those with limited formal training in spoken Polish. (Offered on a demand basis only.)

POL 297 | SPECIAL TOPICS IN POLISH | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
See schedule for current offerings.

POL 298 | STUDY ABROAD | 1-8 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Variable credit.

POL 299 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 1-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Variable credit.

POL 397 | SPECIAL TOPICS IN POLISH | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
See schedule for current offerings.

POL 498 | STUDY ABROAD | 1-8 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Variable credit.

POL 499 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 4-8 quarter hours
(Graduate)

Pre-Law (PRELAW)

PRELAW 150 | THE PRACTICE OF LAW | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
What do lawyers do? Why and how do they do it? What does it mean to be an ethical lawyer? This exploration of the legal profession will engage students in a broad-ranging discussion of lawyers and their work, in both historical and contemporary perspectives. Students will examine the portrayal of the legal profession in popular culture, including in film and literature, and will explore the concept of ethics in the legal profession. The course will also include field trips to key sites where lawyers work throughout the city of Chicago.

Status as a 3+3 BA/JD student is a prerequisite for this class.

PRELAW 151 | RECENT CONTROVERSIES IN THE LAW | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course for students enrolled in the 3+3 program addresses a timely topic of significant legal interest, such as gay marriage, affirmative action, campaign finance, etc. The topic varies according to current events and instructor interest. Students will use current topics to explore the broader theme of the relationship between law and society, particularly law’s relationship to social change. Readings each term will include multi-disciplinary perspectives, such as law, political science, philosophy, economics, history, etc. The course is designed to further develop students’ critical thinking skills.

Status as a 3+3 BA/JD Student and PRELAW 150 are prerequisites for this class.

PRELAW 152 | THINKING ABOUT THE LAW | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will explore the concept of jurisprudence, helping students to understand traditions of legal thought in the American legal system. What are the major theories of law and how are they reflected in today’s courts and congressional chambers? Students will explore the law from different vantage points, including those of judges, lawmakers, lawyers, philosophers, and clients. Major themes of the course will vary each year, but will typically include reflections on justice, punishment, rule of law, and other key foundational topics. Students will engage in significant writing assignments in the course that will help them develop the advanced writing skills necessary for success in law school.

Status as a 3+3 BA/JD Student and PRELAW 151 are prerequisites for this class.

Project Management (PM)

PM 430 | FUNDAMENTALS OF IT PROJECT MANAGEMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course concentrates on monitoring, managing and controlling assets and resources on a single IT project. Topics covered are project methodologies; risk management; procurement and contract management; time and cost estimating; controlling and tracking techniques; quality assurance; testing and audit. Students will use common project management software for resource allocation and balancing. PREREQUISITE(S): None.
PM 440 | COLLABORATIVE TECHNOLOGIES FOR LEADING PROJECTS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)

Study of the process of virtual teaming with emphasis on facilitation of different time project activities and facilitation of same time meetings. Students will learn how small group psychology and group communication theories inform specific behaviors in the design and leadership of meetings. Several meeting types including information briefing, focus group, document writing, decision making, requirements gathering, and teaching/training will be explored. In addition, the course surveys current collaboration technologies and discusses how to select among those technologies usability and fit to purpose of a meeting agenda. DL students may be required to schedule same time sessions with the instructor and other DL students; see current quarter syllabus for more information on this point. PREREQUISITE(S): None.

PM 535 | INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY INVESTMENT FINANCIAL ANALYSIS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)

This course focuses on the application of financial analysis and decision-making approaches to aid information technology investment decisions at the operational, project, tactical and strategic levels. Students will learn how to apply a variety of financial methods -- breakeven analysis, present value analysis, profitability index, and return on investment to various IT investment decisions. The course will also address cost benefit analysis, outsourcing, balanced scorecard, and multi-factor scoring, benchmarking, and IT investment portfolio methods. These techniques will prepare students to manage capital budgets, acquisition of system and application software, hardware, personnel, and professional services at project and system levels as well as enterprise investment portfolio. PREREQUISITE(S): SE 477 or IS 565 or ACCT 500 or IS 430 or PM 430 or ECT 455.

SE 477 or IS 565 or ACC 500 or IS 430 or PM 430 or ECT 455 is a prerequisite for this class.

PM 556 | ENTERPRISE PROJECT MANAGEMENT | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)

This course covers how an enterprise coordinates and effectively manages all its IT projects and programs through program management and the IT program management office. Students will learn the role of the IT program management office in establishing and maintaining the project and program infrastructure and in assisting project managers, program managers, and the executive steering committee. Students will analyze the role of program management in coordinating the delivery of expected program benefits, in managing stakeholder expectations, and in establishing program governance. PREREQUISITE(S): IS 430 or PM 430. IS 430 or PM 430 is a prerequisite for this class.

PM 570 | ENTERPRISE SYSTEM IMPLEMENTATION | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)

This course is targeted towards information systems professionals who are involved in the planning and implementation of large scale, cross-functional enterprise systems. Students will examine the characteristics of technology efforts that change and transform the way people perform their tasks and how the new technology structures the flows of information and decision making using workflow modeling methods. Through case studies and exercises students gain insights into the elements of successful implementations leading to the preparation of a change management plan. Emphasis is placed on developing mechanisms for communicating and training all affected agents. PREREQUISITE(S): IS 430 or PM 430 or five or more other SoC MS level courses should contact the course instructor or an advisor.

IS 430 or PM 430 or completion of five or more other SoC MS level courses is a prerequisite for this class; contact instructor or advisor

PM 577 | IT PORTFOLIO MANAGEMENT AND STRATEGIES | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)

This capstone course integrates the skills and techniques learned in previous IT Project Management courses. Through in depth analysis of case studies and readings, along with presentations by outside speakers experienced in IT Portfolio Management and IT strategy, students use their skills from previous IT project management courses to solve IT strategic and IT portfolio problems. The course starts with formulating the IT strategy from the corporate strategy. Then the IT Portfolio of initiatives, projects and assets is build and fine tuned. PREREQUISITE(S) IS 556 or PM 556.

PSY 380 or consent is a prerequisite for this class.

PSY 389 | PSYCHOLOGY SENIOR SEMINAR | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The Senior Year Capstone course provides an opportunity for students to actively reflect and consider the relationships between their specialized experiences within their major, the more general learning experiences they have received, and the impact that their career choices may have on the broader society.
Senior standing is a prerequisite for this class.

PSY 390 | INDEPENDENT RESEARCH IN PSYCHOLOGY | 2-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Independent Research in Psychology. Student will work with a faculty mentor to develop an individualized plan of work involving some aspect of research. This can include, but is not limited to, reviewing literature, developing a research project, collecting data on an ongoing project, coding or analyzing data, developing a research presentation, or working in the community on research or intervention projects. Students taking the course for 4 or more units must produce a graded project at the end of the quarter. (variable credit)

PSY 391 | DEPARTMENT HONORS THESIS | 4.00 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Original investigation of a specific research problem. Four credits required. (variable credit) Successful application to department honors program required.
Senior standing is a prerequisite for this class.

PSY 394 | ADVANCED TOPICS IN PSYCHOLOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Senior standing is a prerequisite for this class.

PSY 395 | FIELD WORK/INTERNSHIP | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Supervised experience in selected off-campus settings and associated readings. Generally taken in senior year.
PSY 357 and PSY 358 are a prerequisite for this class.

PSY 396 | HONORS IN PSYCHOLOGY | 4.00 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Required monthly Honors Seminar to accompany Honors thesis completed during the student's senior year. 4 credit hours required. (variable credit) Successful application to department honors program required.
Senior standing is a prerequisite for this class.

PSY 397 | EXPERIENTIAL LEARNING/PSYCHOLOGY RESEARCH | 2-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Experiential Learning/Psychology Research. (variable credit)

PSY 398 | TUTORING AND MENTORING IN PSYCHOLOGY | 2-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
(variable credit)

PSY 402 | PERCEPTUAL PROCESSES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Analysis of the variables involved in the determination of perception with particular attention to the problems of space, motion, distance, size, form, aftereffects and constancies.

PSY 404 | PERCEPTION AND COGNITION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Survey of classical and instrumental conditioning, biological constraints, attention, memory, cognition, and practical applications. Major theoretical approaches include stimulus-response, early cognitive theories and information processing theory.

PSY 406 | PHYSIOLOGICAL PROCESSES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
The functional role of neural systems important for the processes of motivation, emotion, sleep, memory, and cognition.

PSY 409 | STATISTICS FOR THE BEHAVIORAL SCIENCES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Applied inferential statistics.
PSY 240 is a prerequisite for this class.

PSY 410 | ADVANCED STATISTICS I | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Brief review of introductory statistics, followed by a focus on Analysis of Variance and related techniques for data analysis. One way, factorial, repeated measures and ANCOVA with a priori and post hoc tests. Nonparametric alternatives to mean-comparison tests.

PSY 411 | ADVANCED STATISTICS II | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Overview of commonly applied regression techniques in psychological research. Discussions include simple linear regression, multiple linear regression, moderated linear regression with continuous and categorical predictors, mediation via linear regression, and logistic regression.
PSY 410 is a prerequisite for this class.

PSY 412 | ADVANCED STATISTICS III | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Advanced Statistics III.
PSY 413 | ANALYSIS OF LONGITUDINAL DATA | 4 quarter hours
Graduate
Analysis of changes and time-dependent data.
PSY 411 is a prerequisite for this class.

PSY 414 | CATEGORICAL DATA ANALYSIS | 4 quarter hours
Graduate
Analysis of contingency tables and count data logit, probit and loglinear models.
PSY 411 is a prerequisite for this class.

PSY 411 | METHODS IN QUALITATIVE RESEARCH | 4 quarter hours
Graduate
History and paradigms of qualitative research, the strategies and data collection methods used, and how to make sense of qualitative data once it is collected.

PSY 418 | MULTIVARIATE STATISTICAL ANALYSIS | 4 quarter hours
Graduate
Multivariate regression, principal component, cluster analysis and multidimensional scaling. Canonical correlation, multivariate analysis of variance, linear discriminant function analysis.
PSY 411 is a prerequisite for this class.

PSY 419 | FACTOR ANALYSIS AND PATH MODELING | 4 quarter hours
Graduate
Theoretical foundations, methods of analysis, and comparison of various factor analytic models. Structural equation and measurement models using the Mplus/ LISREL program.
PSY 411 is a prerequisite for this class.

PSY 420 | QUANTITATIVE RESEARCH DESIGN | 4 quarter hours
Graduate
Design and analysis of basic and applied psychological research with an emphasis on experimental and quasi-experimental design, and basic issues of measurement.
Status as a Psychology graduate student (or permission of instructor) is a prerequisite for this course.

PSY 421 | ADVANCED EXPERIMENTAL DESIGN | 4 quarter hours
Graduate
None.
PSY 420 is a prerequisite for this class.

PSY 422 | COMPUTING FOR THE BEHAVIORAL SCIENTIST | 4 quarter hours
Graduate
An introduction to computer programming, web development, and other computer-intensive techniques as applied to behavioral science research.

PSY 425 | COGNITIVE PROCESSES | 4 quarter hours
Graduate
Cognitive Processes.

PSY 426 | LANGUAGE AND COGNITION | 4 quarter hours
Graduate
An overview of research in the psychology of language, including such topics as speech perception, sentence processing, discourse comprehension, and pragmatics. Classic and contemporary models and research paradigms are examined.

PSY 427 | SENSORY PROCESSES | 4 quarter hours
Graduate
Sensory Processes.

PSY 430 | SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGY OF THE SELF | 4 quarter hours
Graduate

Cross-listed with MLS 478 and WGS 470.

PSY 562 | SEMINAR IN FAMILY THERAPY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
A review of systems theory and the assessment and treatment of families.

PSY 563 | MENTAL IMAGERY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Theory, research and practical applications of mental imagery are considered in lecture/discussion/student-report format. Variety of imagery techniques will be reviewed which have been found useful in research and practice. Special attention devoted to the differences between subjective approaches (consciousness and vividness ratings) versus objective approaches (memory measures) of studying imagery. Cross-listed with PSY 362.

PSY 565 | PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT SEMINAR | 0 quarter hour
(Graduate)
An interactive seminar that provides guidance regarding master's thesis research, comprehensive examination or literature review, and/or dissertation plans. Attention to pathways for success in doctoral education, practica, internship, scientific research and careers. Selected topics vary with student needs and interests. Pass/No Pass grading. (0 credit hours)

PSY 566 | SEMINAR IN PROGRAM EVALUATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Evaluation of social programs and policies (including needs assessment, logic models, process evaluation and outcome evaluation). Theories, methods, and practice of program evaluation.

PSY 567 | SPECIAL TOPICS IN COMMUNITY PSYCHOLOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Explores topics of current interest in the area of Community Psychology and related fields for advanced graduate students, with emphases on theory, research and intervention.

PSY 568 | SEMINAR IN PREVENTION AND INTERVENTION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Analysis of theories of community and human behaviors from the standpoint of general systems principles.

PSY 569 | SEMINAR IN PSYCHOTHERAPY RESEARCH | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course provides an overview of key methods, concepts, findings, and controversies in the field of psychotherapy research. Areas of particular emphasis include evidence-based treatments (EBTs), treatment outcome research, and new directions including the study of mechanisms.

PSY 572 | PSYCHOBIOLOGY OF SOCIAL COGNITION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Explores social cognition in the frame of evolutionary, neurophysiological, and developmental biology. Comparison of human with other animal social-cognitive characteristics will be examined. Neuropsychological data and developmental psychobiology will be studied.
PSY 574 | PRACTICUM IN SPECIAL AREAS IN PSYCHOLOGY | 0 quarter hour (Graduate)
Supervised experience for doctoral students in specialized clinical practice in a clinic, hospital, or community agency setting. Students may take the course up to three times. Pass/No Pass grading. (0 credit hours)

PSY 577, PSY 578, PSY 579, PSY 582, PSY 583, and PSY 584 are prerequisites for this class.

PSY 577 | PRACTICUM IN CLINICAL ASSESSMENT | 0 quarter hour (Graduate)
Supervised experience for doctoral students in intake interviewing, psychological evaluation, and case conference presentation in a clinic, hospital or community agency setting. Pass/No Pass grading. (0 credit hours)

PSY 578 | PRACTICUM IN CLINICAL PSYCHOLOGY | 0 quarter hour (Graduate)
Supervised experience for doctoral students in clinical practice in a clinic, hospital, or community agency setting. Pass/No Pass grading. (0 credit hours)

PSY 579 | PRACTICUM IN CHILD CLINICAL PROCEDURES | 0 quarter hour (Graduate)
Supervised practice for doctoral students in the diagnosis and treatment process of the problems of children and adolescents. Pass/No Pass grading. (0 credit hours)

PSY 582 | ADVANCED PRACTICUM-CLINICAL PSYCHOLOGY | 0 quarter hour (Graduate)
Supervised experience for doctoral students in advanced clinical practice in a clinic, hospital, or community agency setting. Pass/No Pass grading. (0 credit hours)

PSY 583 | PRACTICUM IN COMMUNITY MENTAL HEALTH | 0 quarter hour (Graduate)
Supervised experience for doctoral students in supervised practice in a clinic, hospital, or community agency setting. Pass/No Pass grading. (0 credit hours)

PSY 584 | ADVANCED PRACTICUM IN EVIDENCE-BASED PRACTICE IN PSYCHOLOGY | 0 quarter hour (Graduate)
Supervised experience for doctoral students in advanced clinical practice in a clinic, hospital, or community agency setting. Pass/No Pass grading. (0 credit hours)

PSY 585 | FIELDWORK IN COMMUNITY SETTINGS | 0 quarter hour (Graduate)
An applied experience for doctoral students which integrates skills of consultation, program development, advocacy, and program evaluation. Course requires graduate program director approval and proof of work each quarter. (0 credit hours)

PSY 586 | PRACTICUM IN APPLIED INDUSTRIAL-ORGANIZATIONAL PSYCHOLOGY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Supervised experience in the application of I-O Psychology and technical report writing.

PSY 587 | PRACTICUM IN ADVANCED RESEARCH IN INDUSTRIAL-ORGANIZATIONAL PSYCHOLOGY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Supervised experience in I-O research and the preparation of research results for publication.

PSY 588 | TOPICS IN PSYCHOLOGICAL SCIENCE | 2-4 quarter hours (Graduate)
A course that includes topics of current interest to the faculty and graduate students. Includes readings and discussion of important current research, discussions of professional development and presentations by invited speakers. Course carries variable credit hours.

PSY 590 | THESIS RESEARCH SEMINAR | 0 quarter hour (Graduate)
Seminar for Master’s students working on their thesis. Students will develop their proposals or write their results and discussion sections, depending on status of their thesis research. Students will also review and critique work of other students. This course carries the equivalent of half-time enrollment status. Course requires graduate program director approval and proof of work each quarter. Students may complete at most three sections of the course. Pass/No Pass grading. (0 credit hours)

PSY 591 | COLLOQUIUM IN INDUSTRIAL-ORGANIZATIONAL PSYCHOLOGY | 0 quarter hour (Graduate)
Intended for I-O students in a graduate program. Register in Fall term; continues throughout the year. Presentations on research and other topics by students, faculty, and invited speakers. Pass/No Pass grading. (0 credit hours)

PSY 592 | DIRECTED RESEARCH | 1-4 quarter hours (Graduate)
A course that includes topics of current interest to the faculty and invited speakers. Course carries variable credit hours.

PSY 593 | PRE-DOCTORAL RESEARCH | 0 quarter hour (Graduate)
Graduate students in specific doctoral programs are required to register for this course for at least three quarters prior to registering for PSY 598 (Dissertation Seminar) or PSY 599 (Dissertation Research). This course requires full-time (at least 8-12 hours per week) work on research under the supervision of a faculty member. (Arranged by consultation with the chair). (variable credit)

PSY 594 | DIRECTED READINGS IN PSYCHOLOGY | 1-4 quarter hours (Graduate)
A course involving intensive readings in contemporary psychological literature. (Arranged by prior consultation with the chair). (variable credit)

PSY 595 | GRADUATE RESEARCH | 0 quarter hour (Graduate)
A course that includes topics of current interest to the faculty and invited speakers. Course carries variable credit hours.

PSY 596 | INTERNSHIP IN CLINICAL PSYCHOLOGY | 0 quarter hour (Graduate)
Internship course for doctoral students arranged with consent of director of clinical training. This course carries the equivalent of half-time enrollment status. Course requires graduate program director approval and proof of work each quarter. Students may complete at most five sections of the course. Pass/No Pass grading. (0 credit hours)
PSY 597 | MASTER'S THESIS RESEARCH | 1-4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Original investigation of a specific research problem. Four hours required. (variable credit)

PSY 598 | DISSERTATION RESEARCH SEMINAR | 0 quarter hour (Graduate)
Seminar for doctoral candidates working on their dissertation. Students will develop their proposals or write their results and discussion sections, depending on status of their dissertation research. Students will also review and critique work of other students. This course carries the equivalent of half-time enrollment status. Course requires graduate program director approval and proof of work each quarter. Pass/No Pass grading. (0 credit hours)

PSY 599 | DOCTORAL DISSERTATION RESEARCH | 1-4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Original investigation of a specific research problem. Four hours required. (variable credit)

PSY 634 | ADOLESCENT DEVELOPMENT | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Focus on normal processes in adolescent development as well as risk factors for maladaptive development.

PSY 639 | ADVANCED DEVELOPMENTAL PSYCHOLOGY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Focus on major theories and research in child development.

PSY 653 | ABNORMAL PSYCHOLOGY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Focus on the primary psychological diagnoses common today.

PSY 654 | COMMUNITY PSYCHOLOGY | 0 quarter hour (Graduate)
Course for doctoral students that focuses on systemic and ecological theories of human behavior, diversity, social support, community intervention and evaluation, empowerment, social change, and working with underserved populations. Community service project required. Cross-listed level with PSY 354. (0 credit hours)

PSY 663 | ALCOHOLISM, DRUG ADDICTION, AND RECOVERY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Research and theory on alcoholism, drug addiction, and recovery are the focus of this course. Cross-level with PSY 363.

PSY 678 | CHILD ABUSE AND NEGLECT | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course surveys the causes, consequences, and contextual factors associated with child maltreatment (abuse and neglect) and interventions for children and families. The course considers maltreatment within an ecological context and works to build sensitivity to diverse families and cultural patterns. It is designed for graduate students with some prior coursework or experience in child psychology, mental health, or child welfare. Cross-level with PSY 368.

PSY 680 | INDUSTRIAL AND ORGANIZATIONAL PSYCHOLOGY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Application of theories and methods of psychology to the study of human behavior in business, industry, and other organizations. Cross-level with PSY 380.

PSY 701 | CANDIDACY CONTINUATION | 0 quarter hour (Graduate)
Students admitted to candidacy for the doctoral degree who have completed all course and dissertation registration requirements and are actively working on their dissertation are required to be registered each quarter of the academic year until the dissertation and final examination have been completed. This course carries the equivalent of half-time enrollment status. Course requires graduate program director approval and proof of work each quarter. Pass/No Pass grading. (0 credit hours)

PSY 702 | NON-RESIDENT CANDIDACY CONTINUATION | 0 quarter hour (Graduate)
Non-resident students admitted to candidacy for the doctoral degree who have completed all course and dissertation registration requirements and are actively working on their dissertation are required to be registered each quarter of the academic year until the dissertation and final examination have been completed. This course carries the equivalent of half-time enrollment status. Course requires graduate program director approval and proof of work each quarter. Pass/No Pass grading. (0 credit hours)

Public Policy Studies (PPS)

PPS 200 | INTRODUCTION TO PUBLIC POLICY | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This core course is designed to provide the student with an introduction to the field of public policy. The historical origins of policy analysis, definitions of what constitutes "public policy", various theoretical approaches developed to address policy problems, and contemporary policy debates on various substantive issues. By the end of the course each student has a solid background for further study of public policy and the social sciences. This course should be taken as one of the first courses in the major.

PPS 201 | PUBLIC POLICY AND URBAN ISSUES | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This core course is designed to introduce students to the study of urban areas, to some of the more exciting and difficult issues faced by cities, and finally, to some of the policies designed to address these issues. Readings assist students in exploring what makes cities function, how they have changed over time and what it was like to live through those changes, can show us how modern ways of seeing and modern ways of making sense came into being. If student is a PPS major, then students are encouraged to take PPS 200 prior to PPS 201.

PPS 205 | PUBLIC POLICY RESEARCH DESIGN AND METHODS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This core course provides students a foundation of and some experience with the research methods used in public policy for collecting and conducting public policy analysis. This will include an overview of research designs and the variety of methods for conducting public policy analysis. Concepts of reliability and validity as well as the use of social scientific policy studies are used. The social science approach to conducting research on public policy is the focus.
PPS 206 | QUANTITATIVE PUBLIC POLICY ANALYSIS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)

This course focuses on writing of research questions and hypotheses, selection of appropriate quantitative statistical analyses for research questions, interpretation of statistical results, and communication of those results. A significant portion of the course work will involve doing statistical analyses of existing data using Statistical Package for the Social Sciences (SPSS). Students will prepare a substantial paper using the techniques for public policy analysis. Students majoring in PPS are encouraged to have completed PPS 205 before taking this course. This core course for PPS majors and minors should be taken before the senior year.

PPS 250 | ISSUES IN NEIGHBORHOOD DEVELOPMENT | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)

A major focus of urban policy and grassroots action is the condition of city neighborhoods. This course examines trends in urban policy as they have affected neighborhoods, neighborhood-grounded grassroots action, and local neighborhood development initiatives.

PPS 251 | URBAN POVERTY | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)

This course examines the demographics of poverty and its concentration in central cities. In addition, definitions of poverty and public policies aimed at alleviating poverty are explored with the aim of understanding why poverty remains prevalent in the United States.

PPS 253 | THE CINEMATIC CITY | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)

This course examines the relationship between the city and cinema and explores how the city both real and ideal is represented in film. Covering a diverse selection of films, genres, and historical periods, the course critically explores the relationship between urban forms and cinematic representations.

PPS 254 | SCREENING SUBURBIA | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)

The course explores how suburbia was represented in cinema since the post-war period. Covering diverse selection of films and genre, the course examines how domesticity, family life, gender roles, race, suburbanization, domestic space and architecture have been in cinematic space. Drawing on historical and contemporary sources, the course places suburbia at the center stage and examines the relationship between cinema and suburban ideals and how cinema as a particular mode of representation has sought to address suburbia as a particular American social and cultural landscape.

PPS 255 | CITIES, GLOBALIZATION AND PUBLIC POLICY | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)

The course will examine the process of globalization on cities and its policy implication. In particular, the course will explore how the impact of globalization on cities may be evaluated; what benefits or problems they produce and for whom. It will conclude by looking at how public policy professionals can influence these results.

PPS 260 | CLIMATE CHANGE POLICY | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)

This course looks at the public policy responses to climate change in a variety of contexts. Beginning with a discussion of the unique, global nature of the problem, the course looks at how international, national, and subnational governments have developed policies to mitigate greenhouse gas emissions as well as ways to build resilience in the face of changing climatic conditions. Special attention will be placed on the role of uncertainty and risk management in the policy making process with regard to climate adaptation. There is no prerequisite for this course.
PPS 332 | NATIONAL PARKS POLICY AND GOVERNANCE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course focuses on the interrelationship between public policy, human values, and nature as displayed through environmental policy governing our national parks. Special attention is given to the cultural dynamics (including political and legal) that are demonstrated in how public policies have been created and implemented over time in regards to our national parks. The course reviews the policy literature and theories associated with the management of the national parks as it reflects our societal values of the time period. These policies have dramatically changed over time, so it is an ideal venue that demonstrates a significant change in how we view nature. The role of tourism, economic development pressures and property owners ( takings) concerns will be included. Also, critical thinking about national parks policy will be required. This is taught as a hybrid course.

PPS 333 | GREEN CITIES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course looks at public policies pertaining to urban sustainability. Low-carbon transportation, green building policies, locally produced renewable energy, and storm water management policies are among the topics discussed.

PPS 334 | SUSTAINABLE LAND REVITALIZATION AND BROWNFIELDS DEVELOPMENT POLICY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is focused on environmental public policy issues associated with Brownfields, Superfund sites, and an assortment of state and local land revitalization programs. Substantive emphasis includes examination of social problems and public policy impediments associated with the revitalization of neighborhoods. This course includes current public policy regulations and implementation guidelines to prepare students for working in this field.

PPS 350 | ISSUES IN URBAN REDEVELOPMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The course examines the central issues in contemporary urban development: how urban restructuring, demographic shifts, new patterns of production and consumption, as well as technologically-grounded globalization processes, shape urban development. The course emphasizes the changing context of urban development policy and explores various critical approaches to interpreting urban development policy.

PPS 351 | THE POLICY AND POLITICS OF URBAN HOUSING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

PPS 352 | ISSUES IN URBAN EDUCATIONAL POLICY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course examines the politics, history, and social context of urban education. Special attention is devoted to emerging policy alternatives such as the use of school vouchers and the formation of charter schools.

PPS 353 | INEQUALITY AND PUBLIC POLICY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Many recent studies have detailed the significant growth in economic inequality in the United States, showing a level not seen since the 1920s. Others have focused on the consequences on significant inequality for a society and its politics. Often this inequality is seen as a necessary (and even desirable) consequence of a free market. This course focuses, however, on policy aspects of our current inequality: the public policies that have contributed to current levels of inequality, reasons for reducing inequality, and public policies that may reduce inequality. U.S. inequality and public policies will also be contrasted with those of similar nations, such as Germany and Nordic countries.

PPS 359 | SPECIAL TOPICS IN PUBLIC POLICY STUDIES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course provides an in-depth examination of various public policy issues and be taken multiple times for each topic offered.

PPS 360 | GREAT LAKES GOVERNANCE POLICY AND MANAGEMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The Great Lakes of the United States are a significant natural resource. This course will give an overview of the discovery, history, and policy development associated with the management and governance of the lakes. Students will research the different organizations involved with public policy of the lakes, as well as learn the legal framework in how they interact. This course takes an interdisciplinary approach to understanding the lakes.

PPS 361 | PUBLIC SPACES AND SOCIAL CONTROL | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Several contemporary trends have led city governments to emphasize policies to attract middle class residents, tourists, and conventions back to the city. These policies often include means of increasing social control over public spaces so that these users feel safe. Also, given fiscal constraints, many local governments see privatization of some public spaces, including neighborhoods, as a means of stretching limited dollars while providing needed services. Many commentators and scholars, however, are greatly concerned about the resulting changes in public spaces of urban areas. They write about Disneyfication of urban areas, commodification of culture, the city as spectacle or theme park, the city as fortress or panopticon, the restrictions of certain behaviors and publics in urban areas—in other words, the loss of public space. These issues and policies raise questions about the differences between public and private spaces, the role of public spaces in democratic governance, the definition/identification of "the public" and citizens, the use of private governments for social control, police strategies for social control, and the equity of social control efforts in and current use patterns of public spaces. Those issues are the focus of the course.

PPS 393 | CAPSTONE: GENTRIFICATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is designed to bring together much of the knowledge attained by Public Policy students during their four years at DePaul by focusing on the often contentious issues of urban gentrification and re-gentrification. Gentrification involves economic issues, political issues, environmental issues, educational issues, race and ethnicity, and equity issues as well. The course shall examine the variables associated with the process of gentrification, the advantages and disadvantages of that process, the winners and the losers in the process, and the political and economic implications of all of this.
Status as a Public Policy Studies major with Senior standing is a prerequisite for this class.
PPS 394 | CAPSTONE: GREEN INFRASTRUCTURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is designed to integrate the two concentrations of the Public Policy major to address sustainable management of essential urban infrastructure systems, including stormwater management, energy production and efficiency, and urban forests. The course shall examine how municipal green infrastructure investment reflects larger social values and encourages students to examine the social forces that impact the efficacy of green infrastructure.

Status as a Public Policy Studies major with Senior standing is a prerequisite for this class.

PRAD 353 | PSYCHOLOGY OF ADVERTISING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The purpose of this course is to introduce students to the field of consumer behavior and the psychological processes that lead to purchase intentions. This class will explore the processes individuals use to select, secure, use, and dispose of products, services, experiences, or ideas to satisfy needs and the impacts that these processes have on the consumer and society. Through a broad view, we will examine more indirect influences on consumption decisions as well as far-reaching consequences that involve more than just the purchaser and seller, including psychophysiological antecedents to purchase.

PRAD 244 and PRAD 335 are prerequisites for this course.

PRAD 354 | PERSONAL Branding | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In this class you will create your personal brand in the same way you would create a brand for a company, product or service. The only difference is that the brand is YOU. During the first month of class we will explore the key characteristics of the world’s most successful brands and compare brands within the same categories, such as Southwest Airlines and America Airlines. This work and learning will lead to creating your own personal brand using classic brand marketing thinking. This includes a brand framework with a purpose statement (your impact), values (who you are), actions (what you do), personality (what you are like) and brand design elements. You will make a final presentation of your brand to the class including ways you will execute your brand via a website, blog, LinkedIn profile or other communication platforms. This is not a class on how to get a job, but it will help you to position yourself for whatever you want to do and who you want to be in life.

(PRAD 244 or PRAD 255), PRAD 256, PRAD 291, PRAD 292 and Junior Standing are all prerequisites for this class.

REL 241 | RELIGION IN CHINESE HISTORY, SOCIETY AND CULTURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
An exploration of the Chinese religious landscape, focusing on social and practical dimensions of Chinese religion, such as state rituals and private cults, liturgies and individual practices of Taoist priests and adepts, politico-religious ideas that inspired popular messianic movements throughout Chinese history, and interrelations of Buddhist and Taoist clergies and institutions in the state. Cross-listed with AAS 241.

REL 242 | HINDU THOUGHT AND CULTURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Hinduism is one of the world’s oldest religions, but it is also the world’s most diverse religion. Despite its variety, certain themes have remained throughout the ages—karma and ethical responsibility, liberation from the bonds of worldly existence through yoga and devotion, communication with the divine through ritual, and the many forms, male and female, that God can take. This course traces the development of Hinduism from 5000 years ago to the present, with emphasis on change and continuity in those themes. Cross-listed with AAS 224.

REL 243 | BUDDHIST THOUGHT IN CULTURAL CONTEXT | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
An exploration of the Buddhist tradition, using original sources, from its beginnings in ancient India to a world religion with strong roots in the US. Students will discover how Buddhism interacts with cultures from Sri Lanka and Thailand to China, Japan and Tibet. Although this course is online, students in the region will have the opportunity to practice meditation at a Chicago zendo and tour the Buddhist art at the Chicago Art Institute. Cross-listed with AAS 243.

REL 245 | RELIGION IN JAPANESE HISTORY, SOCIETY, AND CULTURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Explores the specific interplay between religion and culture in Japan. Taking historical and cultural factors into account, it considers prehistoric Japanese religion, ancient imperial myths, the assimilation of Buddhism, Confucianism, and continental (Chinese/Korean) culture, the religious and aesthetic worlds of the court nobility and the warrior class, popular mountain cults, the revival and systematization of Shinto, the impact of western culture, Japanese ultranationalism, and the religious situation in the post-war period. Cross-listed with AAS 245.

REL 246 | TRADITIONS OF CHINESE POPULAR CULTURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Promotes an understanding of Chinese worldview and life in the perspective of the common Chinese people from ancient to modern times. Based on historical and modern texts in translation, some historical and ethnographic studies, as well as visual and aural materials, the course explores gender and generational relations and conflicts, ancestor veneration, the worlds of ghosts and gods, festivals, art, and entertainment, but also aspects of misery and social unrest. Although the course will draw largely on popular and entertaining sources, it will also pay attention to historical developments, the relationship between popular and elite traditions, as well as sociological and anthropological issues arising from these contexts. Cross-listed with AAS 244.

REL 247 | LITERATURE AND RELIGION IN JAPAN | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Focuses on the pervasive influence of religious thought and sentiment on Japanese literature from ancient to modern times and explores the intricate relationship between religion, aesthetics, and the arts in Japanese culture. Considers original works including ancient Japanese mythology and poetry, the memoirs of court ladies and Buddhist hermits, romance, epics, folktales and social satire, with attention to their historical, social, religious and social dimensions, as well as to the individual experience expressed in them. Cross-listed with AAS 247.

REL 248 | LITERATURE AND RELIGION IN CHINA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Focuses on the interpretation of literature and religion in China. Considers original works of literature and explores the religious origins of Chinese script and writing itself, poetry and mystical philosophy, cosmology and revealed scripture, popular tales, ballads, plays and novels, and the reworking of contemporary Chinese American authors of their literary and religious heritage, with attention to their historical, social, religious and social dimensions, as well as to the individual experience expressed in them. Cross-listed with AAS 242.

REL 250 | MYSTICISM IN RELIGIOUS TRADITIONS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will look at the phenomena of mysticism, its doctrines and practices, in various religious traditions. It will also look at how various forms of mysticism have influenced the religious traditions with which they associated, (e.g. how Sufism has impacted Islamic religion, civilization and society.) The course will then look at the present situation of mysticisms in regard to religious traditions and to broader societies.

REL 251 | THE IDEA OF EVIL | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will try and answer the question what is evil? In religious traditions is evil a relative term? Or is it a universal absolute? Does evil exist independently, or is it a result of the absence of good? How do religious traditions deal with the notion of evil? After we look at the religious, philosophical, historical, conceptualization of evil and how different religious traditions deal with it, the class will look at evil in popular culture (anthropological understanding of evil). How does the popular imagination understand evil? How do they depict and imagine evil (in film, and in literature)? Are these universalities or are they cultural relativism? How has popular culture dealt with evil? Finally the course tries to see if there is any connection with the popular imagination and religious traditions when it comes to evil.

REL 252 | FORGIVENESS AND RECONCILIATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A study of various understandings of “forgiveness” and “reconciliation” in several religions and cultures. The nature and dynamics of forgiveness and reconciliation will be examined both theoretically and in relationship to specific conflicts. Cross-listed with PAX 252.

REL 253 | DESPAIR AND HOPE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course addresses the important religio-ethical concepts of despair and hope from both theoretical and applied perspectives. The course explores: a) various religious, ethical, and psychological understandings of these concepts and b) applications of these concepts, along with various methods and approaches, to a number of case studies involving personal and/or societal challenges. Cross-listed with PAX 253.
REL 256 | WELLNESS AND DISEASE IN RELIGIOUS PERSPECTIVE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
A study of notions related to human “health,” “well-being” and “disease” in various religio-cultural situations. Physical, mental and spiritual health – individual and communal – will be considered. The significance of “plague,” especially AIDS, as socio-religious and spiritual events will be critically examined.

REL 257 | DEATH AND ITS BEYOND: EXPERIENCE, MYTH AND RITUALS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Religious attitudes and practices responding to the phenomena of death and dying, studied cross-culturally, conceptually and ethically.

REL 259 | RELIGION AND SOCIAL ENGAGEMENT | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
An investigation of the ways in which various religious traditions engage the social order. Traditions, persons and movements that form the focus of the course will vary from section to section. The course will integrate theory and practice in studying forms of religious engagement. All students will perform some service to a community or within a community organization or agency.
Sophomore standing or above is a prerequisite for this class.

REL 260 | RELIGION AND POLITICAL CONFLICT | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
An examination of the role of religions and religious movements in political conflicts. Particular sections will examine the relationship of religions to violence and peacemaking in different areas of the world.

REL 261 | RELIGION AND CONFLICT IN SOUTH ASIA | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Religion has become central to conflict in contemporary South Asia. This course examines the relationship between religion and conflict both within and between nations in South Asia. It will examine how religion fuels conflict as well as how religion is used to find a nonviolent resolution to conflict. It will also analyze how religion is used to challenge and resist victimization, marginalization, silencing, and indeed violence during conflict. Finally, the course will examine how the cultural politics of class, gender, ethnicity, and sexuality constitute and are constituted by religion.

REL 262 | RELIGION AND GLOBALIZATION | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
An examination of the moral, religious, and social dimensions of the phenomenon of globalization. Through a critical assessment of both the positive and the negative dimensions of globalization, students will seek to understand more fully the ethical implications of globalization for economics, culture, and society.

REL 263 | RELIGION AND POLITICS IN THE MIDDLE EAST | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
An exploration of Judaism, Christianity and Islam as they develop and interact in the Middle East, historically and in terms of contemporary religious and political issues. Includes a study of personal narratives of people from Jewish, Christian and Muslim communities. Cross-listed with IWS 263.

REL 264 | COLONIZATION, RELIGION AND RESISTANCE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course will explore the religious traditions and cultural identities of some of the peoples native to the Americas, Africa, Asia and Oceania; problems they have with the “civilized” world and their potential solutions to them.

REL 265 | ISLAMIST POLITICAL MOVEMENTS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course will introduce the student to Islamic political movements around the globe. The course will look at their history as well as their intellectual and theological underpinnings. Cross-listed with IWS 265.

REL 266 | ISLAM IN THE UNITED STATES | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course will explore Muslim cultures in Canada and the U. S. While the course may also investigate histories, ethnicities and religious ideologies, the organizing focus will be on struggle, contestation, maturity and change. Although Canadian provinces and U.S. states claim that religion should present no bar to full participation in the public square and religious discrimination is illegal, Muslims, in fact, are challenged as citizens. Living in religious Diasporas as minorities, communities north and south of the Canadian border, Muslims have found themselves contesting notions of integration, pluralism and acculturation. Often labeled “as the enemies within,” Muslims have laid their claims as productive citizens, determined to contribute to the security, welfare and advancement of their home. Cross-listed with IWS 266.

REL 268 | MODERN JUDAISM | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
An examination of central features of the modern Jewish experience including the transition from traditional to modern religious life and practice, American Judaism, the Holocaust, and the establishment of the State of Israel.

REL 269 | JUDAISM IN ANTIQUITY | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course traces the history of Israelite and Jewish culture and religion from their origins in the world of the Ancient Near East in the second millennium BCE until the rise of Islam in the seventh century CE. We will critically examine the meaning and mutual relationship of such categories as “ancient Israelite” religion, “biblical” religion, and “early Judaism.” We will also discuss the history of religious institutions, texts, and practices, as well as the dynamics of continuity and change in ancient Israelite and Jewish society. This course will pay special attention to the complex relationship that exists between history and collective memory as constructed through texts and rituals.

REL 270 | WOMEN IN THE BIBLE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
An examination of the historical role of women in the Bible and the contemporary concerns of feminist theology, women’s spirituality and ethical issues arising from the contemporary application of these biblical texts to women’s experiences.

REL 272 | GENDER AND SEXUALITY IN MUSLIM CULTURES | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Explores historical and contemporary trends in writing on Muslim women along modern and contemporary narratives on gender and sexuality in Muslim majority and minority cultures. Cross-listed with IWS 272.

REL 273 | JESUS ACROSS CULTURES | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
A study of the multiple and diverse (primarily theological, but also literary, artistic and philosophical) historical and contemporary images of Jesus, as a way of understanding the diversity of this tradition and of its impacts on society, and of understanding the issue of plurality or diversity itself in religious traditions. Cross-listed with CTH 270.
REL 274 | IRELAND: RELIGION AND THE CONTEMPORARY "TROUBLES" | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course is an examination of the role of religions and religious movements in political conflicts. We will be working on understanding the modern conflict in Northern Ireland, a region in which history, memory, culture, religion, and politics have frequently collided to produce resentment and suspicion at best and brutal violence at worst. The period known as the "Troubles," roughly the late 1960s to the late 1990s, was notable for its frequent spasms of viciousness between and among people who divide themselves according to which of the Christian traditions, Catholic or Protestant, they claim as their own. Cross-listed with CTH 274 and IRE 103.

REL 275 | COMMUNITY AND AUTHORITY IN MEDIEVAL JUDAISM | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
An introduction to the history, religion and culture of the Jewish people under Christendom and Islam from the fourth through the end of the fifteenth centuries.

REL 278 | GENDER IDENTITIES, SEXUALITY AND RELIGION | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
A study of the historical and contemporary complexities of gender identities and sexuality within major religious traditions.

REL 280 | ROMAN CATHOLIC THEOLOGICAL THINKING | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
A study of the Roman Catholic tradition of "faith seeking understanding" examining the content and the process of emergence of Catholic beliefs about such matters as God, sin, Jesus Christ, revelation, the church and eschatology. Cross-listed with CTH 243.

REL 281 | ROMAN CATHOLIC LITURGY | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
A study of the emergence, meaning and dynamics of ritual in the Roman Catholic tradition. Cross-listed with CTH 231.

REL 283 | ROMAN CATHOLIC SOCIAL THOUGHT IN CONTEXT | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
A study of Roman Catholicism’s understanding of its relation to the social world, including such matters as the relation between Church and State, the moral authority of the Church, and of its teaching on such issues as social ethics, politics and economics. Cross-listed with CTH 247.

REL 284 | CATHOLICISM AS A SPIRITUAL PATH | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
An experience-centered study of the relationship between contemplation and action, prayer and service, liturgy and social justice, personal religious experience and the wider experience of Catholics. Both historical and contemporary spiritualities will be explored. Cross-listed with CTH 229.

REL 286 | PILGRIMAGE, RELIGION AND POPULAR CULTURE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
How has the role of pilgrimage evolved from antiquity to the present age, and how can the phenomenon of pilgrimage provide a modern window into how a people define what is spiritually significant? Might the phenomenon of pilgrimage, as it is found in nearly every religious tradition, provide a common language and thus a means for building bridges across boundaries of religious difference? This course examines pilgrimage as a religious, cultural, historical and ethical phenomenon. Using methodologies developed in the study of religion, ethics, anthropology and popular culture, this course will introduce students to pilgrimage as it is practiced in expressions of Judaism, Christianity and Islam. The aim of this course is to explore some of the competing typologies and events associated with the formal study of religious ritual and then apply these learnings to modern cultural phenomena, work that will prepare students for the project of constructing their own pilgrimages.

REL 287 | ROMAN CATHOLIC MORAL THOUGHT | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course examines various moral topics within a Roman Catholic framework. Papal pronouncements, Magisterial statements, Episcopal texts, the works of influential theologians, and critical voices both within and beyond the Church will be critically examined. Special attention will be paid to the method of moral argumentation.

REL 290 | LATINX LIBERATION TRADITIONS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
What does liberation mean in the context of the Americas today? How have people of Latin American descent -- both in Latin America and the United States -- connected conceptions of liberation to related ideas of liberty and freedom, as well as to notions of political revolution, cultural identity, and prophetic forms of religious faith? This course examines how these questions have been theorized across the Latino/a Americas, especially as they relate to questions of religion. Topics include liberation philosophy, critical pedagogy, prophetic religion, cultural praxis, Latina feminism, and decolonial thought. Cross-listed with LST 290.

REL 291 | LOOKING FOR GOD IN LATIN AMERICA | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
An examination of religious traditions such as Catholicism, indigenous religions, and Protestantism in Latin America, with special focus on how these traditions have been transplanted and reshaped upon entry into varied Latino communities in the United States. Historical analyses of the Latin American roots of these traditions will provide contextualization for the ongoing examination of transnational religious cultures in the U.S. Cross-listed with LST 291.

REL 295 | SHIITE ISLAM | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course will look at the history and the various divisions of Shi’i Islam. Cross-listed with IWS 295.
REL 298 | METHODS AND APPROACHES IN THE STUDY OF RELIGION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course introduces students to the history of the discipline of religious studies with special attention to its emergence in the contexts of colonialism and the Enlightenment. The first goal of this course is for students to acquire a beginning understanding of how the field was constructed as a discipline of study and to explore the connections of its foundational methods of inquiry to the particular historical contexts in which those methods were developed. The second goal of this class is to expose students to important contemporary conversations within the discipline through the exploration of selected areas of inquiry and methods of analysis.
Any 100-level REL course is a prerequisite for this class.

REL 299 | RELIGIOUS STUDIES, OFF-CAMPUS | 4-8 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Religious Studies credits earned off-campus. Topics vary.

REL 300 | THEORIES OF CULTURE AND RELIGION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This seminar explores contemporary approaches used to study religion as a cultural phenomenon. Drawing on scholarship from a variety of disciplines that has shaped the academic study of religion, we will explore the relationship among religion, culture, and power in the contemporary world. We will examine some of the key issues that confront scholars in the field as they grapple with the politics of knowledge production and representation in the contemporary world.

REL 301 | THEORIES OF RELIGION AND SPIRITUALITY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
An interdisciplinary investigation into the nature of religious experience drawing on the fields of anthropology, psychology, sociology, and theology.

REL 302 | THEORIES OF RELIGION AND ETHICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This seminar explores the intersection between religion and ethics, centering on the question of how the study of religion contributes to contemporary academic discourse on ethics and, in turn, how the discipline of ethics helps to deepen understanding of the roles of religion in society. To this end, the course prepares students not only to grapple with religious and ethical theories, but also to analyze modern economic, political, social and environmental structures with critical attention to the religious worldviews and ethical frameworks that emerge out of, and at once underwrite, those structures. The course is therefore designed to enable students to bring familiar norms, traditions, and cultural behaviors under critical scrutiny. Consequently, the nature of this seminar is comparative, proceeding through comparisons both within and among diverse religious traditions.

REL 305 | TOPICS IN RELIGION AND CULTURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Examines particular issues in the relationship between religion and culture. Specific topics for current offering are noted in the current class schedule.

REL 340 | INQUIRIES IN WORLD RELIGIONS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Various topics within the comparative study of religions. Specific topics for current offering are noted in the current schedule.

REL 341 | TAOISM: CHINA'S INDIGENOUS HIGH RELIGION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A study of Taoist thought, imagination and expression, through sacred literature, the organization of clergy, and the nature and function of its institutions in interaction with the authority of the Chinese state, with Buddhism, and with the broader scheme of popular Chinese culture and religion.

REL 342 | ZEN MIND | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A study of the thought and practice of Zen Buddhism, focusing on the role of Zen in shaping ideas, ethics and the arts in Japan and America. Cross-listed with AAS 341.

REL 343 | MORAL PHILOSOPHY, POLITICAL POWER, & RELIGION IN PRE-MODERN CHINA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
An exploration of the major traditions informing pre-modern Chinese perspectives on morality, politics, social and personal formation, as well as cosmological and religious anchoring. Topics include Confucianism, Mohism, early Daoism, Legalism, correlative cosmology, liturgical Daoism, Buddhism, Neo-Confucianism, and also China’s traumatic encounter with western power and thought. The course not only addresses comparative issues concerning Chinese values in relation to western views, but also questions common comparative constructs such as those contrasting religion & power; individualism & communalism, and tradition & modernity.

REL 344 | YOGA AND TANTRA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
An examination of the history, philosophy and cultural meaning of body-oriented liberative techniques as they developed on the Indian subcontinent and Himalayan region in Hinduism and Buddhism. Students registering for this course are expected to have studied one or both of these traditions in courses such as REL 142, 143, 242, or 243, or in other courses. Background in theory is also useful. Cross-listed with AAS 344.

REL 351 | LIBERATION THEOLOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Focuses upon the ideas and practices of a radical movement for the transformation of Christianity and for social justice that originated in the "Basic Christian Communities" of Latin America and spread from there to North America and the Third World. Entails either an Applied Research or Service Learning component. Cross-listed with CTH 341 and PAX 331.
REL 362 | JEWS AND THEIR MESSIAHS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will introduce students to the history of messianic beliefs in Judaism from biblical times to the present. It is often assumed that “messianism,” i.e. the belief in a savior figure destined to come in the future to usher in a new age of redemption and moral goodness, has always been central to Judaism. The course will examine whether our modern concept of “messianism” can be used as a valid tool to describe Jewish religious experience. The course will also analyze the extent to which Jewish messianic texts varied over time by examining major messianic texts and movements in their historical, literary, and cultural contexts.
Sophomore standing or above is a prerequisite for this class.

REL 370 | FEMINIST THEOLOGIES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
An exploration of women’s experience as a primary resource and norm for theology, focusing on themes of inclusion, exclusion, representation and liberation in particular social, political and historical contexts.

REL 382 | RELIGION IN THE CONTEMPORARY UNITED STATES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
An advanced examination of traditional communities and contemporary movements in the United States.

REL 384 | THE CULTURE OF AMERICAN CATHOLICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
How has the unique experience of immigration shaped the American Catholic Church from the colonial period to the 21st century? How did the idea of "the Church" as an authoritative hierarchy come about in the mid-20th century, and how has that notion been challenged by immigrant communities, as well as artists and intellectuals? Drawing on the disciplines of history, sociology, anthropology, cultural theory, literature and the arts, this course looks at those who built the church and those who challenged and changed it. Cross-listed as CTH 384 and MLS 464.

REL 390 | INTEGRATING SEMINAR | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This seminar is intended for Religious Studies majors and is designed around existing research projects in which students demonstrate their ability to analyze specific examples of religion in cultural context and to situate their analytical perspectives within particular approaches in the academic study of religion. Class readings and discussions will help students reflect critically on the relation of religious studies as a discipline to other disciplines, to their previous coursework, and to their intellectual development. Students will be expected to present their research projects at a meeting of the Religious Studies department, and encouraged to present their work in other venues.

REL 392 | FOREIGN STUDY IN RELIGION | 4-8 quarter hours

Third-year course covering oral and written communication, reading and writing, and grammar and syntax. Students will explore media, pop culture, literature and politics as they improve their language skills. Russian 106 or equivalent, including placement test or permission of instructor, is recommended.

RUS 202 | ADVANCED RUSSIAN LANGUAGE II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Third-year course covering oral and written communication, reading and writing, and grammar and syntax. Students will explore media, pop culture, literature and politics as they improve their language skills. Russian 106 or equivalent, including placement test or permission of instructor, is recommended.

RUS 203 | ADVANCED RUSSIAN LANGUAGE III | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Third-year course covering oral and written communication, reading and writing, and grammar and syntax. Students will explore media, pop culture, literature and politics as they improve their language skills. Russian 106 or equivalent, including placement test or permission of instructor, is recommended.

RUS 205 | ADVANCED RUSSIAN: LITERATURE AND CULTURE I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Grammar, written composition and cultural readings for native speakers of Russian.

RUS 206 | ADVANCED RUSSIAN: LITERATURE AND CULTURE II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Continued emphasis on improved grammar and writing for native speakers of Russian with collateral cultural readings.

RUS 207 | ADVANCED RUSSIAN: LITERATURE AND CULTURE III | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Advanced composition and writing course emphasizing standard and literary language with appropriate literary and cultural readings for native speakers of Russian.

RUS 208 | ADVANCED RUSSIAN: LITERATURE AND CULTURE IV | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Continued emphasis on improved grammar and writing for native speakers of Russian with collateral cultural readings.

RUS 297 | SPECIAL TOPICS IN RUSSIAN | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
See schedule for current offerings.

RUS 298 | STUDY ABROAD | 1-8 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Variable credit.

RUS 299 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 1-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Variable credit.

RUS 306 | WARRIORS, WITCHES, FIREBIRDS AND VAMPIRES: INTRODUCTION TO RUSSIAN FOLKLORE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will introduce students to the rich and dynamic body of Russian folk texts and belief. Course readings will include epic poems, skazki (fairy tales), ballads, legends, incantations, and elements of popular culture. Students will learn and apply contemporary theories of folklore and traditional folk belief. The course will touch on the role of Russian folklore themes in literature and film. Emphasis on primary source materials with supplemental theory and history. Readings in Russian. Cross-listed with MOL 306. Russian 106 or equivalent, including placement test or permission of instructor, is recommended.

RUS 316 | TOPICS IN THE RUSSIAN NOVEL | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The course will allow students to read and analyze novels from important Russian authors such as Pushkin, Gogol, Turgenev, Dostoevsky, Tolstoy, as well as other. Students will write essays and participate in individual and group projects in the format of Round-Table discussion. Cross-listed with MOL 316. Russian 106 or equivalent, including placement test or permission of instructor, is recommended.

RUS 317 | TOPICS IN THE RUSSIAN SHORT STORY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The course will allow students to read and analyze short stories from important Russian authors such as Pushkin, Gogol, Turgenev, Tolstoy, Chekhov, Gorky and Korolenko. Students will write papers and present short stories on these authors as well as others. Cross-listed with MOL 316. Russian 106 or equivalent, including placement test or permission of instructor, is recommended.

RUS 318 | MASTERPEICES OF RUSSIAN LITERATURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will explore masterpieces of Russian literature from a variety of genres: plays, novels, short stories and poetry. Works by authors such as Tolstoy, Chekhov, Dostoevsky, Gogol, Nabokov, Pushkin, Turgenev, Akhmatova, Mayakovskiy, Pasternak and Yevtushenko will be read within their historical context to provide a basis for literary appreciation and analysis. Russian 106 or equivalent, including placement test or permission of instructor, is recommended.

RUS 360 | REALISM IN RUSSIAN DRAMA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Russian Theater of the 18-19th century appeared in parallel to the development of realism in Russian literature. The movement dominated from approximately 1845 to 1905. The course presents some of the greatest Russian plays of the 19th century by Alexander Pushkin, Nikolai Gogol, Alexander Griboedov, Alexander Ostrovsky, and Anton Chekhov. Russian 106 or equivalent, including placement test or permission of instructor, is recommended.
RUS 361 | MODERN RUSSIAN DRAMA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Russian plays by a selection of the most important authors. Readings may include Chekhov, Gorky, Bulgakov, TEFI and others. Some critical works will be included. The student will read, analyze and interpret the plays, comedies and dramas, both with respect to form and meaning. In the process they will develop greater insight into the social and multicultural issues of the time period in which the plays were written. Cross-list with MOL 361. Russian 106 or equivalent, including placement test or permission of instructor, is recommended.

RUS 364 | MODERN RUSSIAN AUTHORS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course explores works of the most influential Russian authors of the Modern period. Authors might include Anton Chekhov, Vladimir Nabokov, Mikhail Bulgakov, Evgeny Zamyatin, and more. Students will explore several genres, including poetry, novel, short, story, and plays. These authors and works will be studied in the context of their times. Cross-listed with MOL 364. Russian 106 or equivalent, including placement test of permission of instructor, recommended.

RUS 369 | RUSSIAN LITERATURE AND FILM | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Greatest Russian short stories, plays, and novels of the 19-20th century, as presented in films by Soviet and Post-Soviet film-makers. Readings in the original of Tolstoy, Dostoevsky, Ostrovsky, Chekhov, Bulgakov, and Pasternak. Russian 106 or equivalent, including placement test or permission of instructor, is recommended.

RUS 393 | RUSSIAN FOR MASS MEDIA, POLITICS, AND CULTURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Introduction to the structures and vocabulary of Russian news media with emphasis on politics and current events. Weekly readings and writing assignments from television, print media, and Internet news sources. Emphasis on building vocabulary and understanding of current political news and events. Individualized research/writing project. Russian 106 or equivalent, including placement test or permission of instructor, is recommended.

RUS 395 | FOREIGN LANGUAGES ACROSS THE CURRICULUM | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The two credit FLAC course allows students to enrich their experience in the co-required course through added reading, writing, listening and speaking activities in Russian. Students must have the equivalent of 106 or higher ability in Russian to take this two credit component. Please contact the Department of Modern Languages if you have questions about this course or about language placement.

RUS 397 | SPECIAL TOPICS IN RUSSIAN | 4 quarter hours

Science, Technology, Engineering and Math (STEM)

STEM 230 | INTRODUCTION TO EARTH AND SPACE SCIENCE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course provides an overview of the dynamic geological nature of Earth, its place in the solar system and universe, and the fundamental Earth-sky-human relationship. The format of the course is lecture, discussion, laboratory activities, and student group presentations. The course content is aligned with the Illinois Earth and Space Science Content Area Standards for educators and thus also meets the needs of secondary education majors wishing to pass the Illinois state exam for certification in earth and space science. LSP 120 or HON 180 is recommended. Formerly SDV 230.

STEM 231 | INTRODUCTION TO EARTH AND SPACE SCIENCE (WITHOUT LAB) | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course provides an overview of the dynamic geological nature of Earth, its place in the solar system and universe, and the fundamental Earth-sky-human relationship. Students will develop an understanding of 1) the processes that shape Earth’s surface and interior over geologic time, 2) the formation, evolution, and physical properties of the sun and its planets, asteroids, and comets, 3) the physical basis for phenomena such as eclipses, phases, and seasons, 4) the formation, evolution, and properties of stars, galaxies, and the universe, 5) the historical progression of human understanding of Earth’s geologic history and its place in space and time, and 6) the associated technologies that have enabled this progression. Students will encounter several historical examples that illustrate the provisional nature of science and the interaction of experiment, observation, and theory. The format of the course is lectures, discussions, laboratory activities, and student group presentations. Formerly SDV 231.

STEM 240 | SCIENCE AT THE EDGE OF SPACE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Earth’s atmosphere and near-space environment play an increasingly important role in our lives in areas such as global warming, ozone depletion, and telecommunications. The upper atmosphere is also a starting point for human exploration of space beyond Earth. In addition to learning about Earth’s upper atmosphere and beyond, students will build simple scientific experiments and launch them on a weather balloon to an altitude of 100,000 feet. Formerly SDV 240.

STEM 310 | SCIENTIFIC MODELING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Introduction to mathematical models used in scientific work: discrete dynamical systems, continuous models, stochastic models, Markov chains, and compartment models. Course is example-driven, with models being implemented on the computer. MAT 151 recommended. Formerly SDV 310. MAT 150 or LSP 120 and 121 are a prerequisite for this class.
STEM 360 | SCIENTIFIC DATA ANALYSIS I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Descriptive methods of data analysis, probability models, statistical inferential procedures including regression and analysis of variance, especially as it relates to scientific data arising from observations and experiments. Includes the use of one or more computer statistical analysis packages. MAT 150 recommended. Formerly SDV 360.

STEM 361 | SCIENTIFIC DATA ANALYSIS II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Advanced statistical and data-mining methods with science-related case studies. Topics include multiple regression, logistic regression, decision trees, and naive Bayesian classification. STEM 360 recommended. Formerly SDV 361.

STEM 390 | SENIOR CAPSTONE I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Students will examine a scientific issue with historical or public policy significance from multiple points of view, ethical, social, as well as scientific. The topic will necessarily be one in which the interpretation and visualization of data plays a significant role in framing debate. Students will work individually or in small groups to create projects featuring the interplay of quantitative and non-quantitative approaches. STEM 361 recommended. Formerly SDV 390.

STEM 391 | SENIOR CAPSTONE II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Students work on a quarter-length project whose end product is either a detailed mathematical analysis or a visualization of several large scientific data sets. The project will integrate a few of the science topics done in SDV 390 with data analysis and visualization. Collaborations with researchers and organizations such as educational institutions and museums are especially encouraged.

STEM 399 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 1-6 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Formerly SDV 399. (variable credit)

STEM 405 | ECOLOGY FOR TEACHERS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course provides a broad survey of ecological principles through laboratory and field investigations appropriate in an urban setting. The course focus is on the use of local environments to promote awareness of and appreciation for the complexity, diversity and structure of the natural world while developing skills in hypothesis testing, experimental design and data analysis. Formerly SDV 405.

STEM 409 | MATHEMATICAL METHODS FOR MIDDLE SCHOOL SCIENCE TEACHERS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course develops the mathematical methods that support the teaching of science at the middle school level: proportional reasoning, rates, exponents and scientific notation, graphing, and elementary modeling. The course incorporates the use of technology such as calculators and spreadsheets for scientific analysis.

STEM 410 | TOPICS FOR TEACHERS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Selected topics in science and science education. Formerly SDV 410. (variable credit)

STEM 411 | FOUNDATIONS OF PHYSICAL SCIENCE I | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course explores the nature of scientific inquiry, using a historical case study of the development of classical physics in the work of Copernicus, Brahe, Kepler, Galileo, and Newton. It explores the roles of observation, classification, experiments, theory, and mathematical models in science as well as the character of scientific change. Formerly SDV 411.

STEM 412 | FOUNDATIONS OF PHYSICAL SCIENCE II | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Fundamental concepts of physics examined quantitatively: velocity, acceleration, surface area, volume, density. Elementary modeling for data analysis, including spreadsheets and data acquisition software. Scaling of physical quantities. Formerly SDV 412.

STEM 413 | LIGHT AND WAVES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Fundamentals of wave motion with application to light, water, and sound. Teachers are introduced to a variety of physical science topics in the curriculum as well as an example of the extraordinary unifying power of physics concepts such as waves. Formerly SDV 413.

STEM 420 | CHEMISTRY FOR TEACHERS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
The structure and composition of matter. Physical and chemical change, examined from conceptual viewpoints which include atomic theory, stoichiometry, periodicity, bonding, equilibrium, thermodynamics and kinetics. Formerly SDV 420.

STEM 421 | CELL BIOLOGY FOR TEACHERS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course focuses on the chemical and cellular nature of living organisms, cell structure and function, and heredity. Enzymes, the movement of materials across membranes, photosynthesis, respiration, cell division, and basic genetics. Formerly SDV 421.

STEM 422 | EVOLUTION AND DIVERSITY FOR TEACHERS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course explores the subjects of biological evolution and species diversity. Topics covered include the history of our understandings of the origin and nature of species, mechanisms that produce evolutionary change, geographic variation and speciation, current theories and evidence of life’s origin and the history of life on earth. Controversies in biological evolution, both scientific and cultural will be discussed. Formerly SDV 422.

STEM 423 | PLANT AND ANIMAL BIOLOGY FOR TEACHERS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course focuses on the structure and function of living organisms. Students will investigate how different organisms solve common problems of food acquisition, digestion and the distribution of nutrients, waste removal, gas exchange, maintenance of homeostasis and reproduction. While this course examines the diversity of living forms, there is a special emphasis on the structure and function of the human body. Formerly SDV 423.

STEM 425 | TOPICS IN LIFE SCIENCES FOR TEACHERS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Diverse topics in Life Sciences appropriate for middle school and high school students.
STEM 430 | ASTROBIOLOGY FOR TEACHERS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Astrobiology focuses on basic questions such as: How does life of any kind begin and develop? Does life exist elsewhere in the universe? What are the environmental limits for life? What is the future of life on the earth and beyond? The course reviews the origin and evolution of life on Earth and goes on to examine the prospects of habitats capable of supporting life in our solar system, and the potential for planets and life to exist orbiting other stars. Students will work with NASA remote sensing data of the earth, the other planets, and their moons. Formerly SDV 430.

STEM 431 | ASTRONOMY FOR TEACHERS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course emphasizes astronomy particularly relevant to the middle school science curriculum. The structure of the solar system, motion of the sun, phases of the moon, familiarity with the night sky, stellar structure and evolution, galaxies, and introduction to cosmology. Students will be familiarized with student reading materials particularly appropriate for the combined teaching of science and reading. Students will make observations and use sky simulation software. Formerly SDV 431.

STEM 432 | GEOLOGY AND PLANETARY SCIENCE FOR TEACHERS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Planetary formation and evolution. Plate tectonics and the rock cycle, including volcanism, planetary interiors, weathering, sedimentation, and metamorphism. Formerly SDV 432.

STEM 440 | HEAT AND ENERGY FOR TEACHERS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Concept of energy, its nature, forms, and transfer with applications to physical science and earth science. Definition of energy in terms of work, potential and kinetic energy, conservation of energy, thermal energy, solar energy, energy in earth systems. Formerly SDV 440.

STEM 441 | WEATHER AND CLIMATE FOR TEACHERS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Basic physical and chemical processes that shape weather and climate. Solar radiation and the seasons, composition and structure of the atmosphere, atmospheric processes, human effects, historical and contemporary climate change. This course emphasizes quantitative methods. Formerly SDV 441.

STEM 442 | ENVIRONMENTAL SCIENCE FOR TEACHERS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
A general introduction to the scientific background of some of the most important environmental problems facing urban areas, the nation and the world. Population dynamics, water and energy resources, ecosystem degradation, extinction and the loss of biodiversity, and climate change. The course will include a field observation and experiment.

STEM 461 | NUMBERS AND OPERATIONS FOR ELEMENTARY MATHEMATICS TEACHERS I | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is the first of a three course sequence that develops teachers? conceptual understanding of whole numbers, integers, rational numbers, and real numbers in order for the teachers to take on the role of being a math teaching specialist in their school. The courses emphasize problem solving, cognitive demand, equitable access, and the development of student agency. Topics of the first quarter include whole numbers, the laws of arithmetic, place value, models for multiplication, models for division (inverse multiplication model, measurement model, and partitive model).

STEM 462 | NUMBERS AND OPERATIONS FOR ELEMENTARY MATHEMATICS TEACHERS II | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is the second of a three course sequence that develops teachers? conceptual understanding of whole numbers, integers, rational numbers, and real numbers in order for the teachers to take on the role of being a math teaching specialist in their school. The courses emphasize problem solving, cognitive demand, equitable access, and the development of student agency. Topics include rational numbers, different models for fractions including part-to-part, part-to-whole, and area, operations with fractions.

STEM 461 (or instructor permission) is a prerequisite for this class.

STEM 463 | NUMBERS AND OPERATIONS FOR ELEMENTARY MATHEMATICS TEACHERS III | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is the third of a three course sequence that develops teachers? conceptual understanding of whole numbers, integers, rational numbers, and real numbers in order for the teachers to take on the role of being a math teaching specialist in their school. The courses emphasize problem solving, cognitive demand, equitable access, and the development of student agency. Topics include factors and multiples of whole numbers, greatest common divisor and least common multiple of whole numbers, prime factorization, decimal representations of fractions, use of ratios and proportions to represent and analyze quantitative relationships, percentages and scaling.

STEM 462 (or instructor permission) is a prerequisite for this class.

STEM 464 | GEOMETRY FOR ELEMENTARY MATHEMATICS TEACHERS I | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course launches a two course sequence that develops teachers? conceptual understanding of geometry in order for the teachers to take on the role of being a math teaching specialist in their school. Teachers will gain fluency with geometric terms and concepts and think strategically about geometric problem solving. Topics include the foundations of geometry, and its system of definitions, axioms, and basic theorems; the classification of shapes; transformations of the plane, including reflections, rotations, and translations.

STEM 465 | GEOMETRY FOR ELEMENTARY MATHEMATICS TEACHERS II | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is the second of a two course sequence that develops teachers? conceptual understanding of geometry in order for the teachers to take on the role of being a math teaching specialist in their school. Teachers will gain fluency with geometric terms and concepts and think strategically about geometric problem solving. Topics include geometric measurement and its applications, including length, perimeter, and area; transformations of the plane including dilations and similitudes; the Pythagorean Theorem.

STEM 464 (or instructor permission) is a prerequisite for this class.

STEM 466 | INTEGRATING NUMBER AND OPERATIONS AND ALGEBRA FOR ELEMENTARY MATHEMATICS TEACHERS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course draws on the context and examples from previous courses in number and operations and geometry to develop teachers? understanding of algebraic reasoning. Topics include generalizing and analyzing patterns, creating and interpreting expressions and equations using variables, and solving real world problems that model continuous situations.

STEM 463 and STEM 464, or instructor permission, are prerequisites for this class.
This course develops the aptitudes and leadership skills required for elementary school mathematics teachers to act as math teaching specialists in their school. The course emphasizes advocating for high-quality mathematics instruction, enhancing collaboration in mathematics within and across grade levels, and supporting professional learning in high-quality mathematics instruction.

At least three courses from the following list are prerequisites for this class: STEM 461, STEM 462, STEM 463, STEM 464, STEM 465, STEM 466.

STEM 481 | ALGEBRA FOR MIDDLE SCHOOL MATH TEACHERS I | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is the first of a three course sequence that provides teachers with a deep, conceptual understanding of the first year of secondary level Algebra to prepare them to teach secondary level Algebra to middle school students. These courses heavily emphasize problem solving and integrate pedagogical content knowledge and research on student preconceptions and growth. The first quarter?2 topics include: variables, expressions, identities, the Distributive Law and its consequences, the nature of solving equations, equivalent equations, solving of linear equations and inequalities, slope and rate of change, equations of lines, parallel and perpendicular lines.

STEM 482 | ALGEBRA FOR MIDDLE SCHOOL MATH TEACHERS II | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is the second of a three course sequence that provides teachers with a deep, conceptual understanding of the first year of secondary level Algebra to prepare them to teach secondary level Algebra to middle school students. These courses heavily emphasize problem solving and integrate pedagogical content knowledge and research on student preconceptions and growth. The second quarter?2 topics include: definition of a mathematical function, domains of functions, graphs of functions, piecewise defined functions, systems of linear equations, exponential functions, function transformations, absolute value inequalities, and systems of inequalities in the plane.

STEM 483 | ALGEBRA FOR MIDDLE SCHOOL MATH TEACHERS III | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is the first of a three course sequence that provides teachers with a deep, conceptual understanding of the first year of secondary level Algebra to prepare them to teach secondary level Algebra to middle school students. These courses heavily emphasize problem solving and integrate pedagogical content knowledge and research on student preconceptions and growth. The third quarter?2 topics include: polynomial functions, the graphs of polynomial functions including their end behavior, quadratic functions, vertex form for quadratic functions, quadratic equations, arithmetic and geometric sequences.

STEM 482 (or instructor permission) is a prerequisite for this class.

STEM 489 | SCIENCE TEACHING CAPSTONE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Teachers will further examine current research on how students at the middle school level learn science concepts and conduct an action research project involving science teaching. STEM 405, STEM 412, STEM 413 and six content courses recommended. Formerly SDV 490.

STEM 488 | TOPICS FOR MATHEMATICS AND SCIENCE TEACHERS | 1-4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Diverse topics in teaching and learning of mathematics and science. These courses are designed for current and future teachers. (variable credit)

STEM 489 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Formerly SDV 699. (variable credit)

Scientific World (SW)

SW 152 | STRESS REDUCTION USING HUMOR AND SPIRITUALITY | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Stress affects the body in dramatic ways, and is a major contributing factor in chronic and degenerative diseases. We will understand/describe the physiology and biochemistry of stress and, more importantly, apply effective methods to reduce and manage it. Effective stress reduction and burnout prevention then become important health, wellness, productivity and disease prevention strategies for individuals, schools, businesses, the medical industry and the culture. The effective stress reduction techniques include breathing, biofeedback, humor, spiritual exploration, connection and inspiration. The holistic paradigm of body, mind and spirit supports our informed search for meaning, connection, calm productivity and enhanced health. (2-4 quarter hours)

SW 153 | SCIENCE FOR CITIZENS | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Students will learn basic knowledge of science as they engage in activities that are connected to their everyday life. They will explore their natural ecosystem and be able to describe various functions. They will engage in the scientific method through observations, hypotheses, data collection and basic data analysis. Students will apply their critical thinking based on the scientific method to local environmental or science related issues/events. (2-4 quarter hours)

SW 193 | SEXUAL ORIENTATION & SCIENCE | 2-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will engage you in scientific inquiry on the nature of sexual orientation. You will be challenged to master the scientific content of leading programs of research on twins, brain and other anatomical structures, hormones, genetic linkages, birth-order, and animal behavior through assigned readings, lectures, and multimedia resources. Moreover, you will also engage in the scientific process through a collaborative research project concerning an aspect of sexual orientation that leads you through the steps of stating a question, designing a study, collecting and analyzing data, and interpreting the results. You will also develop skills in identifying the limits to particular forms of scientific inquiry by recognizing the constraints of methods, sources of bias, reliability of results, and certainty of conclusions. This course will encourage you to place the modern research within ethical and social contexts in which to make judgments about the potential relevance and impacts of scientific knowledge about sexual orientation.
SW 201 | DATA ANALYTICS | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is designed as an introduction to the emerging field of analytics, an inductive approach to gaining insights on big data, thus informing decision-making. It covers various fundamental techniques rooted in management and decision sciences to solve problems in various functional areas, such as marketing and production. In this course, students will learn various analytical tools and demonstrate their ability to understand, present and discuss the results, thus building a strong foundation in supporting decision-making in a variety of scenarios. Major topics include the applications of logical and financial functions; data visualization and manipulation, what-if analysis; and linear programming for decision making. (2 quarter hours)

Management Information Systems majors and minors are restricted from registering for this section.

SW 206 | NUTRITION AND BIOLOGICAL DEVELOPMENT | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Today's consumers want and need to be educated about taking charge of their own health. With the current fast-paced world that has spilled over into our eating habits, food choices have become unlimited. Choosing a healthful approach to diet requires basic information about our body's nutritional needs. The greater our understanding of our basic bodily needs, the better we are able to make choices concerning our health. This course will offer an overview of the basic science of nutrition, with an emphasis on the relationship between disease and nutrition, and current research findings.

SW 208 | ISSUES IN SCIENCE AND RELIGION | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course develops students' understandings of the scientific and religious constructions of self in the modern world (natural and social). The institutions and bodies of knowledge comprising science, religion, and their overlap are critically analyzed. Key historic debates are examined, for example: the Vatican's trial of Galileo for his teachings of a heliocentric universe; the controversial reception of Darwin's theory of evolution; and the 2001 U.S. policy on embryonic stem cell research. Through such analyses, the course develops students' skills in making ethically-informed decisions and thus recognizing their roles in the public debates involving the intersection of science and religion.

SW 212 | URBAN ENVIRONMENTAL SCIENCE | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The study of environmental science uncovers the relationship between the built environment and the natural processes of the earth. This includes human interactions and the impact on habitats, plants, animals and those non-living entities that we rely on such as water, air and soil. An examination of the dynamics of human population growth and migration, food production and climate issues, chemical toxicology and health, waste and sustainability, energy production and consumption will illustrate how these issues are connected by increasing global urbanization. This course will provide the framework to guide your decisions as a consumer and a citizen in both a global and local environment. Role-playing and discussions on everything from the choices of fabrics for clothes, transportation, animal rights to the amount of water used while brushing your teeth will show the connections of your behavior to global consequences. Through reading, research, writing, class discussion, individual and group projects, students will learn the key to a sustainable future.

SW 217 | UNDERSTANDING AND MEASURING INTELLIGENCE | 2-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In this course, students examine intelligence testing and its uses in employee selection and placement. Students learn the principles of assessing human traits (reliability, validity, bias and other systematic errors), and apply them to intelligence testing. We will work to define "intelligence" and consider various approaches to intelligence, contrasting the theories of unitary vs. multiple intelligences. Students will examine the implications of the definitions and measurement approaches on different groups of people, both historically and currently, with attention to the unintended effects of the biases of test developers and the ethical implications of different approaches and uses of intelligence testing.

SW 218 | W.A.T.E.R. - WHAT ABOUT THE OTHER ESSENTIAL RESOURCE? | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Water supports all aspects of our life. Water impacts our environment, health, security, and the economy. There is a need for society to be ?water wise? in today's world. Creating sustainable methods to resolving water quantity and quality problems in stormwater, wastewater, watershed and water distribution systems is essential. If you are interested in learning more about the dynamics of water and how you can be an engaged citizen, this is the learning experience for you. We will explore and discover scientific, social, cultural, artistic, and historical viewpoints of water. Finally, this course offers an opportunity for learners to think critically, problem-solve, engage in active learning, and most of all peer collaboration. (2-4 hours)

SW 219 | NEUROPLASTICITY AND THE AGING BRAIN | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In this course, we will examine the latest research on the aging process and, specifically, its relationship to the brain. We will cover a mix of material from psychological and, especially, neuroscientific fields. Students will also be introduced to the field of neuroplasticity, which is revolutionizing the way we understand the functioning power of the brain. Neuroplasticity, in simple terms, is the brain's ability to rearrange its connections and, therefore, its functions based on experiences. In other words, the brain has the capacity to literally change itself, based on experiences, to achieve positive results. The goals of this course are to understand how the brain works, examine its impact on our daily actions, study how aging impacts brain functioning, discover the learning and adjustment potential of the brain, and apply the principles of the 3 P's. We will use numerous examples to understand the brain, including health, work, relational, and personal settings. Students will ultimately answer the question of whether they will have an aging or reengaging brain.
SW 223 | PRINCIPLES OF A SUSTAINABLE LIFESTYLE | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Our consumer choices, habits and lifestyle have a local and global impact. The items we consume, such as housing, furnishings, clothing, transportation, travel, food, recreation, entertainment, and disposables mainly come from non-renewable natural resources produced in far away lands and have a cradle-to-grave lifecycle. Awareness and education as to the safety and efficacy of consumer products is often suspect with contradicting information from the media, manufacturers, government and advocacy groups. Employing a sustainable paradigm for all of your consumer choices will allow you to have a smaller footprint, (ecological and carbon) on the planet and live a healthier, guilt free existence. We will explore the meaning of the "triple bottom line" or cradle to cradle approach to consumption. Consumer models, field trips and personal experiments will help pave the way to become a conscientious global citizen.

SW 229 | ISSUES IN HEALTH POLICY AND ADMINISTRATION | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The goal of this course is to provide a general overview of the American health care and health insurance systems. We will first discuss the debates over the enactment and framing of the American constitution, and the political institutions that the nation then developed. We then will analyze the health care system that emerged in this political context, focusing on 1) the rise of the private health insurance system; 2) the incentives provided by government to encourage employers to purchase such insurance on behalf of their employees; and 3) the debate over the role of government in providing coverage for those outside the employer-sponsored health insurance systems. We will examine in some depth the evolution and current context of the Medicaid Program, taking a close look at the politics that led to the 2003 Medicare Modernization Act, as well as the issues raised by the implementation of that law. The following questions will be examined in this course: Is it possible to provide coverage to the uninsured without increasing the national debt? What are the main drivers of rising health care costs and what are the options for cost-containment? What are the options for aiding the uninsured? What are the options for paying for any such initiatives? What are the longstanding obstacles to comprehensive reform proposals? What are the politics of the current, Affordable Care Act, reform initiative? Why is it that the American health delivery system suffers from specialty maldistribution (too many specialists and not enough generalists) and geographic maldistribution (too many providers in some communities and too few in others)? What is managed care? What does the managed care industry look like today? What is the difference between disease management, care management and the current efforts to create "medical homes?" What are provider profiles and how are they used to improve quality? Why is it that the nation does not have an effective long-term care insurance system? What are the alternatives to institutionalization for those in need of long-term care services?

SW 230 | UNDERSTANDING AND APPLYING PROJECT MANAGEMENT | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Project Management is a very important business discipline that can become very complicated. There are numerous Project Management methodologies, and all of them share the same basic steps and tools. The purpose of this course is to demystify Project Management by presenting its basic framework and tools. The course translates Project Management theory into a practical and effective methodology the student will be able to apply on the job. Starting with working definitions of Project and Project Management, the course describes how projects are initiated, evaluated and organized with analytic techniques such as discounted cash flow and PERT/CPM. Project execution and control are covered next, along with the documentation and communications skills that are needed to keep a project on track. The course concludes with an overview of Project Management applied to computer software development.

SW 232 | APPLIED INFORMATION MANAGEMENT SYSTEMS | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course introduces students to the key concepts in the field of Management Information Systems (MIS) and enhances understanding of the issues that business organizations face when developing and managing information systems. In this course, students will be presented with a broad overview of the field to first examine the increasing impact of information technology in business organizations, and second, in preparation for more advanced courses in data analytics and information systems. Specifically, the three major topics covered include (1) e-businesses and networks, (2) databases, as well as (3) enterprise resource planning (ERP) and process models. These topics are designed to prepare students for further inquiry on web analytics, data mining, project management, supply chain management, as well as business in general. By completing the course, students should be better equipped to apply IT skills to solve business problems, to participate in IT projects, and to communicate more knowledgeably with IT professionals. (2 quarter hours)

SW 235 | YOGA AND WELL-BEING | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The ancient practice of yoga offers a combination of benefits: physical endeavor, relaxation, contemplation and stress reduction. This course will explore the many dimensions of yoga. Class meetings provide time for the practice of yoga movement, focused breathing and meditation, all of which help to reduce stress. Students explore the impact of these practices on body and mind through independent research, reflection and class discussion. As a result of this course, students will learn fundamental yoga movement; identify the impact of yoga on the physical body; explore yoga philosophy; and understand how yoga is one component of well-being.

SW 244 | STATISTICAL REASONING: UNDERSTANDING AND USING STATISTICS | 2-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will teach students the basic concepts of statistics. Students will investigate topics including descriptive statistics, correlation, normal distributions, probability, sampling distributions and hypothesis testing. By the end of this course, students will able to complete a statistical analysis of datasets using Microsoft Excel as the primary tool. Considerable time will also be devoted to discussing how statistics are used and abused.
SW 246 | PHARMACOLOGY AND HEALTH | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will be an overview of the main human biological systems in health while highlighting and emphasizing the chief pharmacological agents used to treat common human diseases and pathologies of those systems. Discussion will include pharmacokinetics, drug action mechanisms, side effects, costs, and the role that prevention might play in attempting to minimize drug utilization. The course will include a historical overview of the use of medicine throughout the ages and consider current drug development. Through the use of a textbook, current literature review, discussion and audio visual adjuncts, the course will help to build a foundation for basic understanding of the relationship between healthy human biological systems, pathology development, and how pharmaceutical agents relate to health and disease.

SW 247 | CREATING ACADEMIC AND BUSINESS DOCUMENTS | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This hands on course is conducted in a computer classroom so students can learn software skills by creating academic and business documents using MS Office 2013? PowerPoint and Word. This is not a writing class - students will not write any papers. Focus is on mastering PowerPoint and Word software skills. Plain text will be provided for classroom work and for weekly homework assignments. Students will format text and analyze the impact of colors in PowerPoint and develop Word formatting skills for academic papers and business documents including flyers and brochures. Students will analyze real-world situations, identify appropriate software solutions and apply the best software to accomplish tasks and goals. Students will present their own PowerPoint creation in the last class. (2 hours)

SW 249 | ANIMAL SCIENCE AND THE ROLE OF MODERN ZOOS | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The main objective of this course is for students to increase their love and understanding of animals!!! It will be a fun and interactive course where you will gain a general understanding of the animal kingdom and how animals are classified. You then will be able to identify animals as an individual organism, describe their natural habitat and better understand their role or ecological niche as it relates to its environment. Students will discover the importance of zoos and how they have become leaders in providing the knowledge needed to preserve the natural world. You'll learn what zoos do with that information and how they make a difference in providing the knowledge needed to preserve the natural world. Students will investigate different zoological institutions and compare how each are unique in their animal collections, the way they support and conduct research, and convey that knowledge to the scientific community and the general public.

SW 250 | WIDGETS, CLICKS, & TWEETS: ESSENTIALS OF APPLIED WEB TECHNOLOGY | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will provide students with an overview of the history of the Internet and basic marketing strategies as they relate to the Internet and Web 2.0 technologies. Students will learn about how to keep abreast of new technology, how these technologies can be used to market services and products as well as how they can be used to create and maintain social networks for professional use.

SW 254 | ENVIRONMENTAL SUSTAINABILITY AND ADVOCACY | 2-6 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
BRIDGE PROGRAM COURSE. This course focuses on the interdisciplinary study of humans, the environment, and their interrelationships. It includes natural resources and processes, growth and change, values, and individual responsibility and civic engagement. It will explore the complex relationship of the individual to urban systems and of urban systems to the world environment. Emphasis will be given to the ecology of metropolitan Chicago, engaging and challenging students to propose and advocate for programs and policies that bring about a more sustainable city — “What could a sustainable metropolitan Chicago look like? What are you willing to do to achieve that ideal?” Writing assignments and field work, as appropriate to the discipline, are part of the course.

SW 255 | BRAIN, MIND AND BEHAVIOR | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Scientists have only recently found means to isolate chemicals of the brain, analyze its electrical systems and try to answer questions such as: How does the brain strike a balance between its genetic blueprint and influences from the environment? Where does it "hold" language? This course explains what science knows and does not know about the human brain. It draws on the most current findings, theories, and applications of brain science. Students will meet for guided discussions and will be given textual material for class activities and independent assignments.

SW 256 | EVERYDAY ECOLOGY | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Every week, we learn of typhoons and landslides, floods and hurricanes, droughts and other natural catastrophes. Scientists now agree that the major cause of climate shift is man-made, specifically our use and abuse of global energy resources. In Everyday Ecology we will analyze our energy use patterns and explore practical alternatives. The word “ecology” originates from the meshing of two Greek words meaning the “study of homes.” Although the main focus of this course is the individual household, another “household” we must take into account is the economy. Ecological economics examines how both disciplines need to look toward the other to be viable long term. We will examine options to bring the earth household (ecology) and the human household (economy) together for the benefit of both. This course observes how "man" is connected to the world around him. It allows us to see our options in response to growing concern over global climate change. Through readings, field trips, activities, discussions and an analysis of our personal use of energy, this course enables us to become increasingly aware of ecological issues. You will learn to evaluate the effect of personal choices on the earth and be introduced to alternative, "greener" options.

SW 259 | PREHISTORIC LIFE | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course promotes students’ investigation of fossils to interpret the character of 3.5 billion years of biological evolution and ecological change on earth. By way of scientific reasoning, mathematical inference, and applicable technologies, emphasis is on the exploration of earliest evidence of life, development of multi-celled plants and animals, dinosaur evolution, mass extinction events, mammal diversification, human origins as well as appraisal of the societal reliance on fossil resources and the persistent debate over evolution versus creation. Learning is assessed through labs, a fieldtrip, an exam, video summaries, contributions to online discussions, and a research paper in a scientific format.
SW 260 | CLIMATE CHANGE & GLOBAL RISK MANAGEMENT | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course design positions students to analyze the distributive effects of climate change on natural and social systems. These consequences must be identified and their interactive effects measured. Social structures are vulnerable to major shifts in natural systems, and the security concerns linked to climate change require awareness and preparedness. Models of risk management and public security are analyzed in the light of the cascading effects of this global phenomenon.

(2-4 hours)

SW 261 | EXPLORATIONS IN BIOLOGY | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course provides an introductory study of organic macromolecules, the cell, genetic activity and the theory of evolution. Throughout the course we will stress the interdependence of the three biological sub-specialties of genetics, ecology and evolution.

SW 262 | THE HAPPINESS PROJECT | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
What is happiness? How do we know that we are happy? How can we become happier in our lives? In recent years, there have been an increasing number of college courses dedicated to the study of happiness, positive psychology, life satisfaction, etc. This course will be an introduction to how various fields and disciplines are examining topics relevant to the nature of happiness and well-being, while providing an opportunity for students to examine their own ideas and expectations for happiness. Using Gretchen Rubin’s popular book, The Happiness Project, as a guide, we will review the latest theories and research in psychology, the sciences, religion, and the arts, as well as ancient wisdom and popular culture, to determine what is known and assumed about happiness. Participants in the course will develop and assess their own happiness project during the last several weeks of the course.

SW 263 | NUTRITION FOR A LIFETIME | 2-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Today’s consumers want and need to be educated about taking charge of their own health. With the current fast-paced world that has spilled over into our eating habits, food choices have become unlimited. Choosing a healthful approach to diet requires basic information about our bodies’ nutritional needs. The greater our understanding of our basic bodily needs, the better we are able to make choices concerning our health. This course will offer an overview of the basic science of nutrition, with an emphasis on the relationship between disease and nutrition, and current research findings.

SW 264 | ENERGY AND HEALTH | 2-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will provide a framework for understanding human energy systems, such as digestion and respiration, in relation to current healthcare practices to enhance their effectiveness (dietary approach, manipulation therapies, acupuncture, exercise, and meditation). We will consider connections between social and environmental variables such as constitution, stress, lifestyle, and vital physiological functions. Each class will build on the basic understanding of biological systems in relation to energy through lecture and discussion. We will review literature on various healthcare practices to discern sound approaches and practical applications. Students will cultivate an appreciation for daily health choices that cumulatively affect their health.

SW 275 | BODY, MIND, SPIRIT: YOGA AND MEDITATION | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Why are 20 million Americans practicing yoga? This course answers that question with an introduction to yoga and meditation techniques and the underlying scientific and philosophical principles of the system of yoga. The first half of each class will be experiential, conducted as a yoga and meditation class for beginners, providing tools to reduce stress, focus the mind, and cultivate inner peace. This first hour and a half will use yoga postures, breathing exercises, and meditation techniques. The second half of each class will use readings, reflection, and discussion to examine the scientific and philosophical knowledge of yoga as a way to ease stress, strengthen the bone and muscle structures, lower blood pressure, increase flexibility and strength, improve mind functioning, and provide spiritual sustenance. We will read Yoga Mind Body and Spirit: A Return to Wholeness by Donna Farhi, and The Yoga Sutras of Patanjali, research articles on the scientific studies of yoga’s benefits from journals and websites, etc. Students will keep weekly reflection journal observations on the changes(s) they notice in themselves. This course will refresh, relax, rejuvenate. Yoga mats and other props will be provided. Bring/wear comfortable clothes (no jeans, belts, dresses). This is a Gentle Yoga class for beginners. Yoga means to unite or yoke so course will explore the ways to unite body, mind, spirit. This course is designed to 1) help establish good health and well-being; 2) gain scientific knowledge and understanding of the various systems of the human body; and 3) explore the spiritual benefits of meditation.

SW 282 | NUTRITION BASICS AND BEYOND | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This introductory course will provide a framework for understanding the fundamentals of nutrition, vitamins and minerals, nutrition and disease prevention, food labeling, nutrition through the life cycle, weight management and more. Each class will build upon the basics by exploring current issues and research related to specific topics. Throughout the course, students will begin to separate information from misinformation as well as gain practical knowledge to incorporate into day to day life.

SW 285 | ENVIRONMENTAL ETHICS | 2-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course contains two distinct strands of learning: (1) the current condition of the natural world and the ways it is approached scientifically; and (2) the major premises of the most significant ethical frameworks in use today. Using this knowledge, students investigate several contemporary environmental problems, identifying their underlying causes, and analyzing various proposed solutions. This is complemented by the intensive study of major ethical perspectives, particularly those which have developed alongside, and as a consequence of, grave environmental concerns. The course project is a collaborative endeavor to integrate the knowledge and skills acquired through mastery of both learning strands.
SW 292 | EXPLORING EARTH'S PHYSICAL FEATURES | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course advances student exploration of earth’s 4.5 billion year geologic record in order to evaluate the planet’s evolution and the interrelationships between humans and landforms. Through the application of scientific reasoning, mathematical inference, and prevailing technologies used by geologists, emphasis is on plate tectonics, geologic time, the rock cycle, weathering, earthquakes, fluvial features, rock structures, volcanoes, mountains, plateaus, plains, glacial features, deserts, caves, and coasts. Students also assess human reliance on landforms, the economics of landforms, and cases of earth pseudoscience. Learning is assessed through labs, fieldtrips, a scientifically-formatted research paper, an exam, and contributions to online discussions.

SW 295 | SUCCESSFUL INTERVIEWING | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Interviewing “the process of asking and answering questions” is a part of everyday experience. This course introduces and explores the foundational principles, theories and techniques of interviewing including the interpersonal communication process, common types of interviews, interview structure, questions and responses. Through collaborative and experiential learning activities, students will prepare for and participate in all aspects of the interview process as the interviewer and interviewee.

SW 301 | HEALTH INEQUALITIES AND SOCIAL ACTION | 2-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Health Inequalities and Social Action will focus on research methods of environmental science, ethnography, epidemiology and geospatial analysis against the backdrop of the collaborative research project titled: “Inequality of Life Expectancy in Chicago.” This course will demonstrate how the natural and social sciences connect to conduct collaborative research in order to pose meaningful questions about health disparities associated with life expectancy and to facilitate learning by taking social action.

SW 315 | URBAN SCIENCE CONNECTIONS | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Urban Science Connections will provide an opportunity for learners to investigate the inter-relationships between humans and their natural and/or physical environments in enhancing quality of life in urban environments. Learner’s lived experience will holistically connect science with urban settings, risk management, and social action using critical thinking, problem-solving, active learning, and peer-to-peer collaboration. Topics such as water, soil, ethical and legal issues, risk management, and global resources will be discussed. Soil and water impact our environment, health, security, and the economy. There is a need for society to be environmentally wise? in the world today. Creating sustainable methods to resolving global environmental issues is essential today. If you are interested in learning more about the dynamics of the urban environment and how you can be an engaged citizen, this is the learning experience for you. (2-4 hours)

SW 317 | NUTRITION & COMMUNITY | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Food is central to our being. The nutrients within food provide for our daily biological needs and homeostasis. Moment to moment, over days to months to years, the requirements and demands by our body for nutrients are met by the foods that we eat. How important are those foods that provide our nourishment for our health? What happens when the quantity or quality of those foods are challenged or less than optimal? What impact does it have on the individual? What impact does it have on the health and security of the society? What part does each of us play and what is our responsibility not only for individual health, but societal health now and into the future? This course will examine the scientific evidence for the role healthy food plays in the delicate homeostasis between the interconnected systems within the body as well as advance our understanding of the many nutrition related issues and challenges that exist within our communities in the quest for individual and societal health. Further, students will engage in a community related initiative that actively explores and integrates their understanding of the role that nutrition may have on the health of the greater community. Competences: L3, S4, S5. (6 cr hrs)

SW 320 | TECHNOLOGY, CRIME, AND CIVIC ENGAGEMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The focus of this course is the well-functioning civic community, and its reliance on the productive engagement of its members (group and individual). We examine crime in the age of the internet, and use models of civic engagement to posit novel solutions to these “hidden” and ubiquitous activities.

SW 328 | CHALLENGES IN GLOBAL HEALTH | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In 1967 the United States Surgeon General announced that it was "time to close the book on infectious disease". Antibiotics had been introduced in the 1940’s, there was an ever-lengthening list of diseases for which immunization was available, and many world health officials imagined a future free of infectious diseases. Yet, as we begin the twenty-first century, infectious diseases are still the leading cause of death in the world. Why? How do we begin to understand the emergence of AIDS, Ebola virus, Lyme disease or Hantavirus? How can we explain the worldwide reemergence of tuberculosis, a disease that had come close to being relegated to history books? In this online course we will seek answers as we study the nature of microbes and the complex, often interrelated factors that contribute to their ability to challenge us even as we pit our science and technologies against them. We will examine such factors as population growth, urbanization, ecological disruption, human migration and antibiotic misuse. In 1996 the Director-General of the World Health Organization announced, "We stand on the brink of a global crisis in infectious diseases." Clearly the book on infectious disease is still wide open, and we will read some of its pages.

SW 329 | DATABASE DEVELOPMENT FOR MANAGING INFORMATION | 2-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Using MS Office tools suite (in particular Access), this course takes students through the entire process for building a database system that will be used to capture, store and present information. In addition to database concepts like designs, reports and SQL queries, the students will discuss and analyze relationships between technology and society.
The science of Biodiversity is the study of life on earth, both past and present. It involves the exploration and measurement of the amount of genetic, species, and ecological variation on earth and is emerging as one humanity's most important and urgent endeavors. Scientific efforts to study earth's biodiversity have intensified because of our growing appreciation of the role human population growth and urbanization play in accelerating the extinction of plant and animal species. This course introduces students to the nature of science and the central issues concerning life on earth including: the current state of biodiversity, valuing life's variations, human dependence on biological diversity, the origin and extinction of species, mass extinction, critical habitats at risk, and policies and approaches to conserve biodiversity (2-4 hours).

This course presents a basic understanding of genetic principles necessary to discuss the impact on society of the Human Genome Project. Classical genetics, from its inception as a discipline, held that every organism's genetic makeup was conditioned primarily by environmental factors. Darwin summarized this by claiming that environmental pressures produced organisms whose genetic makeup ensured survival in a particular environment (the survival of the fittest). Contemporary genetics, however, is entering a new era in which both the environment and genetic technologies share in the mission of modifying an organism's genetic makeup. The project of sequencing the human genome has enabled scientists for the first time to identify health-related genes and, based on this, to design new treatments for age-old diseases. At the same time, the Human Genome Project, and genetic research based on it, is raising ethical concerns for the way genetic knowledge will impact health care into the 21st century. Genomics, as the new discipline is being called, explores this complex but fascinating world of cutting-edge genetic research. It is this very world that we will explore in our class setting through a variety of methods including laboratory investigations, class discussions, and student presentations. You may register for up to three competencies.

Each day we are immersed in chemicals and are participants in and observers of many chemical reactions. This course is designed to teach chemistry and physical science through the observation and explanation of many events we observe in daily life. It has been specially planned for students who have little or no background in science. We will examine the chemistry of substances from table salt and food additives, to fuels for our cars and homes, to semiconductors, new plastics, and revolutionary materials that will improve our lives in the 21st century. This class will emphasize the interconnections in our world through science. We will address safety and the "positive" and "negative" impact of chemicals on our world. There is a chemistry kit required for this course, so that you can perform the experiments safely at home.

This course will address the principles of genetics with an emphasis on the genetic code of the human genome. In this course we will examine: how the genetic code is stored, how it is used, how it is evolving, how it is passed from one generation to the next, the consequences of genetic code errors, the medical, technological, legal and ethical issues associated with the human genome. We will discuss how we can, and how we should, use the information on the human genome.
SW 366 | EXPRESSIVE ARTS THERAPY | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course offers a multi-arts approach in which different art modalities are woven into the therapeutic process as appropriate to a client's situation. It is grounded not in any particular techniques or media but in the capacity of the arts to respond to human suffering. Various arts—poetry, movement, drawing, painting, journaling, improvisation, music, and sculpture—are used in a supportive setting to facilitate growth and healing. Expressive arts processes have been used successfully in almost all psychotherapeutic contexts, ranging from work with the severely ill to the facilitation of human growth and potential. There is a growing use of the arts in health education, hospice work, and in community art projects especially after catastrophic events. The class will be conducted in a workshop format in which theoretical content will be combined with experiential learning. Lecture, discussion, audiovisual presentation, experiential exercise, guest speakers, and field trips comprise the structure of the class.

SW 367 | LEISURE, RECREATION, AND HEALTH | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will stimulate your thinking about the meaning of leisure in your life. Leisure today and historically has been central to the human experience. It is an elemental experience, essential to the total well-being of every person; it is a reflection and expression of the cultural values of a society; it is an important vehicle for treatment. Leisure and recreation services are also essential for healthy communities in terms of social climate, environmental quality, and economic stability. Leisure services comprise one of the largest and fastest growing industries in the world, whether measured in dollars spent, persons served, hours of time devoted, or resources used. The study of leisure and recreation is a broad discipline, combining diverse fields of study and professional practice. This course will (1) illustrate the importance of leisure to you and your loved ones, (2) contribute to your ability to become an informed consumer of leisure, (3) question the binary relationship of work and leisure and, (4) teach you how to use leisure to increase emotional and physical health, resulting in a higher quality of life. The course will be interactive and participatory.

SW 371 | DINOSAURS | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Dinosaurs are one of the most diverse and successful groups of vertebrates in earth’s history. Originating over 220 million years ago, they dominated earth's land biomes for over 150 million years and diversified to include the largest land animals in earth's history, a wide range of aquatic groups, and even a diverse clade capable of flight (the birds). Consequently, mammals remained in the background as small nocturnal creatures during the dinosaurs’ long reign. Only after a cataclysmic extinction event 65 million years ago involving most dinosaur groups did the mammals diversify into modern groups including our own primate lineage. This course will introduce students to the remarkable dinosaurs, tracking their origin, surveying their success, and evaluating their decline. Learning will emphasize investigation of the forms, function, and variation within the major dinosaur groups as well as the connections of dinosaur evolution to diverse factors such as climate change, ecology, biological competition, and mass extinction. The course learning activities will encompass discussions, readings, lectures, labs, internet resources, museum resources and original inquiry.

Secondary Education (SEC)
SEC 309 | TEACHING AND LEARNING SECONDARY SCHOOL MATHEMATICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Prepares teacher-candidates for teaching mathematics at the middle school and secondary school levels. Examines contemporary issues in teaching mathematics, methods of teaching secondary mathematics, and recent history in mathematics curriculum development. Emphasis on the development of alternative teaching strategies and the implementation of the NCTM Standards. Lesson and unit development, evaluation, and classroom management also will be discussed. 30 Level 2 Field Experience hours.

SEC 364 and Education major or minor are prerequisites for this class.

SEC 310 | TEACHING, HISTORY, AND SOCIAL SCIENCES IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Prepares teacher-candidates for teaching history and social sciences at the middle and secondary school levels. Examines the nature and purpose of history and social sciences curriculum within secondary schools, the current status of social studies materials and practices, and issues confronting today’s secondary social studies teachers. Emphasis on alternative teaching strategies, resources for teaching and learning, teachers’ responsibilities in curriculum development and decision making, and methods and materials for addressing cultural diversity. Lesson and unit development, evaluation, and classroom management also will be discussed. 30 Level 2 Field Experience hours.

SEC 364 and Education major or minor are prerequisites for this class.

SEC 311 | THE NATURE OF ENGLISH | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is designed to help students to see that the field of English Studies is bigger than the component they probably identify as English (its Literature, Writing, and Linguistics/Grammar). Students will explore the formation of the discipline up to the current day, focusing on the shifting understanding of ways of reading, writing and thinking about language. They will strive to answer the questions: What does it mean to be a student of language and literature? and, What are the ways of knowing writing, literature, and language? In doing so, students will relate their disciplinary content to their daily lives and interests and to the larger framework of human endeavor and understanding, including identifying its importance to the personal lives of high school students.

SEC 364, Junior status, and an Education major or minor are prerequisites for this class.
SEC 321 | INQUIRY & APPLICATION IN DEVELOPING SECONDARY ENGLISH PEDAGOGY | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course builds on SEC 311 by preparing teacher candidates to distinguish between what needs to be taught (content) and how it is taught (pedagogy), with an emphasis on understanding the historical shifts in the teaching of content and how these shifts inform teaching and learning in today's English language arts classrooms. The course also introduces students to methods of inquiry and reflection on content pedagogical knowledge. Students will examine their own educational experience through the lens of the historical trends, focusing on how they learned and what they understood their teachers to be doing. This initial case study will serve as an introduction into case study methods. Students will also develop expertise in one of the three historical trend areas - reading, writing, and language - and examine how the trend has informed teaching and learning and shaped curriculum, pedagogy, and assessment. Students will develop a case study of a practicing teacher using the lens of the historical trend in which they are developing expertise. 25 Level 1 Field Experience hours.
SEC 364, SEC 311, Junior status, and an Education major or minor are prerequisites for this class.

SEC 322 | INQUIRY & APPLICATION IN DEVELOPING SECONDARY HISTORY AND SOCIAL SCIENCES PEDAGOGY | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course builds on SEC 311 by preparing teacher candidates to distinguish between what needs to be taught (content) and how it is taught (pedagogy), with an emphasis on understanding the historical shifts in the teaching of content and how these shifts inform teaching and learning in today's English language arts classrooms. The course also introduces students to methods of inquiry and reflection on content pedagogical knowledge. Students will examine their own educational experience through the lens of the historical trends, focusing on how they learned and what they understood their teachers to be doing. This initial case study will serve as an introduction into case study methods. Students will also develop expertise in one of the three historical trend areas - reading, writing, and language - and examine how the trend has informed teaching and learning and shaped curriculum, pedagogy, and assessment. Students will develop a case study of a practicing teacher using the lens of the historical trend in which they are developing expertise. 25 Level 1 Field Experience hours.
SEC 364, SEC 311, Junior status, and an Education major or minor are prerequisites for this class.

SEC 312 | THE NATURE OF HISTORY AND THE SOCIAL SCIENCES | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course builds on the content course work students have done in the seven disciplines grouped under the heading "social sciences" (history, political science, geography, sociology, anthropology, economics, and psychology). In this class students will get further exposure to the basic concepts of the social science disciplines and consider the connections as well as differences between them. The course emphasizes how different disciplinary backgrounds lead students to bring different perspectives to their study of social phenomena and helps them see these phenomena from multiple vantage points. The course will employ a case study approach framed around social issues of interest to all seven disciplines (e.g. social control, threats, development, natural disasters). By the end of the course, students will have applied the knowledge and skills of multiple social science disciplines to evaluate social phenomena, considered the relationship and differences between those disciplines, and be prepared to enter SEC 322 where they will apply their content knowledge to inquiry and teaching in the field.
SEC 364, Junior status, and an Education major or minor are prerequisites for this class.

SEC 313 | THE NATURE OF MATHEMATICS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course builds on students' mathematics understanding by emphasizing the universality of mathematics as a cultural endeavor. In it, students will explore the historical trends in mathematics and how those trends have been taught. Students will understand that, mathematics, at its core, is deductive; however, it also requires intuition. Thus, the course examines the interaction among intuition, experimentation, conjecture, abstraction, and deductive reasoning not only in the classroom but also in the everyday use of mathematics. It also examines the interplay between concrete problem-solving and generalization.
SEC 364, Junior status, and an Education major or minor are prerequisites for this class.

SEC 314 | THE NATURE OF SCIENCE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course is about the nature of science and the interactions between science and society. It will build on the foundation of understandings that students already have about the processes and conventions of science developed through their years as science students to create opportunities for deeper understandings of the beliefs and assumptions inherent to the creation of scientific knowledge. These opportunities will be developed through direct interactions with professional scientists as well as through case studies and readings that illustrate the strengths, limits and pitfalls of the scientific endeavor as well as provide opportunities for students to relate science to their daily lives and interests and to a larger framework of human endeavor and understanding (e.g., relationships among systems of human endeavor including science and technology; relationships among scientific, technological, personal, social and cultural values). Cases will be drawn from different scientific disciplines as well as from modern and historic times. In this way, science students will have a better understanding of what it means to be a scientist and how science interfaces with society. The course is a prerequisite for SEC 324.
SEC 364, Junior status, and an Education major or minor are prerequisites for this class.
SEC 323 | INQUIRY & APPLICATION IN DEVELOPING SECONDARY MATHEMATICS PEDAGOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course builds on SEC 313 by introducing students to inquiry methods to understand the teaching and learning of mathematics. Students will explore how mathematics has been and is taught by examining major paradigm shifts in mathematics education and the impact those paradigms and shifts have on pedagogical content knowledge, or knowledge of how to teach disciplinary content. Students will use case study methods to look at instructional practices and begin to articulate their own mathematics teaching pedagogy. With the completion of this course, students will have a deeper understanding of mathematical literacy and the barriers to understanding and teaching mathematics, as well as being able to identify what makes an exceptional math teacher who is able to address the needs of all students. 25 Level 1 Field Experience hours.
SEC 364, SEC 313, Junior status, and an Education major or minor are prerequisites for this class.

SEC 324 | INQUIRY & APPLICATION IN DEVELOPING SECONDARY SCIENCE PEDAGOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Following SEC 314, this course transitions from asking “what does a scientist do?” to a consideration of why science literacy in the general public has been so difficult to achieve. The focusing questions for SEC 324 are: “How do we teach science? What is science literacy? Why is an understanding of science important to the general public? and What are the major obstacles and strategies to achieving science literacy?” The course begins by participants self-reflecting on their own educational experiences that led to their paths in science education: what have been their successful learning strategies, how have teachers influenced their education and what have been successful (and less than successful) classroom instructional strategies? From this, students will begin science classroom observation, discussing their observations with their peers, and speaking with educators about their experiences teaching high school science and about the goals and short-comings of science education. Throughout this process, students will read seminal literature on science literacy and explore cases challenging their notions of the teacher-learner relationship and the relationship between science and society. As a result of this course, students will gain a deeper understanding of scientific literacy and the barriers to understanding and teaching science as well as identify what makes an exceptional science teacher able to prepare both future scientists and a knowledgeable public. 25 Level 1 Field Experience hours.
SEC 364, SEC 314, Junior status, and an Education major or minor are prerequisites for this class.

SEC 325 | LITERACY IN THE CONTENT AREAS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The course explores the interrelationships between reading, writing, and other forms of communication (e.g., classroom talk, technology, visual arts) that are available to content area middle-level and high-school teachers. There will be an emphasis on the interrelationship of all aspects of language, oral and written, that result in literacy as a meaning-making tool in the construction of content-area knowledge. The course will discuss specific aspects of literacy processes from a multicultural, multilingual perspective as they apply to a variety of school settings in general and urban schools in particular. Students will become acquainted with theoretical issues as well as a wide range of literacy-teaching strategies including reading, writing, research, and study skills to be tailored to the needs of different students and to be applied across a variety of learning situations and text types. 30 Level 2 Field Experience hours.
Senior status and SEC 371 or SEC 372 or SEC 373 or SEC 374 or status as a music education student is a prerequisite for this class. Exercise Science (BS) students are restricted from taking this class.

SEC 326 | TEACHING WRITING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course prepares teacher candidates for teaching writing and composition at the middle and secondary school levels. The course focuses upon methods of teaching composition, examination of literature and research about the composing process, the development of language and reading skills, and the assessment and evaluation of writing. The development of writing curriculums will also be explored. 30 Level 2 Field Experience hours.
SEC 364 and Education major or minor are prerequisites for this class.

SEC 327 | TEACHING LITERATURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course prepares teacher candidates for teaching literature at the middle and secondary school levels. Examines contemporary issues in the teaching of literature, explores methods of teaching major literary genres, addresses problems of literacy and focuses on the transactional nature of reading and writing. Emphasis on developing a repertoire of ways of teaching literature and a variety of literature curriculums. SEC 364 and Education major or minor are prerequisites for this class.

SEC 328 | TEACHING YOUNG ADULTS LITURATURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is devoted to the study of Young Adult Literature: an exciting, emerging genre of literature. Issues and ideas to be examined include the following: current debates regarding issues in curriculum and teaching; selecting, reading, evaluating, and teaching young adult literature; cultivation of life-long reading habits and literacy development. Students will become familiar with major writers of young adult literature, read diverse texts, explore major genres, review award winning novels, consider the role of the media, and develop creative projects. 20 Level 2 Field Experience hours.
SEC 364 and Education major or minor are prerequisites for this class.

SEC 329 | TEACHING SCIENCE IN THE SECONDARY SCHOOL | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course prepares teacher-candidates for teaching science in the middle school and high school. This involves reviewing the processes of science, theories of learning, and instructional strategies appropriate to laboratory science. This course also provides an update on the current trends and issues in science education as well as an analysis of successful science curricula programs. 30 Level 2 Field Experience hours.
SEC 364 and Education major or minor are prerequisites for this class.
SEC 363 | ORIENTATION TO SECONDARY TEACHING AS A PROFESSION | 6 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
(6 credits) In this process-oriented course, students engage in critical reflection on the roles and expectations of secondary educators from both institutional and community perspectives. Questions considered will include: what is an educator, what is a professional, what are the attributes of effective teachers, what do effective teachers do? Students will examine their own values and begin to develop their own philosophies about education and teaching. 30 Level 1 Field Experience hours at arranged sites. (6 credit hours)

SEC 364 | METHODS: CURRICULUM AND INSTRUCTION IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
(4 credits) This course will examine materials, methods, and techniques appropriate for teaching in secondary schools. Topics include: educational goals; the development of a rationale and underlying assumptions; instructional goals and objectives; learning objectives; both cognitive and affective; classroom environment; classroom management principles and techniques; multicultural materials in various content areas; the development of appropriate methods and materials; current curriculum issues and controversies. 30 Level 1 Field Experience hours at arranged sites.

Junior standing is a prerequisite for this class.

SEC 365 | ART AND PEDAGOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course alongside SEC 366 is intended as a two course sequence each complimenting the other. As SEC 366 explores the source materials and major concepts of visual art’s content, SEC 365 focuses on teaching visual art. Building from the content requirements from their program or experience, students will understand how the art studio (content) experiences where ideas are developed translate to the preparation of teaching. Students will do this through multiple curriculum based projects intended to use in their own classrooms, including a 6th - 12th grade general course reader to assist in introducing an art historical overview that influences and connects to general middle and high school studio practices. As students work on these projects, they will continue to reflect on the coursework they have done in the content area as well as watching and learning from classroom teachers and teaching artists in the field. They will contemplate such questions as: "What are the connections among the arts disciplines? How can they be taught together, creating interdisciplinary courses at the middle and high school levels? What are the differences among the arts disciplines and what does this mean for secondary pedagogy? How can teachers use inquiry with their students, making sure they have enough guidance to learn about artists, artistic periods and the nature of how artworks are produced. 30 Level 2 Field Experience hours.

SEC 364 and Education major or minor are prerequisites for this class.

SEC 366 | TEACHER AS ARTIST | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course builds on the work in SEC 365, which alongside SEC 366 is intended as a two course sequence each complimenting the other. As SEC 365 focuses on the art of teaching the visual arts, SEC 366 explores the source materials and major concepts of visual art content. Historically, artistic movements have shaped and currently identify the theories we use to define our most immediate environment. The major concepts can be connected to the artist studio and to the descriptions some artists make about the studio as a teaching space. In the course students will be introduced to a wide range of artists and their work, artistic movements and the individual artists who use teaching as a medium. How does an emerging artist or pre-service teaching artist draw on the understanding of their own work as a platform to build core principles of pedagogy. What is the link that combines a dynamic studio practice with an inspired methodology for teaching visual art. We will address these questions through creating a visual art teaching curriculum portfolio and writing a reflective artist monograph, produce a final exhibition of their work and work alongside teachers and artists in the field. 30 Level 2 Field Experience hours.

SEC 364 and Education major or minor are prerequisites for this class.

SEC 371 | TEACHING ENGLISH IN THE HIGH SCHOOL 1 | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course introduces students to the theoretical and practical issues of teaching the English language arts in secondary classrooms. The course introduces candidates to research-based and theoretically grounded best practices in the teaching of reading, writing, speaking, and listening skills and sensibilities. Students will practice and reflect on writing instructional objectives, developing lesson plans, designing a curriculum unit, creating a classroom environment, and implementing instructional delivery strategies and methods, including the use of technology resources, that meet the needs of diverse learners, including English language learners and students who speak nonmainstream dialects of English. Students will reflect on their own emerging educational philosophies and theories. They will also demonstrate commitment to teaching as a professional who acts responsibly, ethically, and collegially in accordance to Vincentian personalism. 30 Level 2 Field Experience hours required.

SEC 364, SEC 311, SEC 321, Junior status, and an Education major or minor are prerequisites for this class.

SEC 372 | TEACHING HISTORY AND THE SOCIAL SCIENCES IN THE HIGH SCHOOL 1 | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course introduces students to the theoretical and practical issues of teaching history and the social sciences in secondary classrooms. The course introduces candidates to research-based and theoretically grounded best practices in the teaching of the basic concepts of the seven social science disciplines. Students will practice and reflect on writing instructional objectives, developing lesson plans, designing a curriculum unit, creating a classroom environment, and implementing instructional delivery strategies and methods, including the use of technology resources, that meet the needs of diverse learners, including English language learners and students who speak nonmainstream dialects of English. Students will reflect on their own emerging educational philosophies and theories. They will also demonstrate commitment to teaching as a professional who acts responsibly, ethically, and collegially in accordance to Vincentian personalism. 30 Level 2 Field Experience hours required.

SEC 364, SEC 311, SEC 322, Junior status, and an Education major or minor are prerequisites for this class.
SEC 373 | TEACHING MATHEMATICS IN THE HIGH SCHOOL 1 | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course introduces students to the theoretical and practical issues of teaching mathematics in secondary classrooms. The course introduces candidates to research-based and theoretically grounded best practices in the teaching of mathematics in all its representations. Students will practice and reflect on writing instructional objectives, developing lesson plans, designing a curriculum unit, creating a classroom environment, and implementing instructional delivery strategies and methods, including the use of technology resources, that meet the needs of diverse learners, including English language learners and students who speak nonmainstream dialects of English. Students will reflect on their own emerging educational philosophies and theories. They will also demonstrate commitment to teaching as a professional who acts responsibly, ethically, and collegially in accordance to Vincentian personalism. 30 Level 2 Field Experience hours required.
SEC 364, SEC 311, SEC 323, Junior status, and an Education major or minor are prerequisites for this class.

SEC 374 | TEACHING THE SCIENCES IN THE HIGH SCHOOL 1 | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course introduces students to the theoretical and practical issues of teaching the sciences in secondary classrooms. The course introduces candidates to research-based and theoretically grounded best practices in the teaching of the different sciences, including biology, chemistry, environmental science, and physics. Students will practice and reflect on writing instructional objectives, developing lesson plans, designing a curriculum unit, creating a classroom environment, and implementing instructional delivery strategies and methods, including the use of technology resources, that meet the needs of diverse learners, including English language learners and students who speak nonmainstream dialects of English. Students will reflect on their own emerging educational philosophies and theories. They will also demonstrate commitment to teaching as a professional who acts responsibly, ethically, and collegially in accordance to Vincentian personalism. 30 Level 2 Field Experience hours required.
SEC 364, SEC 311, SEC 324, Junior status, and an Education major or minor are prerequisites for this class.

SEC 371 | TEACHING ENGLISH IN THE HIGH SCHOOL 2 | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course continues students’ immersion into the pedagogical content knowledge development and practices that began in SEC 321 and SEC 371. The course provides students opportunities to continue to explore and develop research-based and theoretically grounded best practices in the teaching of reading, writing, speaking, and listening skills and sensibilities, with an emphasis on reflective and collaborative practice. The course provides extensive opportunities for planning, using, and evaluating a variety of instructional strategies, including the use of technology resources, through teaching demonstrations and modeling and field experiences. Students will fine-tune and reflect on writing instructional objectives, developing lesson plans, designing a curriculum unit, creating a classroom environment, and implementing instructional delivery strategies and methods that meet the needs of diverse learners, including English language learners and students who speak nonmainstream dialects of English. And like in SEC 371, students will reflect on and clearly articulate orally, in writing, and through practice an educational philosophy and theory. Students will also demonstrate commitment to teaching as a professional who acts responsibly, ethically, and collegially in accordance to Vincentian personalism. 30 Level 2 Field Experience hours required. COREQUISITE(S): Taken in conjunction with SCU 351.
SEC 371 is a prerequisite for this course. This class is taken concurrently with SCU 351.

SEC 372 | TEACHING HISTORY AND THE SOCIAL SCIENCES IN THE HIGH SCHOOL 2 | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course continues students’ immersion into the pedagogical content knowledge development and practices that began in SEC 322 and SEC 372. The course provides students opportunities to continue to explore and develop research-based and theoretically grounded best practices in the teaching of the basic concepts of the seven social science disciplines with an emphasis on reflective and collaborative practice. The course provides extensive opportunities for planning, using, and evaluating a variety of instructional strategies, including the use of technology resources, through teaching demonstrations and modeling and field experiences. Students will fine-tune and reflect on writing instructional objectives, developing lesson plans, designing a curriculum unit, creating a classroom environment, and implementing instructional delivery strategies and methods that meet the needs of diverse learners, including English language learners and students who speak nonmainstream dialects of English. And like in SEC 372, students will reflect on and clearly articulate orally, in writing, and through practice an educational philosophy and theory. Students will also demonstrate commitment to teaching as a professional who acts responsibly, ethically, and collegially in accordance to Vincentian personalism. 30 Level 2 Field Experience hours required. COREQUISITE(S): Taken in conjunction with SCU 351.
SEC 372 is a prerequisite for this course. This class is taken concurrently with SCU 351.
SEC 383 | TEACHING MATHEMATICS IN THE HIGH SCHOOL 2 | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course continues students' immersion into the pedagogical content knowledge development and practices that began in SEC 323 and SEC 373. The course provides students opportunities to continue to explore and develop research-based and theoretically grounded best practices in the teaching of mathematics in all its representations with an emphasis on reflective and collaborative practice. The course provides extensive opportunities for planning, using, and evaluating a variety of instructional strategies, including the use of technology resources, through teaching demonstrations and modeling and field experiences. Students will fine-tune and reflect on writing instructional objectives, developing lesson plans, designing a curriculum unit, creating a classroom environment, and implementing instructional delivery strategies and methods that meet the needs of diverse learners, including English language learners and students who speak nonmainstream dialects of English. And like in SEC 373, students will reflect on and clearly articulate orally, in writing, and through practice an educational philosophy and theory. Students will also demonstrate commitment to teaching as a professional who acts responsibly, ethically, and collegially in accordance to Vincentian personalism. 30 Level 2 Field Experience hours required. COREQUISITE(S): Taken in conjunction with SCU 351.
SEC 373 is a prerequisite for this course. This class is taken concurrently with SCU 351.

SEC 384 | CAPSTONE IN SECONDARY EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The senior capstone course is designed to help students integrate the central emphases of their liberal learning studies curriculum into their professional behavior. It will provide prospective elementary educators with opportunities to engage in activities requiring them to reflect, to consider value commitments, to use critical and creative thinking, and to examine their practice from a multicultural perspective as they discuss issues specific early childhood education. The course is grounded in the College of Education’s framework for an Urban Professional Multicultural Educator, which also reflects the goals of the Liberal Studies program. COREQUISITE(S): SEC 390.

SEC 385 | TEACHING THE SCIENCES IN THE HIGH SCHOOL 2 | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course continues students’ immersion into the pedagogical content knowledge development and practices that began in SEC 324 and SEC 374. The course provides students opportunities to continue to explore and develop research-based and theoretically grounded best practices in the teaching of the different sciences, including biology, chemistry, environmental science, and physics with an emphasis on reflective and collaborative practice. The course provides extensive opportunities for planning, using, and evaluating a variety of instructional strategies, including the use of technology resources, through teaching demonstrations and modeling and field experiences. Students will fine-tune and reflect on writing instructional objectives, developing lesson plans, designing a curriculum unit, creating a classroom environment, and implementing instructional delivery strategies and methods that meet the needs of diverse learners, including English language learners and students who speak nonmainstream dialects of English. And like in SEC 374, students will reflect on and clearly articulate orally, in writing, and through practice an educational philosophy and theory. Students will also demonstrate commitment to teaching as a professional who acts responsibly, ethically, and collegially in accordance to Vincentian personalism. 30 Level 2 Field Experience hours required. COREQUISITE(S): Taken in conjunction with SCU 351.
SEC 374 is a prerequisite for this course. This class is taken concurrently with SCU 351.

SEC 387 | CAPSTONE SEMINAR IN SECONDARY EDUCATION | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is designed to help candidates integrate the central emphases of their Liberal Studies curriculum with their professional knowledge and behavior. It provides opportunities and activities to prospective educators that engage them in being analytic and reflective upon their major and related disciplines; guide them in further considering their value commitments and how they relate to their chosen profession; apply critical and creative thinking in addressing ‘real-time’ professional issues and needs; and examine extant practices from multicultural perspectives. Candidates develop a professional teaching portfolio that reflects the standards of the various guiding professional organizations and the Illinois State Board of Education (ISBE). The course is grounded in the College of Education’s framework for an Urban Professional Multicultural Educator as well as the goals of the Liberal Studies program. The course is taken simultaneously with student teaching. COREQUISITE(S): SEC 390. (2 credit hours)

SEC 390 | SECONDARY STUDENT TEACHING | 10 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
(10 credits) Five school days a week in supervised teaching in a cooperating school for a full academic quarter. Feedback and discussion of problems encountered in student teaching as well as new materials and techniques of student teaching. Application and approval required. Open only to DePaul students. (10 hours)
SEC 395 | ASSESSMENT ISSUES IN SECONDARY EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course introduces candidates to theoretical and philosophical issues related to educational assessment. It addresses the range of assessments teachers will encounter in school settings, including individual cognitive and social and emotional assessments; course material, curricula, and disciplinary program assessments; and large scale high-stakes testing. The course provides candidates opportunities to explore student, program, and curricular assessment issues, including assessment methods and tools; standardized, quantitative, and qualitative assessments; formal and informal assessments; formative and summative assessments; integrated, self-, and peer assessments; cultural, social, economic, and language influences on assessments; and issues of reliability and validity in assessment. COREQUISITE(S): Taken in conjunction with SEC 371/SEC 372/SEC 373/SEC 374 OR SEC 381/SEC 382/SEC 383/SEC 384.
Exercise Science (BS) students are restricted from taking this class. This class is taken concurrently with (SEC 371 or SEC 372 or SEC 373 or SEC 374) or (SEC 381 or SEC 382 or SEC 383 or SEC 384).
SEC 399 | INDEPENDENT STUDY IN SECONDARY EDUCATION | 1-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Permission of instructor, program chair and Associate Dean are required. (1 credit hour)

SNL Degree Completion Major (DCM)
DCM 301 | EFFECTIVE LEADERSHIP IN A CHANGING PROFESSIONAL ENVIRONMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In this leadership course, students will use readings, behavior/trait surveys, and case studies to understand leadership theories and models. Participants will learn to create, establish, and reinforce cultural rules of engagement designed to increase communication effectiveness and get the most out of the current human dynamic in their respective environments. Understanding these various leadership models allows students to reflect on their own style in today’s culturally changing environments. (online) (4 credit hours)
DCM 302 | PROJECT MANAGEMENT: DESIGN AND ASSESSMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Project Management is an important discipline that can benefit students in their careers as well as personal life. This course will explore project management methodologies, their common steps and tools. The course translates Project Management theory into a practical and effective methodology, starting with working definitions of Project and Project Management, the course examines project initiation, evaluation and organization using analytic techniques such as discounted cash flow and PERT/CPM. In addition, the course examines project execution and control, along with the documentation and communications skills needed to keep a project on track. The course concludes with an overview of project management applied to computer information systems development. (4 quarter hours)
DCM 303 | LEADERSHIP MODELS FOR STRONG ORGANIZATIONS | 2-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is designed to explore the research, practices, purposes and scope of leadership as a tool to develop leadership skills that will influence and inspire others. Both individual and organizational aspects will be presented and will include such areas as behaviors, ethics, communications, cultures and current practices. Emphasis will be on application of leadership theories and skill building through self-assessment exercises and cases. (2-4 quarter hours)
DCM 304 | EVOLVING PROFESSIONAL ETHICS | 2-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Evolving Professional Ethics analyzes and weighs ethical issues in the professions in relationship to pressing values of social responsibility and quality of life seen through lenses of moral philosophers and incisive thinkers. It places business ethics and moral philosophy in juxtaposition. In a time of tumultuous choices, the pursuit of self interest is questioned in the light of changing, evolving awareness of values in humanity, community, environment, including race and gender, as they influence business context and holistic awareness of professional ethics. (2-4 quarter hours)
DCM 305 | ENTREPRENEURSHIP BASICS | 2-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Entrepreneurship is a powerful force that stimulates economic growth, promotes employment, and allows for self expression by turning ideas into tangible reality. Entrepreneurial thinking can be developed as can the skills needed to successfully start and manage new enterprises. But entrepreneurship is not without risk and every person must assess risk in light of their own personality and life situation. This course leads students through a realistic understanding of entrepreneurship as an economic force and a way of life, its impact on involved persons and practices most likely to promote success. Learning is accomplished through a combination of lecture, discussion, reading and homework. Students are encouraged to bring their own personal experiences to class for discussion. (2-4 quarter hours)
DCM 306 | PRODUCTIVE APPLICATIONS OF WORK BASED INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY | 2-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In this course, students will learn about work-based information technology by exploring Windows PC and Mac operating systems. Students will be introduced to common work-based applications software in MS Office: Word, Excel, Power Point, Access and Outlook. Students will learn the basics, intermediate, and advanced level of MS Word, Excel, and Power Point. Students will explore the use and security of Internet applications for both Windows and Mac operating systems. (2-4 quarter hours)
This course is not open to Business Administration (BAPS) and Decision Analytics (BA) students.
DCM 307 | ANALYZING HUMAN BEHAVIOR | 2-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course targets the link between the physical environment and social behavior. A physical or virtual space that humans inhabit is also a social space; its organization contains a “code” of responsive behavior for people to understand. We focus on these “codes,” and examine the ways they provoke conformity and deviance from individuals and groups. Students are expected to enter the social environment and gather publicly-observable data for analysis in the classroom setting. The ethics of social research, and of an observer’s interaction with the environment, are key points of inquiry during the quarter. By its conclusion, students in this course are able to analyze any social group and its physical surroundings. (2-4 credit hours)

DCM 308 | INTRODUCTION TO STATISTICS | 2-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will teach students the basic concepts of statistics. As a group, we will investigate topics in descriptive statistics, correlation, normal distributions, probability, sampling distributions and hypothesis testing. By the end of this course, students will be able to complete a statistical analysis of datasets using Microsoft Excel as the primary tool. We will also devote considerable time to discussing how statistics are used and abused. (2-4 quarter hours)

DCM 309 | APPLIED RESEARCH | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course allows the student to develop competence in the process of systematic, academic inquiry. The Applied Research course requirements focus on key aspects of inquiry. Students create a research proposal responding to a purpose, problem, and question each chooses to target (but do not actually carry out the data collection or analysis during this particular quarter). Students will explore research methodologies “quantitative and qualitative” and create a research design proposal based on a literature review and carefully constructed question, hypothesis, and methodology.

A major in Leadership Studies, Applied Behavioral Sciences or Professional Communication is a prerequisite for this class.

DCM 310 | THINKING CRITICALLY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course strengthens students’ analytical thinking ability through practice in the skills and strategies of critical thinking and reading, and in the construction and evaluation of logical arguments. In pursuing these goals, we encounter principles of logic, strategies of persuasion, and techniques of propaganda. The course presents a variety of readings, exercises, and projects designed to help students develop learning and skill in the following areas: identifying assumptions, connecting assertions to evidence, stating generalizations, analyzing arguments, and bringing multiple perspectives to bear on complex issues and questions. A major in Leadership Studies, Applied Behavioral Sciences or Professional Communication is a prerequisite for this class.

DCM 311 | CONFLICT MANAGEMENT AND NEGOTIATION | 2-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will examine several aspects of communication. We will examine perception, assumption, language and sensitivity in the workplace and beyond, applying strategies drawn from theory to actual workplace situations. Successful collaboration and teamwork are the result of clear interpersonal communication. Done well, collaborative problem solving stimulates new ideas and more sophisticated approaches. To this end, we will consider the issues of empathy and personal style in the workplace and beyond. The question of conflict will be examined from several angles, and defined in several practical ways. We will analyze the differences and similarities between (among others) status-based, ego-based and issue-based conflicts in the workplace and beyond, and apply the theory of principled negotiation to identify and resolve these conflicts. (2-4 quarter hours)

DCM 313 | LEARNING FROM EXPERIENCE AND SELF-ASSESSMENT | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Students will explore the nature of learning from experience and self-assessment. They will develop a reflective learning autobiography and read about theories of adult learning. Students will also be introduced to the DePaul Library, taking the online library tutorial. Time management issues and tools, as well as life stages and learning interests will also be explored. (2-4 quarter hours)

A major in Leadership Studies, Applied Behavioral Sciences or Professional Communication is a prerequisite for this class.

DCM 314 | LEARNING AND TRANSFORMATION | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Building on last quarter’s seminar, students will look closely at the notion of transformative learning. Additionally, using learning styles inventories, they will reflect on ways to exercise various learning styles in their work, and capitalize on their strengths. (2-4 quarter hours)

A major in Leadership Studies, Applied Behavioral Sciences or Professional Communication is a prerequisite for this class.

DCM 315 | EXPLORING THE FIELD | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Students will work on professional goal setting and action plans by conducting research on their chosen field, exploring trends, ethical issues, controversies, best preparation strategies, and other salient matters. In addition, the concept of “good work” and what that means for one’s own career will be debated and discussed. (2-4 quarter hours)

A major in Leadership Studies, Applied Behavioral Sciences or Professional Communication is a prerequisite for this class.

DCM 316 | WORK IN A GLOBAL ENVIRONMENT | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Globalization of the world's economy has dramatically changed the interactions of people from different cultures. As a result, the importance of understanding cultural difference has increased significantly. This seminar will introduce students to the challenges and opportunities associated with living, working and learning in a global environment. This will be done through discussion, reading, case studies, films and exercises to increase cultural self awareness as well as cross-cultural sensitivity. (2-4 quarter hours)

DCM 317 | ETHICS IN THE PROFESSIONS | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Students will explore various approaches to determining right, morally acceptable, behavior. Epistemology and several ethical frameworks will be examined. Students will write, discuss, and debate case studies from their workplaces or field. (2-4 quarter hours)
DCM 318 | SOCIAL JUSTICE IN THE PROFESSIONS | 2 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Students will look at the nature of social justice, creating a working definition of the widely used term. Readings will guide examination of issues of social justice in students' fields or disciplines. (2-4 quarter hours)

DCM 319 | CREATIVITY AND INNOVATIVE THINKING | 2 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Connections among such varied disciplines as physics, politics, and poetry will be examined and investigated within students' own discipline/profession. Using a variety of approaches to integrative and innovative thinking, students will explore interconnectedness, expanding possibilities, creativity, and decision-making. (2-4 quarter hours)

DCM 320 | PROFESSIONAL PORTFOLIO DEVELOPMENT | 2 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
In this class, students will study the concept and use of professional portfolios and create criteria by which they will choose work to include in their own portfolios. They will assess and evaluate their professional goals using the portfolio as a tool in that assessment. Networking and sharing of information and experience will be emphasized. (2-4 quarter hours)

DCM 321 | CAPSTONE PLANNING | 2 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Students will brainstorm theoretical or practical problems that they find worthwhile to address and that follow from the goals that define their major. After identifying a problem to be addressed, students will use their research skills to gather relevant scholarly and professional sources as well as pinpoint methods of investigation or application. Students will complete a proposal that explains the importance of their question, identifies sources and describes the final product to be submitted. Tools of project planning, such as constructing a thorough timeline, will be utilized to ensure that the subsequent Capstone Project achieves the goals stated in the proposal. (2 credit hours)

LL 300 or LL 301 or DCM 309 is a prerequisite for this class.

DCM 322 | CAPSTONE PROJECT | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course provides the framework for a culminating applied project in the professional major. Students create an applied artifact expressing the core skills and knowledge developed in business administration, and justify its form and content by analysis of relevant scholarship. An implementation plan, an assessment of effectiveness, and a self-assessment of learning complete the project. (4 credit hours)

DCM 321 is a prerequisite for this class.

DCM 323 | THE PSYCHOLOGY OF AGING AND THE AGED | 2 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course provides an overview of the current theories, themes and issues of adult development and aging. In addition to understanding these theories and issues, students will explore questions such as: Does wisdom come with increasing age? Do people really change over time? What are the keys to positive aging? (2-4 quarter hours)

DCM 324 | EFFECTIVE GROUP AND PERSONAL DYNAMICS | 2-4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course design unifies two levels of human behavior and motivation: group and personal. Processes leading to decision-making and other actions rest in articulable patterns on both corporate and individual dimensions. We seek, in this educational arena, to activate and analyze this set of motives and to apprehend, and perhaps predict, this bi-lateral source of human motivation. In so doing, the group-level patterns leading to appreciable action and those emanating from each individual will more easily be understood, and their root patterns put to beneficial use. (2-4 quarter hours)

DCM 325 | WORK & SOCIETY | 2-4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
We will consider work from the perspective of our needs and values, but also from the perspective of the needs of society. We will also consider the value that society assigns to different types of work (and the impact of that valuation on us as individuals and as members of various social groups). Other topics will include how work affects our family and social lives, the impact of modern values on how we view our work, and the role of technology in how we do our work and in how we view our work. (2-4 quarter hours)

DCM 326 | LEADERSHIP LESSONS FROM LITERATURE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This Structured Independent Study provides a critical analysis of ancient literature, writers and thinkers. Examining leaders and leadership situations from these early writings, students will compare and contrast contemporary leadership approaches. Through reading, reflection, and written exercises students will uncover relationships and insights to their current leadership practices and situations. A variety of knowledge and ideas focused on acting ethically, thinking independently, listening closely, taking responsibility, and finding balance are among the tools that students will develop in this course. Close reading of Sophocles and Aeschylus along with various articles about these famous ancient playwrights will allow students to bring the works of these early thinkers to their current leadership situations. This study will also include a research component.

DCM 327 | IN SEARCH OF LEADERSHIP LESSONS | 2 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This Structured Independent Study provides an opportunity for personal reflection of lessons found in ancient literature. Examining leaders and leadership situations from these early writings, students will compare and contrast contemporary leadership approaches. Through reading, reflection, and written exercises students will uncover relationships and insights to their current leadership practices and situations. A variety of knowledge and ideas focused on acting ethically, thinking independently, listening closely, taking responsibility, and finding balance are among the tools that students will develop in this course. Close reading of Sophocles and Aeschylus will allow students to bring the works of these early thinkers to their current leadership situations. (2 quarter hours)
DCM 328 | PLAN & DELIVER: IMPLEMENTING TRAINING PROGRAMS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In this Structured Independent Study, students will learn about the strategic process of effectively implementing a corporate training program based on business drivers. It requires a broad understanding of the business in the context of corporate goals and initiatives that influence an organization's success. In other words, training programs must consider what is important to the organization. This process includes defining requirements and success criteria, designing the process, implementing and powerfully communicating the program to the learners, and then understanding how to measure the success of the program. Using methodology and models that have been successful in numerous global and domestic companies, students in this course will create their own plan for implementation, communication, and measurement to ensure success in their future training program implementations. The focus for this study will be to identify organizational problems that can be addressed through training and will discover the importance of a "learning organization" in this process.

DCM 329 | GETTING THE WORD OUT: HOW TO IMPLEMENT TRAINING PROGRAMS | 3 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In this Structured Independent Study, students will learn about the strategic process of effectively implementing and communicating a corporate training program based on business drivers. It requires a broad understanding of the business in the context of corporate goals and initiatives that influence an organization's success. In other words, training programs must consider what is important to the organization and then communicate it powerfully. This process includes defining requirements and success criteria, designing the process, and implementing and effectively communicating the program to the learners. Students will be introduced to how to measure the success of the program. Using methodology and models that have been successful in numerous global and domestic companies, students in this course will create their own plan for implementation and communication to ensure success in their future training program implementations. The focus for this study will be to create and design a functional process and develop the communication tools to deliver a training program in a corporate business community environment. (3 quarter hours)

DCM 330 | PROFESSIONAL COMMUNICATION IN THE WORKPLACE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course provides an overview of the fundamentals of professional writing. Through engaging in and reflecting upon a variety of professional writing tasks, you will learn the rhetorical theory and practice necessary for effective written communication in professional contexts. (online) (4 credit hours)

DCM 331 | LEARNING HOW TO LEARN | 3 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Learning is something we begin as soon as we are born. We usually think about what we learn more than how we learn, however. In this course, you'll engage in hands-on activities to help you explore yourself as a learner. Additionally, you'll be exploring time-management, your motivation as a learner, keeping a learning journal, and strategies for applying your learning to assignments. Research and experience tell us that adult learners tend not to finish their degree programs in higher numbers than traditional-aged students. There are many reasons, among them the complications of adult life with jobs, families, and life changes. This course exists to help adult learners understand themselves better as learners and to map out strategies of support and resources to help them achieve graduation. (3 quarter hours)

DCM 332 | APPLIED STATISTICS | 2-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In this class, students will look at how numerical knowledge is created and interpreted, and how these processes give us tools to critically analyze ideas, policies, and scientific conclusions. Some knowledge of mathematics is essential to understanding statistics. Thus, completion of a standard course in quantitative reasoning or college algebra will be of great help in succeeding in this course of study. (2-4 quarter hours)

DCM 333 | ADDICTIONS AND RECOVERY | 2-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course seeks to explore and understand alcohol and drug addiction from a biological, psychological, and social approach. Students will learn about the different causes of addiction, understanding addiction as both a disease and a behavioral phenomenon. In addition, the societal effects of addiction will be explored, highlighting in particular the impact on mental health centers, hospitals, and prison systems. Students will then study the most common drugs of addiction. Finally, a variety of treatments for drug addiction will be explored, and the class will culminate with students developing a treatment plan for a hypothetical case study. (2-4 quarter hours)

SNC 185 | THE BEATLES AND THE CREATIVE PROCESS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The Beatles are significant in many ways: they were an unprecedented show business phenomenon; they were leaders of Sixties cultural rebellion; and they stand, for many, as a signal instance of popular entertainment attaining the status of high art. This course will examine the musical craftsmanship of the Beatles, focusing on their work as songwriters and record makers. Recent audio and print releases documenting the group's performing and recording history provide a unique and detailed glimpse of the Beatles' creative process. We will utilize these materials to closely trace the development of the group's work while using other resources to place it in a larger historical and cultural context. The goal is to shed critical light on this recent chapter in cultural history. That discussion will, in turn, highlight questions about creativity in a modern context where commerce vies with art, technology redefines performance and an emerging global village culture transforms concepts of originality and tradition. Arts and Literature.

This course will examine the broad issue of homelessness by providing students the opportunity to reflect upon a service learning experience at a community-based organization that serves the homeless population in Chicago. Students will explore what can be learned about themselves as reflective practitioners, service learners, and spiritual human beings when reflecting upon this experiential learning process. Through the class discussions, assigned readings, invited speakers, and journal assignments, students will reflect on their own beliefs and perceptions of homelessness and analyze the history, causes, and policy associated with this societal problem. Junior Year Experiential Learning.

SNC 188 | PROBLEMS AND ISSUES IN CONTEMPORARY ETHICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

An introduction to moral philosophy with emphasis on the conflict between "moral relativism" (or "subjective" ethics) on the one hand and "moral realism" (or "objective" ethics) on the other. During the course you will be introduced to classic theories and leading figures in the history of ethics, from Plato and Aristotle to Kant and Nietzsche. Course content will focus on issues (e.g., poverty, drug use, capital punishment, sexual behavior, euthanasia, biomedical research, animal rights, political violence) at the center of contemporary ethical debate in the United States and throughout the world. Philosophical Inquiry.

SNC 189 | CONTEMPORARY NATIVE AMERICAN/AMERICAN INDIAN ISSUES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

Native Americans are part of our history and heritage, yet many Americans have little knowledge beyond stereotypes. While invisible to the mainstream, Native American cultures are surviving, striving and in some cases, thriving as we enter the new millennium. This course will explore the complex issues facing Native Americans today through discussions, films, readings, experiential learning activities and Native American news media to enable students to gain a cross-cultural perspective. Students will choose an area of focus on this subject and conduct independent research to present to their classmates. Self, Society and the Modern World.

SNC 190 | AFRICAN-AMERICAN STUDIES IN CRITICAL PERSPECTIVE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

This interdisciplinary 19th and 20th century African-American studies course examines the role of protest and resistance, the media, and cultural and artistic expression in African-American history. Vis-a-vis readings, documentaries, and discussion, the course intends to illustrate the multiple ways in which African-Americans have protested and resisted oppression while examining how such efforts have been framed in the media during varying historical eras. It defines 'media' broadly and analyzes its role, both via its traditional forms (print, television and radio) but also vis-a-vis other forms of entertainment/infotainment that were particularly unique to 19th century U.S. society (i.e. minstrelsy [1830-1920]). The course concludes with a discussion of the role of art and culture in refashioning thinking and transforming experience. The latter discussion promises to be rich and thought provoking and unearths some of the works of the raw and revolutionary artists of the 1960s while taking a careful look at novel cultural practices that emerged during this period.

SNC 192 | NEW ORLEANS IN SONG, STORY & STRUGGLE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

The tapestry of New Orleans culture is tremendously rich and varied. This course will concentrate on two strands in that tapestry: music from New Orleans and fiction about it. Students will learn about music forms which originated in the city or its environs and which have gone on to dazzle the world, including jazz, rhythm and blues, zydeco and funk. We will situate these art forms in social and historical context and examine the complex creative processes which have shaped them. We will become familiar with innovators and icons such as Louis Armstrong, Professor Longhair, Clifton Chenier, the Neville Brothers and Dr. John. We will also read works by literary artists who have a background in and/or fascination with New Orleans, including The Awakening by Kate Chopin, A Streetcar Named Desire by Tennessee Williams, and Mumbo Jumbo by Ishmael Reed. Moreover, we will consider the role played in American history and imagination by New Orleans, as well as the role played by images and fantasies of New Orleans in struggles for social justice at the local and national level. Arts and Literature.

SNC 194 | CHINA: MONEY, POWER AND THE 21ST CENTURY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

This online course analyzes the dramatic impact of the greatest migration of people in the history of the world, which is occurring right now, in China. Students will become more aware of the relationship between growth in China and the balance of power in the world. Understanding China’s two economic systems, one country policy will help learners better understand diverse cultures, inequities and differing theories about self and society. Theory, current and projected economic and demographic data and academic research will equip students with the skills to analyze the institutions, societies and decisions that will shape the world in the 21st century.

SNC 197 | ANALYZING AUSTEN’S PRIDE AND PREJUDICE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

Jane Austen must have known something about universal truths. Her novel, Pride and Prejudice, which begins with the sentence quoted above, was first published in 1813. Still in print today, it has also been made into at least eleven movies, four of which were released since 2000, including a Mormon and a Bollywood version. In this class, we will read the novel in the context of the gender and class norms at the time Austen wrote her book and then consider how Austen’s exploration of universal truths is reinterpreted in more contemporary film versions of this novel. In exploring Austen’s creation and the many reinterpretations of her work, we will use both analytic and creative writing assignments as well as class discussion to examine how context informs creativity and how creativity informs analysis. You most definitely do not need to be a creative writer to take this class.

SNC 205 | RESISTANCE DURING THE HOLOCAUST AND WORLD WAR II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course explores the history of the Holocaust in the context of the Second World War (1939-1945) with a central focus on examples of resistance to discrimination, fascism and oppression. We will explore varied forms of opposition including armed resistance, spiritual resistance, resistance through writing and identity preservation. We will read autobiographies, view documentary and dramatic films, and use museum resources to develop our understanding of resistance. Required activities include a visit to the Illinois Holocaust Museum and Education Center (Skokie, IL). We will also consider the implications of this history for making ethical choices in our world today.

SNC 206 | THE FIGHT FOR HUMAN RIGHTS: ONE WOMAN'S CRUSADE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Helen Prejean is a leading human rights activist in the United States. For the past 30 years, she has helped shape conversation about equal treatment for all within the criminal justice system, especially persons of color and the materially poor. Dead Man Walking, the eyewitness account of her experience accompanying condemned prisoners to execution, has had a major influence on discussion of violence, poverty, civil rights, criminal law, and social justice. In this course, we use her work and interact with her personally to study power inequities across race and class lines that perpetuate injustice and examine her strategies for reform.

SNC 209 | EXPLORING EARTH'S PHYSICAL FEATURES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course advances student exploration of Earth’s 4.5 billion year geologic record in order to evaluate the planet’s evolution and the interrelationships between humans and landforms. Through the application of scientific reasoning, mathematical inference, and prevailing technologies used by geologists, emphasis is on plate tectonics, geologic time, the rock cycle, weathering, earthquakes, fluvial features, rock structures, volcanoes, mountains, plateaus, plains, glacial features, deserts, caves, and coasts. Students also assess human reliance on landforms, the economics of landforms, and cases of earth pseudoscience. Learning is assessed through labs, fieldtrips, a scientifically-formatted research paper, an exam, and contributions to online discussions.

SNC 210 | PREHISTORIC LIFE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course promotes students’ investigation of fossils to interpret the character of 3.5 billion years of biological evolution and ecological change on earth. By way of scientific reasoning, mathematical inference, and applicable technologies, emphasis is on the exploration of the earliest evidence of life, development of multi-celled plants and animals, dinosaur evolution, mass extinction events, mammal diversification, human origins as well as appraisal of the societal reliance on fossil resources and the persistent debate over evolution versus creation. Learning is assessed through labs, a fieldtrip, an exam, video summaries, contributions to online discussions, and a research paper in a scientific format.

SNC 216 | LEISURE, RECREATION AND HEALTH | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will stimulate your thinking about the meaning of leisure in your life. Leisure today and historically has been central to the human experience. It is an elemental experience, essential to the total well-being of every person; it is a reflection and expression of the cultural values of a society; it is an important vehicle for medical treatment. Leisure and recreation services are also essential for healthy communities in terms of social climate, environmental quality, and economic stability. Leisure services comprise one of the largest and fastest growing industries in the world, whether measured in dollars spent, persons served, hours of time devoted, or resources used. The study of leisure and recreation is a broad discipline, combining diverse fields of study and professional practice. This course will (1) illustrate the importance of leisure to you and your loved ones, (2) contribute to your ability to become an informed consumer of leisure, (3) question the binary relationship of work and leisure, (4) teach you how to use leisure to increase emotional and physical health, resulting in a higher quality of life and, (5) demonstrate social injustice related to leisure behavior and administration. The course will be interactive and.

SNC 223 | ACTIVE CITIZENS: MAKING A DIFFERENCE IN THE COMMUNITY, WORKPLACE WORLD | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Americans are known for active participation in organizations that strengthen our communities. We coach our kid’s sports teams, take meals to members of our congregations, work for candidates that we believe in and join marches to support or oppose government action. With all these activities, we engage with other members of our community and workplace to make it better for ourselves and our families and to promote social justice. In this class, we will develop the knowledge and practice skills that enhance civic engagement and explore the role of citizens’ voices in a democracy in the face of powerful political and economic interests. (For EL credit, students complete 25 hours of service in a Chicago community. Those unable to complete placement arranged by the Steans Center must submit partnership agreement with another organization by the end of the first week). (2-4 quarter hours)

SNC 225 | BIODIVERSITY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The science of Biodiversity is the study of life on earth, both past and present. It involves the exploration and measurement of the amount of genetic, species, and ecological variation on earth and is emerging as one humanity's most important and urgent endeavors. Scientific efforts to study earth's biodiversity have intensified because of our growing appreciation of the role human population growth and urbanization play in accelerating the extinction of plant and animal species. This course introduces students to the nature of science and the central issues concerning life on earth including: the current state of biodiversity, valuing life's variations, human dependence on biological diversity, the origin and extinction of species, mass extinction, critical habitats at risk, and policies and approaches to conserve biodiversity.

SCG 227 | BRAVE NEW WORLD AND 1984: DIVERGING DYSTOPIAS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
On January 25, 2017, the New York Times published an article, “George Orwell's '1984' Is Suddenly a Bestseller,” which reported that Orwell's classic novel had suddenly seen an enormous spike in sales, as had other dystopian novels, including Brave New World. Indeed, the adjective "Orwellian," a reference to the way language can be twisted into pretzel logic by the powers that be, has become a commonplace of contemporary discourse and, as anyone familiar with The Hunger Games can tell you, dystopian fiction has been big in young adult literature for a number of years. But Nineteen Eighty-Four and Brave New World stand, by a strong consensus, as the definitive dystopian novels of the last hundred-some years. This is at least in part due to the fact that both novels are so well written - such riveting pieces of literary art; but it is also due to the perceived prophetic power the novels seem to share, although each posits a different kind of grim future for humankind. This course will engage closely with these two masterworks (and related texts and subtopics) from the perspectives of artistic genre; fiction and social commentary; politico-historical context; and intertextuality.

SCG 230 | FRANCE AND THE SILVER SCREEN: MODERN HISTORY THROUGH FRENCH CINEMA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will explore central issues in the history of modern France through the lens of cinematic representations analyzed in historical context. Students will deepen their knowledge of the events and figures in French history and examine change and continuity in such phenomena as the rise of the politically-conscious urban working-class. We will also consider how French society has confronted gender difference and religious pluralism. This course also includes a focus on representations of war and militarism in film, particularly considering the rise of anti-militarist film in the aftermath of the First World War, and the role of violence in colonialism struggles in Algeria and Vietnam. This course will interpret the ways in which films portray historical events and how films contribute to public understanding of history. No prior knowledge of French language is required; all films will be in French with English subtitles.

Social & Cultural Studies Ed Human Dev Grad (SCG)

SCG 25 | BASIC TECHNOLOGY LITERACY | 0 quarter hour
(Graduate)
This online course provides students with a knowledge about assembling, using, and troubleshooting basic technology hardware and software. In this course, students demonstrate understanding of basic computer setup and the use of peripheral devices such as printers, speakers, flash drives, scanners, digital cameras, videos, and computer software. (0 credit hours)

SCG 401 | ADVANCED LIFESPAN DEVELOPMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Current research and theories in human development relating to motivation, personality, learning and socialization. Case studies and an analysis of various developmental problems.

SCG 402 | PSYCHOLOGY OF LEARNING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Study of the learning-teaching process with specific emphasis on the person as a learner, human capacity and potential, learning theories and materials, motivation, concept formation, and behavior.

SCG 403 | HUMAN DEVELOPMENT AND LEARNING: ELEMENTARY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will focus on the developmental processes of school-age children, kindergarten through middle school, by beginning with the study of the young child's social, emotional, cognitive, and physical growth and change. The theoretical and observational study of child development will be framed by an examination of culture, gender, and socio-economic factors as they inform assumptions about normative processes. The relationship between development and learning in a social context will be examined with particular attention to children's developing concepts in math, science, and language arts. Attention will also be given to the role of teachers and schools and other institutions in fostering the healthy development and learning of young people.

SCG 404 | CHILD GROWTH AND DEVELOPMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course examines the growth and development of the young child in sociocultural context, from conception through age eight, including cognitive, language, physical, psychosocial, spiritual, creative, and emotional areas of development. Learning and development theories of young children, including those of Freud, Erikson, Garcia-Coll, Ainsworth, Bowlby, Piaget, Rogoff, Spencer, Vygotsky, Bronfenbrenner, and other modern developmental theorists, are explored. This course examines normative assumptions about children's processes of growth and change, and considers how learning and development occur through relationships in social contexts. The pedagogical implications of theories of development and of differences amongst children will be addressed throughout class discussions, child observations, and other course activities. This course requires 35 hours of field experience, working with infants and toddlers in a group care setting. Co-registration in T&L 480: Internship with Infants and Toddlers is recommended and encouraged.

SCG 406 | HUMAN DEVELOPMENT AND LEARNING:SECONDARY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course focuses on the multiple factors that contribute to the period of adolescence, bridging childhood and adulthood. Particular attention is given to the intrapsychic, interpersonal, biological, and socio-cultural processes that are mediated by the meanings that youth give to their identity vis a vis race, class, and gender formations within the broader society. Students will engage in interdisciplinary study of theories to examine the implications for teaching and learning processes and the role of educational institutions in fostering the healthy development of youth in society. Forms of inquiry will include students' examination of their own lives and assumptions, critique of theory, and observations of young people in a variety of contexts.

SCG 408 | EDUCATION AND SOCIETY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
A study of social forces that impinge upon the educational enterprise and analysis of the relationship to major social problems in urban education with emphasis on their social, economic, political, historical and philosophical dimensions.
This course focuses on the relationship between school structures and culture, social relations of race, ethnicity, class, and gender, and ideologies organizing education in the United States. Students will explore a range of theories in the sociology of education and explore linkages between school structures and processes and broader social forces. Readings may examine the political economy of schooling, inequalities in educational practices, and student and teacher identities shaped by schools and the larger society.

SCG 410 | INTRODUCTION TO RESEARCH: PURPOSES, ISSUES, AND METHODOLOGIES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
(formerly CUG 400) This course will examine the basic questions, issues and theoretical frameworks central to the purpose, conceptualization, conduct, writing, reading and the use of educational research as a means for informing educational theory, practice and policy. Students will be exposed to the multiple frameworks which inform education research, the various methodologies employed in collecting and analyzing data and will examine the advantages, limitations and values implicit in conducting and evaluating research.

SCG 411 | PHILOSOPHY OF EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course examines the relationship of education to the moral and ethical dilemmas or predicaments of the human condition. It will entail issues related to the nature of education’s responsiveness, or lack there of, to the concerns of the human condition: for example, human alienation, suffering, success and failure, caring, freedom, responsibility, liberation and agency. Special attention will be given to how these concerns influences or have social, cultural and political implications for how teachers address them within the teaching and learning process.

SCG 435 | YOUNG ADOLESCENT DEVELOPMENT IN CONTEXT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course considers how race/ethnicity, gender, social class, and sexuality inform teachers’ perceptions of early adolescent development. It also examines middle grades teaching practices and has students analyze how those practices shape the growth and educational/learning experiences of early adolescents. It promotes a broad understanding of social, cultural, and historical conceptions of adolescence, and critically examines the complexities of the physical, social, intellectual, and emotional processes of growth and change of young adolescents. It explores the range of social contexts, interpersonal relationships, and societal views, which influence and give meaning to the development and learning of middle grade youth. This course uses observational experiences, reflective inquiry and interdisciplinary theories to prepare middle grades teacher candidates to design classroom experiences that reflect and are sensitive to the socio-cultural contexts and realities of diverse middle grades learners. The course meets in the afternoon and integrates community and/or after school field experience with young adolescents into coursework. Co-requisite for this course is MGE 400. In this course, students will: 1.

SCG 439 | PHILOSOPHY AND PSYCHOLOGY OF YOUTH AND MIDDLE LEVEL EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course examines foundational and contemporary theories of youth and adolescent development. It considers how these theoretical ideas relate to contemporary questions of youth and middle level education. The course explores the historical invention of adolescence, changing ideas about the meaning of childhood, as well as some of the broader social, economic, political, and cultural implications of these changing ideas. This course seeks to develop in prospective educators a broader capacity to theorize about youth and schooling, and, hence, to act critically and reflectively in multiple contexts in which youth learn. 10 - 15 field experience hours are required as part of this course.

SCG 451 | DOING CRITICAL PRACTITIONER RESEARCH IN EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course introduces students to different approaches to education research and research methods with a focus on critical practitioner research. Students will become discerning readers of educational research and be able to design and conduct research related to teaching and learning in a variety of disciplinary areas (English, history/social sciences, mathematics, or science) at the secondary level. They will develop skills to critically examine and reflect on practice in the classroom through discipline-specific research projects. Taken concurrently with TCH 481, TCH 482, TCH 483, TCH 484.

T&L 425 and status as an Education graduate student are prerequisites for this class. SCG 451 has a co-requisite of TCH 481, or TCH 482, or TCH 483, or TCH 484.

SCG 527 | GLOBAL ISSUES IN EDUCATION SEMINAR | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Studies of school systems outside the United States, their methods, curriculum and achievements.

SCG 582 | PRACTICUM IN EDUCATIONAL TECHNOLOGY AND NEW MEDIA | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course provides directed experiences in decision-making for curriculum planning, instructional design and delivery, scholarship and leadership in instructional technology-supported learning contexts. Students will engage in co-teaching activities in technology-rich classrooms; develop an instructional technology plan; make field evaluation and use of educational hardware and software; review and discuss research and professional literature in instructional technology; evaluate and use instructional products; develop and present a multimedia-based project; learn and apply theories and principles of instructional and information message design; engage in collaborative, micro-teaching activities online; develop a technology-enhanced instructional program for the K-12 environment; create a staff development plan with focus on technology applications for administrative purposes; conduct an evaluation study on-site; observe and experiment face-to-face and virtually with a range of instructional technology applications; produce comparative reviews on the use of instructional technology in various school settings. The practicum will also provide students with multiple opportunities to reflect and share their thinking with each other in a supportive community of learners and researchers. (Prerequisites: SCG 402 & CS 460).
SCG 588 | INDEPENDENT STUDY IN SOCIAL AND CULTURAL FOUNDATIONS IN EDUCATION | 1-4.5 quarter hours (Graduate)
Independent Study in Social and Cultural Foundations in Education. PREREQUISITE: Permission of instructor, program chair and associate dean. (Variable credit)

SCG 600 | REGISTERED STUDENT IN GOOD STANDING | 0 quarter hour (Graduate)
Registration in this course is open to students who are not registered for any other courses but need to complete requirements/assignments for previously taken courses. It provides access to University facilities. Permission of advisor required. (0 credit hours)

Status as a Graduate Education student is a prerequisite for this class.

SCG 603 | CULTURE AND EDUCATION SEMINAR | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
At its core, this course is an exploration of various ways in which culture has been conceptualized. This exploration will focus on the relationship between education, pedagogy, and theories of culture, all framed by a concern for social justice. Topics may include the pedagogical and political dimensions of popular culture, the interpretation of cultural products and expressions, and the relationship between knowledge and power in the political economy of culture production.

SCG 604 | IDENTITY: CONSTRUCTIONS AND NEGOTIATIONS SEMINAR | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course explores the self and identity as a complex and dynamic psychological, socio-historical, and cultural process, and is grounded in the theoretical frameworks in human development, cultural studies, psychoanalysis, and philosophy, including critical and postmodern perspectives in education. It examines the intersubjective experiences, social relations, institutional hierarchies, and ideological frameworks through which social identities and subject positions are created, negotiated, and transformed across educational institutions and societal culture.

SCG 608 | IDEOLOGY, POWER AND POLITICS SEMINAR | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course examines how power operates pedagogically and how domination and resistance get shaped in education. It considers how institutional ideologies and power relations in society enter into educational discourse and practice. It also explores ways in which power produces various educational practices and ways in which power gets psychically configured. Students will examine major theories of power, ideology, and politics and consider the educational implications of such an analysis.

SCG 610 | INTRODUCTION TO RESEARCH METHODS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course examines the basic questions, issues and theoretical frameworks central to the purpose, conceptualization, conduct, writing, reading and the use of educational research as a means for informing educational theory, practice and policy. Students will be exposed to the multiple frameworks that inform educational research and the various methodologies employed in collecting and analyzing data, and will examine the advantages, limitations and ethical issues relating to conducting and evaluating research.

SCG 611 | PHILOSOPHICAL STUDIES IN EDUCATION, CULTURE AND ETHICS SEMINAR | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course examines philosophical questions regarding the moral and ethical meaning and purpose of education. Some of the questions explored are the nature of freedom, liberation, individuality, human difference, community, knowledge, reality, emotion, democracy, politics, aesthetics, self and other. In considering these questions in the context of education, particular attention is given to the philosophy of culture.

SCG 614 | CRITICAL MEDIA LITERACY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course focuses on theories of media interpretation, cultural pedagogy, and cultural studies. Literature from critical media literacy, cultural studies, critical pedagogy, communication studies, sociology, and philosophy will inform student understanding of how media educates, how interpretations of media are struggled over, and how such practices relate to broader structures of power, identity formation, political economy of media, theories of communication and representation, and pedagogy.

SCG 615 | THEORIZING IN EDUCATION, TECHNOLOGY AND SOCIETY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course explores philosophical and sociological theories of education, technology and society. Topics include the social, political, and pedagogical implications of educational technology and new media. The aim of the course is to introduce students to the history of critical theoretical perspectives on educative technologies through foundational texts in the humanities and social sciences as well as contemporary studies in the multiple educative aspects of technology. Course readings will draw on scholarship in philosophy, sociology, new media, educational foundations, and political theory.

SCG 617 | SPECIAL TOPICS IN SOCIAL AND CULTURAL FOUNDATIONS IN EDUCATION: | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course will provide students with an opportunity for critical examination of issues in the social and cultural foundations of education. Topics could include: educational theory; social context of education; education and social justice; education and social transformation, educational policy; and issues in educational reform.

SCG 625 | CANDIDACY CULMINATING PROJECT (STUDENT IN GOOD STANDING) | 0 quarter hour (Graduate)
Registration in this course is required of all students who are not enrolled in a course but are completing culminating projects for their program of study, including theses, papers, and final portfolios. It provides access to university facilities. Permission of thesis/capstone advisor required each term. Registration limited to three terms. (0 credit hours)

Status as a Graduate Education student is a prerequisite for this class.

SCG 627 | GLOBAL ISSUES IN EDUCATION SEMINAR | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Studies of school systems outside the United States, their methods, curriculum and achievements.

Status as an EDD student with a Global Catholic Educational Leadership concentration is a prerequisite for this class.
SCG 635 | ADVANCED QUALITATIVE RESEARCH METHODOLOGIES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course builds on fundamental principles of educational research first introduced in SCG 610. It provides students with experience conducting qualitative research, with particular attention to developing skills in various methods of data collection and analysis.
SCG 610 is a prerequisite for this class.

SCG 636 | THESIS RESEARCH | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
A student writing a thesis registers for this course for four quarter hours of credit. Where the thesis research and the writing of the thesis itself are prolonged beyond the usual time, the program advisor may require the student to register for additional credit. Completion of this course is required to receive the MA Degree in Social and Cultural Foundations in Education.

SCG 637 | CAPSTONE: SOCIAL AND CULTURAL FOUNDATIONS IN EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
The SCFE Capstone allows students to explore substantive areas of scholarship within their areas of interest and to create a final project or paper of their own design under the mentorship of a faculty member in the program. The Capstone is an opportunity to engage in a synthesis of what has been learned through coursework, and to integrate and compare knowledge gained from students' own research with that which was learned in the program. The capstone course will involve preparation of a substantive piece of work. Upon completion of all coursework, students enrolled in this course will select and work with a Capstone Advisor (a faculty member in the SCFE program) to discuss possible paper topics. The paper will generally consist of library-based research and will typically be 20-25 pages in length. Completion of this course is required to receive the MEd Degree in Social and Cultural Foundations in Education.

SCG 701 | PHILOSOPHY OF ETHICS IN EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course applies a philosophical lens to examine the structure and meaning of ethics within k-12 schools and universities, and beyond formal educational settings. Education, a condition for self-formation and self-other relations, is explored as a site of ethical inquiry. It is within this framework that education, which involves learning, teaching, response, and communication, is posed as a condition of ethical possibility and not merely as the vehicle through which a certain ethics gets carried out. Primary and secondary philosophical and non-philosophical literature will be used to study these issues.
Status as an EDD, PhD or EdS student with a declared concentration is a prerequisite for this class.

SCG 711 | CULTURE, POWER AND EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course provides a critical understanding of the larger concept of culture within the notion of multiculturalism. This begins by recognizing that k-12 schools and universities are cultural institutions engaged in the making of culture. While the focus of multiculturalism is about theorizing difference in relation to the particular cultural processes that go on in schools and universities, its focus does not address how educational institutions are shaped by broader cultural dynamics outside of the immediate context of educational institutions. It is in this context that students will examine how cultural processes are intimately connected with social relations of class, race, ethnicity, gender and sexuality. They will also explore how culture involves power, which serves to produce inequalities in the abilities of individuals and social groups to define and realize their needs. In addition, culture will be analyzed as a site of social difference and struggle.
Status as an EDD, PhD or EdS student with a declared concentration is a prerequisite for this class.

SCG 721 | HUMAN DEVELOPMENT AND THE EDUCATIONAL PROCESS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will examine the process of human development and learning through the ages by critically examining cross-cultural research and developmental theories designed to describe and interpret the physical, social, emotional, intellectual, and psychological processes involved. Emphasis will be placed on the range of individual, familial, environmental, and cultural factors that may enhance or inhibit human growth and development, and on the critical role that human relationships play in the lifelong interactive processes of learning and growth. Considerable attention will be paid to the historical role of power, culture, class, gender and capability in defining and interpreting certain behaviors as indicators of normative development. These normative indicators will be critiqued with regard to underlying cultural assumptions and values, their function in fostering and maintaining current social, educational and political relations, and their contribution to the current crises in urban education and the development of children and youth. Class participants will examine their perspective on human development and learning and explore the socio-cultural and historical bases which contribute to their underlying values and assumptions. Through multifaceted inquiry utilizing self-reflection, case studies, theoretical analyses, and child assessment and observation, participants will consider the implications for their work as educational leaders in approaching current challenges with students, parents, community, and teachers and in creating schools that will foster societal change to support the healthy development of children and youth.
Status as an EDD, PhD or EdS student with a declared concentration is a prerequisite for this class.

SCG 735 | QUANTITATIVE RESEARCH METHODS I | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is designed to provide doctoral level students with theoretical and practical preparation in quantitative research design including: instrumentaton; data collection; statistical analysis; ethics and politics of the conduct of research; and development of analytical skills for critiquing quantitative research. Students will have the opportunity to work with real databases to conduct both univariate and multivariate analyses, including correlations, ANOVAS, and multiple regressions.
Prerequisite: SCG 785.
(SCG 785 and status as an EDD student) or (SCG 785 and status as an CS PhD student) or (SCG 775 and status as an EdS student).
SCG 745 | QUALITATIVE RESEARCH METHODS I | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is designed to provide doctoral level students with theoretical and practical preparation in qualitative methods including: data collection and analysis; ethics and the politics of the conduct of research; and critical analytical skills for review and critique of qualitative research. Students will be introduced to a range of approaches to qualitative inquiry that may include: narrative inquiry; ethnography; case study; phenomenology; grounded theory; and participatory action research from a variety of theoretical perspectives. Prerequisite: SCG 785.
(SCG 785 and status as an EDD student) or (SCG 785 and status as an CS PhD student) or (SCG 775 and status as an EdS student).

SCG 755 | QUANTITATIVE RESEARCH METHODS II | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
A continuation of SCG 735. Students will prepare a methodology section of a research project and will learn how to write up quantitative results of their analyses. By the end of the course students should be able to: understand quantitative methodological approaches; select appropriate data collection strategies; and conduct the appropriate analysis for the research question(s) proposed and the nature of the data.
SCG 735 and status as an EDD, PhD or EdS student are prerequisites for this class.

SCG 765 | QUALITATIVE RESEARCH METHODS II | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
A continuation of SCG 745. Students will conduct a pilot study on an issue of interest using a qualitative research design. By the end of the course students should be able to: understand qualitative methodological approaches; select appropriate data collection strategies; and conduct the appropriate analysis for the research question(s) proposed and the nature of the data.
SCG 745 and status as an EDD, PhD or EdS student is a prerequisite for this class.

SCG 775 | SEMINAR: FRAMEWORKS OF INQUIRY IN EDUCATIONAL RESEARCH II | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Drawing upon the knowledge and skills developed in Frameworks of Inquiry I, this course is designed to enhance students’ ability to critically analyze existing research as a crucial element in completing their own doctoral research. Emphasis will be placed on the preparation of a critical literature review. By the end of the course students should be able to: review the components of a research proposal; develop further the ability to evaluate research critically; conduct a literature review that will involve interpretation, evaluation, and synthesis of literature on a topic of their choice; and refine a topic for dissertation research.
SCG 775 and status as an EDD or PhD student is a prerequisite for this class.

SCU 207 | SOCIAL AND HISTORICAL ISSUES IN EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course examines through an interdisciplinary framework sociological and historical issues and concerns associated with the relationship between education and public life. The course analyzes education as a form of cultural power, addressing its political and ideological effects. Emphasis will be placed upon the social and historical meanings and purposes assigned to education, especially as it pertains to questions of race, gender, sexuality, and the political economy of class.

SCU 335 | YOUNG ADOLESCENT DEVELOPMENT IN CONTEXT | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course considers how race/ethnicity, gender, social class, and sexuality inform teachers' perceptions of early adolescent development. It also examines middle grades teaching practices and has students analyze how those practices shape the growth and educational/learning experiences of early adolescents. It promotes a broad understanding of social, cultural, and historical conceptions of adolescence, and critically examines the complexities of the physical, social, intellectual, and emotional processes of growth and change of young adolescents. It explores the range of social contexts, interpersonal relationships, and societal views, which influence and give meaning to the development and learning of middle grade youth. This course uses observational experiences, reflective inquiry and interdisciplinary theories to prepare middle grades teacher candidates to design classroom experiences that reflect and are sensitive to the socio-cultural contexts and realities of diverse middle grades learners. The course meets in the afternoon and integrates community and/or after school field experience with young adolescents into coursework. Co-requisite for this course is MGE 300. In this course, students will: 1. Junior standing is a prerequisite for this class.

SCU 336 | ADOLESCENT AND ADULT GROWTH AND DEVELOPMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

(Undergraduate)
This course is an introduction to the study of the process of human development from conception to old age. Through a range of theories, the periods of childhood, adolescence, and adulthood are examined with particular attention to the role of culture, gender, and class as they inform the contextualized process of growth and change across the life span.

SCU 338 | THE PROCESS AND EVALUATION OF LEARNING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The process involved in human learning is examined from alternative theoretical and research paradigms and perspectives. The roles of emotions, cultural differences, social realities, cognitive uniqueness, character and achievement tendencies are examined with respect to learner functioning. Alternative methods and techniques for evaluating learner development and academic achievement are surveyed and discussed. Emphasis is placed upon identifying the characteristics of individually and culturally responsive and responsible testing and assessment protocols in the school setting.

An education major or minor is a prerequisite for this class.

SCU 339 | PHILOSOPHY AND PSYCHOLOGY OF YOUTH AND MIDDLE LEVEL EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course introduces foundational and contemporary theories of youth and adolescent development. It provides an investigation of how these theoretical ideas relate to contemporary questions of youth and middle level education. The course explores the historical invention of adolescence, changing ideas about the meaning of childhood, as well as some of the broader social, economic, political, and cultural implications of these changing ideas. This course seeks to develop in prospective educators a broader capacity to theorize about youth and schooling and, hence, to act critically and reflectively in multiple contexts in which youth learn. 10 - 15 field experience hours are required as part of this course.

An education major or minor is a prerequisite for this class.

SCU 351 | DOING CRITICAL PRACTITIONER RESEARCH IN EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course introduces students to different approaches to education research and research methods with a focus on critical practitioner research. Students will become discerning readers of educational research and be able to design and conduct research related to teaching and learning in a variety of disciplinary areas (English, history/social sciences, mathematics, or science) at the secondary level. They will develop skills to critically examine and reflect on practice in the classroom through discipline-specific research projects. Taken concurrently with SEC 381, SEC 382, SEC 383, SEC 385.

SEC 364 is a prerequisite for this class. SCU 351 has a co-requisite of SEC 381, or SEC 382, or SEC 383, or SEC 385.

SCU 399 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 1-8 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Education core unit. Permission of Department Chair and Associate Dean is required. (Variable credit)

SCU 399 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 1-8 quarter hours

SOC 280 | MASS MEDIA AND CULTURE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Analysis of the relations between modern society and the mass media such as TV, film, radio and the print media.

SOC 281 | SOCIOLOGY OF ROCK MUSIC | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Rock music is studied as an object of culture, both as art and as mass culture. Attention is given to its creation, dissemination and appreciation.

SOC 290 | INTRO STATS FOR THE SOCIAL SCIENCES | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Addresses both the coming of slavery in Western civilization and how the ideology of race is used to interpret historical events and situations. The course will consider how slavery created the formation of a racist color line.

SOC 291 | SPECIAL TOPICS IN SOCIOLOGY | 2 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Two-credit-hour courses on special topics in Sociology.

SOC 292 | COLLECTIVE ACTION | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
The socio-legal implications of violent and nonviolent protest in bringing about social change. Emphases: social and historical causes that precipitate violence; court response to civil disobedience.

SOC 305 | POWER, DEVIANCE AND SOCIAL CONTROL | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course employs a variety of theoretical paradigms to examine social constructions of deviance and conformity. It pays close attention to the relationship of such behaviors to conventional values, institutions, power, and mechanisms of social control.

SOC 306 | SOCIOLOGY OF FAMILIES | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
What's the meaning of family? How have families changed over time? How do families engage in care? What role do outside institutions have on family? This course addresses these questions by exploring historical and contemporary changes in family life; the relationship between family life and social arrangements outside of family in the work place, economy, and government; the division of labor related to gender, race, ethnic, and class inequality; and the role of economic, political, and social policies. SOC 101 or SOC 105 is a prerequisite for this class.

SOC 307 | SOCIOLOGY OF DRUGS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Sociological perspectives on substance use and abuse, related high-risk behavior, drug traffic, community impact, and prevention and public policy.

SOC 309 | SOCIOLOGY OF SEXUALITY | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Explores social construction of sex and sexuality, the intersection of gender, race, and sexuality, sexual orientations, and major issues in sexual politics, such as the gay/lesbian movement, discrimination, abortion, and sterilization.

SOC 310 | CRIMINAL- LEGAL SYSTEM: CRITICAL PERSPECTIVES | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
In this course, students will explore the history and social meaning of "criminal justice" in the United States. Readings, reflections, and discussions will push students to examine the criminal justice system as a system of social control and will alert students to the raced and classed character of this system.

SOC 313 | SOCIOLOGY OF EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Examines the structure of schooling in the United States and other societies. Topics include: Schools as organizations; teaching as a profession; peer cultures in schools; racial/ethnic, class, and gender inequalities in education.

SOC 315 | LAW, POWER AND RESISTANCE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
In this course, students examine the law in its social context. Readings, reflections, and discussions will push students to explore the role of law both in the production and maintenance of inequality and in marginalized people's struggles for justice.

SOC 316 | STREET GANGS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Examines the problems associated with street gangs and "troublesome youth groups" in the United States and Europe. Classical and contemporary theories of gang formation and proliferation are reviewed. Both quantitative and qualitative gang research efforts are studied. Street gang reduction policies and programs (national and local) are scrutinized. Emphasis is placed on the street gang's relationship with other organizations and social actors in the same "habitat. SOC 220 is a prerequisite for this class.
SOC 317 | GENDER, CRIME AND JUSTICE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In this course students explore the ways in which gender intersects with crime and justice in the U.S. and increasingly, globally. Using feminist and critical perspectives, this course interrogates the gendered and racial nature of the criminal justice system, examines the ways in which gender intersects with patterns of offending, victimization, survival, and resistance, and looks at the ways that criminal justice institutions and gender interact. It also asks students to think critically about alternatives to incarceration and other ways of establishing “justice”.

SOC 321 | HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICE ORGANIZATIONS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The work of health and human service organizations is examined; the origins of these organizations, their goals and the problems inherent in attaining the goals, are considered.

SOC 322 | TREATMENT AND PREVENTION OF DELINQUENCY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
a review of traditional and current practices of programs designed to treat delinquents and prevent delinquency, with emphasis on the variety of available correctional facilities.

SOC 330 | THEMES IN SOCIAL THOUGHT | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Consideration of the writings of social philosophers regarding the nature, origins and meanings of human society.

SOC 331 | SOCIOLOGICAL THEORY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Exploration of the nature of theory and an analysis of selected social theorists.

SOC 332 | THEORETICAL CRIMINOLOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Theoretical Criminology is concerned with theories and concepts, of crime, criminal behavior, deviance, social regulation and sovereignty. The course explores interlinked notions of security, territory, population, and social control, through a plurality of techniques and mechanisms (policing, punishment, surveillance, law, incarceration, neoliberalism, biopolitics), which structure society in racial and class domination. In doing so, the course links criminology and criminological analysis to wider issues in social, political, and cultural theory.

SOC 340 | SOCIAL INEQUALITY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Examination of inequalities in wealth and power and their consequences for individuals and the society; for example, the institutions of law, health care, education and politics.

SOC 344 | POLITICAL SOCIOLOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will explore how social relations shape political processes, institutions, organizations and events. For example, we will examine the ways class, gender, and race relations influence state-building or movement-building. In doing so, we will explore how cultural traditions, or collective definitions of identity, shape and are shaped by political mobilizations or everyday practices of citizenship. Theoretically and empirically informed discussions will highlight historical and contemporary examples that influence political systems.

SOC 346 | URBAN ETHNOGRAPHY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will explore key issues in the method, practice, politics, and ethics of ethnography in relation to one’s embeddedness and participation within the research setting under analysis. Various styles of ethnography, field techniques, strategies, and analytical frameworks will be examined. We will also explore the predicaments, virtues, and contributions of ethnographic works in contribution to the “craft of sociology.” We will discuss the relation of theory to method and data and how ethnography connects to larger social forces of race, local knowledge’s, power and poverty, practice and culture.

SOC 347 | CLASS, POWER AND DECISION MAKING IN THE CITY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Analysis of decision-making in urban settings. Considers the role of class disparities, power, citizen protest and community participation in urban outcomes.

SOC 348 | THE CITY IN THE FUTURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Alternative views of urban structures and social life in the post-industrial age. Considerations of the implications of energy, different technologies, future shock and social trends.

SOC 351 | HEALTH DISPARITIES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Examination of persistent health disparities in the U.S. and the influence of social settings on morbidity and mortality, as well as the impact of social class, gender, and race/ethnicity on disease and illness patterns and access to health care.

SOC 353 | SOCIOLOGY OF MENTAL ILLNESS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Examines the social history of, and societal reaction to, the mentally ill. Review of contemporary social perspectives on mental illness and social research on mental hospital institutionalization; the dynamics of the therapist-patient relationship.

SOC 358 | REVOLUTIONS AND PEASANT REbellIONS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course focuses on theories on the international, national, regional, and local factors contributing to the weakening of states that result in revolutions, civil wars, and peasant rebellions. Case studies include revolutions in France, Russia, China, Mexico, Cuba, Nicaragua, and Iran. Contemporary social movements and insurrections are analyzed based on the theories of the course. Cross-listed with LST 358 and INT 319.

SOC 360 | SOCIAL SERVICES IN CONTEMPORARY SOCIETY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Social services and welfare programs as developed in contemporary industrial societies. Comparison between European social services and the American social services provides a basis for considering the implications of social policy. Cross-listed with SOC 432.
SOC 365 | HEALTH AND GLOBALIZATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Comparative approach to understanding changes in health and illness patterns, diet and consumption, and access to health care associated with economic expansion, global inequalities, and changes in local economies, occupations and cultures. Case studies of selected non-industrialized countries.

SOC 370 | SOCIOLOGY OF FOOD, IDENTITY, AND INEQUALITY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Food has more meaning than mere sustenance and we will explore how food can both nourish us culturally and socially, but also how it reflects the gendered, race, ethnic, class, and economic distinctions within society. In doing so, we will examine the multidimensional structures that make up the beliefs and practices related to food with emphasis on inequalities in the food system, and the levers of social change, including social movements, public policy, and equitably organized food and nutrition economies.

SOC 372 | HEALTH CARE SYSTEMS: A COMPARATIVE PERSPECTIVE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Examines the variations in health care delivery systems across selected countries and analyzes social and cultural forces that influence these systems, with an emphasis on differences in health outcomes.

SOC 373 | PUBLIC HEALTH AND HIGH RISK BEHAVIOR | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Explores problems in community and public health such as HIV/AIDS and injection drug use. Topics may vary.

SOC 380 | RESEARCH METHODS IN SOCIOLOGY I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The logic of social science research: Formulation of research questions; research designs; data collection and analysis; research report writing. Overview of methods for quantitative social research.

SOC 390 | SEMINAR IN SOCIOLOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A senior seminar course that enables students to conduct original research, develop critical thinking and oral presentation skills, and write a major research paper. Senior standing and a minimum of 12 hours in SOC classes is a prerequisite for this class.

SOC 395 | CAPSTONE IN SOCIOLOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Combines basic understanding of sociological principles with field placement, research experiences, and special study arrangements. Students conduct their own capstone project.

SOC 386 | POPULAR CULTURE AND THE ARTS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Multiple perspectives, from modern to post modern, are applied to a range of forms of popular culture, both in historical context and in their current forms. Topics to be covered include examining the concept of popular culture, the analytic tools to understand it, and analyzing some of its manifestations (e.g. sports, mass media, gambling, holiday presentations, shopping, theme parks, theme restaurants, etc. Cross-listed with SOC 480.

SOC 387 | SOCIOLOGY OF CELEBRITY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Celebrities are known for being well-known. The course explores the role of media and fans in the making of celebrity and considers celebrity as a key feature of contemporary society.

SOC 388 | SOCIOLOGY OF CONSUMPTION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Sociological perspectives on shopping, consumer culture, and social-psychology of consumer behavior.

SOC 390 | SEMINAR IN SOCIOLOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Selected topics form the basis of an in-depth consideration. Topics vary and may be initiated by students.

SOC 391 | SEMINAR IN SOCIOLOGY | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Two-credit-hour course on special topics in Sociology.

SOC 394 | COMMUNITY BASED SOCIOLOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Two-credit-hour course on special topics in Sociology.

SOC 395 | CAPSTONE IN SOCIOLOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A senior seminar course that enables students to conduct original research and integrate theory and methods. Senior standing and a minimum of 12 hours in SOC classes is a prerequisite for this class.

SOC 397 | TRAVEL/STUDY | 1-8 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Foreign and domestic study tours with lectures and research by special arrangement with sponsoring programs.

SOC 398 | INTERNSHIP | 1-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Placement of students in work-study situations relevant to careers in health and human services, social work, juvenile justice, law and society, urban and community services. Clinical and Experiential (can fulfill jr. yr. requirement). (1 to 4 credit hours).

SOC 399 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 1-6 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Independent Study. Senior status and permission of the department chair are prerequisites for this course.

SOC 402 | STATISTICS FOR THE SOCIAL SCIENCES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Introduction to quantitative and statistical reasoning in the social sciences, quantitative data analysis, and computer software.
SOC 403 | SOCIAL POLICY AND SOCIAL CHANGE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Examines the process of policy-making and the effects of policies on individuals, organizations, and communities.

SOC 404 | CLASSICAL AND MODERN THEORY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Covers classical social theory (Marx, Durkheim, and Weber) and social theory through the 1960s.

SOC 405 | SOCIOLOGICAL PERSPECTIVES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Examines sociological theories, methods and concepts through a study of the work of contemporary sociologists.

SOC 411 | SOCIAL RESEARCH | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course presents the logic of social science inquiry and familiarizes students with a wide range of quantitative and qualitative research designs and methods such as ethnography, survey research, case studies, analysis of existing data sets, focus groups, content and discourse analysis, interviews, social autopsies, and comparative-historical research. Policy research and program evaluation may also be included among the topics. Emphasis is placed on formulating research questions and linking designs and methods to the questions. Students read examples of research and develop their own proposals. Research ethics and human-participant protection are key concerns of the course. Status as a SOC Graduate student is a prerequisite for this class.

SOC 412 | DATA ANALYSIS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
The implementation of a research project. Analytic techniques, data processing and the preparation of a written research report. Status as a SOC Graduate student is a prerequisite for this class.

SOC 413 | QUALITATIVE METHODS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
An examination of qualitative methods in sociology: data collection and content analysis, field research, life histories, and unobtrusive measures. Status as a SOC Graduate student is a prerequisite for this class.

SOC 414 | LITERATURE REVIEW WRITING PROJECT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course requires students to complete a paper reviewing the sociological literature on a topic of their choice. Successful completion of the literature review paper is one of the ways in which students may fulfill the final project requirement leading to the master's degree. Cross-listed with SOC 415.

SOC 415 | WRITING A RESEARCH PAPER | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is one of three options for fulfilling the MA-Sociology writing project requirement. The course focuses on original research. The final paper for the course is a draft of the research report that may be used to complete the program. Cross-listed with SOC 414.

SOC 417 | ETHNOGRAPHIC DOCUMENTARY FILM PRODUCTION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course imparts the art, craft, and discipline behind the making of sociological ethnographic documentary films. Throughout the course students learn ethnographic concepts and methods, develop film criticism faculties, and build a film production skill set.

SOC 420 | URBAN SOCIOLOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Introduction to advanced level studies in applied urban sociology: contemporary urban theory, research, and policy issues.

SOC 421 | URBAN DEVELOPMENT POLICIES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Community agencies viewed as problem-solving organizations. Concentration on the impact of state and local government on community organizations and how community organizations influence social policy.

SOC 423 | SOCIOLOGY OF HEALTH, ILLNESS AND MEDICINE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)

SOC 424 | SOCIOLOGY OF SUBSTANCE USE & ABUSE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Sociological perspectives on substance use and abuse, related high-risk behavior, drug traffic, community impact, and prevention and public policy.

SOC 426 | SOCIAL SERVICES IN CONTEMPORARY SOCIETIES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Analysis of the social system of welfare, evaluation of the social organization of welfare and the problems of welfare service systems. The interrelationships between welfare and the family, employment, health and crime are explored. Cross-listed with SOC 323.

SOC 430 | RESEARCH ON URBAN CULTURES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Ethnological approach to urban life stressing the qualitative analysis and evaluation of different types of urban communities, community organizations, and urban life styles.

SOC 432 | THE SOCIOLOGY OF EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Analysis of educational organizations and their effects-including characteristics of institutional structures, teaching as an occupation, and the relationship between educational attainment and social mobility.

SOC 433 | SOCIAL POLICY AND SOCIAL CHANGE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Analysis of the concept of welfare, evaluation of the social organization of welfare and the problems of welfare service systems. The interrelationships between welfare and the family, employment, health and crime are explored. Cross-listed with SOC 323.

SOC 434 | YOUTH SERVICES: HEALTH AND WELFARE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Review of research on various youth problems (eg., substance abuse, pregnancy, runaways) and consideration of efforts at amelioration and control.

SOC 437 | SOCIAL SERVICES IN CONTEMPORARY SOCIETIES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Analysis of the social system of welfare, evaluation of the social organization of welfare and the problems of welfare service systems. The interrelationships between welfare and the family, employment, health and crime are explored. Cross-listed with SOC 323.

SOC 440 | SOCIOLOGY OF LAW | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Analysis of the American legal system as an instrument of social control, social change, and social reform. The impact of social science research on public policy decisions.

SOC 441 | PUBLIC HEALTH AND HIGH RISK BEHAVIOR | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course brings sociological theory, concepts, and methods to bear on HIV/AIDS, hepatitis B and C (HBV, HCV), and other adverse health outcomes prevalent among injection drug users (IDUs), men who have sex with men (MSM), and “high risk heterosexuals” (HRHs).
SOC 442 | CRIMINAL JUSTICE: HISTORY, THEORY, AND ANALYSIS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Study of major criminological theories and their application to systems of corrections. Present trends at federal, state, city and private correctional institutions.

SOC 443 | CRITICAL LEGAL THEORY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Analysis of legal systems and their implementation; jurisprudence and its role in the development and change of legal systems; role of the courts and the police as related to community social problems.

SOC 447 | SOCIAL CONTROL AND SOCIAL DEVIANCE | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Examines theories and research on the social organization of institutions that label and process deviants.

SOC 450 | ADVANCED STATISTICS I | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Advanced Statistics I (cross-Listed as PSY 410)

SOC 455 | CHILDHOOD, FAMILY, PUBLIC POLICY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Examines contemporary public policy issues and relevant research concerning parenting, marriage, household structure, and family formation, with a focus on the U.S.

SOC 460 | SOCIOLOGY OF THE FAMILY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Examines demographic trends in this century, recent literature on women and men, wives and husbands, children and parents. Some comparative material is included.

SOC 461 | SOCIOLOGY OF YOUTH | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Critical analysis of literature on nondelinquent youth; focus on the social contexts within which the transition to adulthood occurs.

SOC 463 | SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
The influence of group life on personality development, social interaction, and social behavior.

SOC 464 | SOCIAL INEQUALITY AND STRATIFICATION | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
An analysis of inequalities in power, wealth and prestige with an emphasis on the concept of social class, trends in social mobility, and relationships to current social topics such as housing, welfare and political participation.

SOC 465 | RACE AND ETHNIC RELATIONS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Theoretical perspectives on racial, ethnic, gender, sexual orientation and differentially abled groups emphasizing processes of group formation, patterns of prejudice and discrimination, and an evaluation of methods to reduce prejudice and discrimination.

SOC 466 | SOCIAL MOVEMENTS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Study of social trends, social movements, communications, and crowd behavior. Emphasis on processes of social change, includes examination of historical and cross-cultural case material.

SOC 467 | ORGANIZATIONS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
The functioning, premises, and consequences of formal organizations will be considered using a variety of perspectives.

SOC 468 | SOCIAL DEVIATION | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Research and theory in the sociology of deviant behavior, emphasis upon such topics as the labeling of deviants, the analysis of deviant careers, patterns of deviant socialization, and the roles of agents or agencies of social control. Cross-listed with SOC 304.

SOC 470 | GENDER AND SOCIETY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Theory and research on roles of men and women, sexual behavior and patterns of gender inequality. Cross-listed with MLS 443 and WGS 460.

SOC 471 | SOCIOLOGY OF KNOWLEDGE | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
An analysis of the social forms of knowledge and the social processes by which individuals acquire this knowledge. The institutional organization and social distribution of knowledge.

SOC 475 | SOCIOLOGY OF WORK | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Examination of the nature, meaning and history of work and leisure in Western culture; and the relationship of work and leisure to issues associated with the contemporary concept of "quality of life". Cross-listed with MLS 443.

SOC 477 | SEX, SEXUALITY AND POLITICS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Focus on sexuality as one of the central organizing ideologies shaping the fabric of our social life. Topics covered include the medicalization of sex, sex and race, pornography, sex and globalization, and gay liberation movement, etc.

SOC 479 | MEN, MASCULINITY AND POWER | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course reviews the development of men's studies and its connection with the development of women's studies. It examines the construction of masculinity and the issue concerning gender inequality.

SOC 480 | POPULAR CULTURE AND THE ARTS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
(Cross-listed as SOC 386) The course explores topics in popular culture and the arts from a sociological perspective. The focus includes specific arts (film, music, photography, etc), subcultures of artists and performers and the impact of the market on the arts and popular culture.

SOC 487 | SOCIOLOGY OF CELEBRITY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Celebrities are known for being well-known. The course explores the role of media and fans in the making of celebrity and considers celebrity as a key feature of contemporary society.

SOC 493 | VISUAL SOCIOLOGY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
A sociological view of documents that record social reality. These documents primarily include photographs but can also include paintings and sculpture.

SOC 494 | RACISM AND RESISTANCE | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
In this course, although we will be particularly interested in the way White Supremacy is created and maintained in the post-civil rights era, we will ground our examination in the histories that created our present. We will end the course with a frank discussion of what can be done to resist racism and racial oppression in our own lives.
SOC 495 | SPECIAL TOPICS IN SOCIOLOGY | 4 quarter hours
Graduate
Special courses will be offered as students and faculty identify selected topics of common interest.

SOC 498 | INTERNSHIP | 8.00 quarter hours
Graduate
Students may be placed with agencies where they will have the opportunity to participate in activities such as research and counseling. Credit may vary but is subject to the limit of eight quarter hours.

SOC 499 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 1-4 quarter hours
Graduate
Independent Study.

SOC 500 | THESIS RESEARCH | 4 quarter hours
Graduate
The thesis research should culminate in the acceptance of a thesis. Four quarter hours, one registration.

SOC 510 | CANDIDACY CONTINUATION | 0 quarter hour
Graduate
This 0-credit hour course is available to master's degree candidates who are actively working toward the completion of a thesis, project, or portfolio. Enrollment in this course is limited to three quarters and requires thesis/project advisor and graduate director approval and demonstration to them of work each quarter. Enrollment in this course allows access to the library and other campus facilities. This course carries and requires the equivalent of half-time enrollment status. The student may be eligible for loan deferment and student loans. This course is graded as pass/fail. (0 credit hours)

SOC 601 | CANDIDACY MAINTENANCE | 0 quarter hour
Graduate
This 0-credit hour course is available to graduate students who are not registered for a course in a given quarter but need to maintain active university status. Enrollment in this course is limited to three quarters and requires permission of the graduate director. Enrollment in this course allows access to the library and other campus facilities. This course does not carry an equivalent enrollment status and students in it are not eligible for loan deferment or student loans. This course is not graded. (0 credit hours)

Software Engineering (SE)

SE 325 | INTRODUCTION TO SOFTWARE ENGINEERING | 4 quarter hours
Undergraduate
This course introduces students to the activities performed at each stage of the development process so that they can understand the full lifecycle context of specific tasks such as coding and testing. Topics will include software development processes, domain modeling, requirements elicitation and specification, architectural design and analysis, product and process level metrics, configuration management, quality assurance activities including user acceptance testing and unit testing, project management skills such as risk analysis, effort estimation, project release planning, and software engineering ethics.

CSC 301 or CSC 393 is a prerequisite for this class.

SE 330 | OBJECT ORIENTED MODELING | 4 quarter hours
Undergraduate
Object-oriented modeling techniques for analysis and design. Provides the tools and techniques needed to solve complex, real-world software engineering problems in an object-oriented manner, using the most effective elements of the Unified Process. The course covers the essential concepts and notation of the Unified Modeling Language (UML), the standard notation for object-oriented analysis and design. Team project.

CSC 212 or CSC 262 or CSC 300 is a prerequisite for this class.

SE 333 | SOFTWARE TESTING | 4 quarter hours
Undergraduate
This course is designed for the software engineering professional to gain a greater understanding of the key ingredients in creating and/or managing a successful testing program to meet project needs. Topics covered include test lifecycle planning, test design & coverage analysis, complexity, levels of testing such as unit, integration, system, performance and stress testing. Best practice strategies in software testing such as verification & validation, early lifecycle testing, risk based testing and automation will also be examined including exposure to test automation methods and tools.

CSC 383 or SE 330 or CSC 301 is a prerequisite for this class.

SE 341 | CONTINUOUS DELIVERY AND DEVOPS | 4 quarter hours
Undergraduate
A study of the tools, techniques, and processes used in Continuous Delivery and DevOps. Students will learn about the software methods that underpin continuous delivery and deployment. Topics will include: the economics of devops and continuous delivery; the role of virtualization; cloud technologies and topologies; containerization; automating builds and testing; continuous integration; value stream maps; the essentials of configuration management; and effective use of source code control branches and feature flags to manage multiple lines of concurrent development.

CSC 301 is a prerequisite for this class.

SE 350 | OBJECT-ORIENTED SOFTWARE DEVELOPMENT | 4 quarter hours
Undergraduate
Principles, techniques and tools of object-oriented modeling, design, implementation, and testing of large-scale software systems. Topics include design patterns, application frameworks, architectural design, and the applications in the software development process to improve the extensibility, maintainability, and reliability of software systems.

CSC 301 is a prerequisite for this class.

SE 352 | OBJECT-ORIENTED ENTERPRISE APPLICATION DEVELOPMENT | 4 quarter hours
Undergraduate
This course focuses on applying object-oriented techniques in the design and development of software systems for enterprise applications. Topics include component architecture, such as Java Beans and Enterprise Java Beans, GUI components, such as Swing, database connectivity and object repositories, server application integration using technologies such as servlets, Java Server Pages, JDBC and RMI, security and internationalization. PREREQUISITE(S): CSC 301. CSC 301 is a prerequisite for this class.
SE 356 | SOFTWARE DEVELOPMENT FOR MOBILE AND WIRELESS SYSTEMS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate) This course will focus on the unique aspects of developing software applications for mobile and wireless systems, such as personal digital assistant (PDA) devices and mobile phones. Topics will include user interface design for small screens with restricted input modalities, data synchronization for mobile databases as well as wireless programming and the use of web services. PREREQUISITE(S): SE 350. SE 350 is a prerequisite for this class.

SE 357 | CONCURRENT SYSTEM DEVELOPMENT | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate) Fundamentals and techniques of developing concurrent object-oriented applications, using a patterns-based approach. Concepts covered include threads, synchronization and object locking, thread blocking and deadlock, safety and liveness, state-dependent action and concurrency control. PREREQUISITE(S): SE 350. SE 350 is a prerequisite for this class.

SE 358 | SOFTWARE DEVELOPMENT FOR LIMITED AND EMBEDDED DEVICES | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate) This course will focus on the unique aspects, tools, and techniques for developing software applications for limited and embedded devices, such as set-top boxes, micro-controllers and smart cards. Topics will include memory management for low-memory devices and efficient programming techniques for limited processors. Students will gain hands-on experiences in customizing and configuring embedded OS, handling various types of sensors and actuators such as barcode readers, RFID sensors, etc, and building software applications that meet the functional and non-functional requirements. PREREQUISITE(S): SE 350. SE 350 is a prerequisite for this class.

SE 359 | AGILE SOFTWARE DEVELOPMENT | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate) This course focuses on the fundamentals, principles, tools, and techniques in agile software development. Students will gain hands-on experiences in agile software development through projects dealing with various aspects of agile development, including planning, construction, testing, and integration. Students will be able to effectively participate in and manage agile software development as a result of their successfully completing this course. PREREQUISITE(S): SE 350. SE 350 is a prerequisite for this class.

SE 368 | SOFTWARE MEASUREMENT AND PROJECT ESTIMATION | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate) This course will discuss various software metrics and defect models. Productivity and effort estimation models as well as software cost estimation will also be discussed. PREREQUISITE(S): IT 223 and SE 330. IT 223 and SE 330 are prerequisites for this class.

SE 371 | PRACTICES OF GLOBAL SOFTWARE DEVELOPMENT | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate) This course studies the challenges and solutions for developing software in a global environment. Topics covered include strategic issues related to allocation of tasks; communication issues that arise due to distance, time zone differences, infrastructure support, geographical dispersion, and lack of information communication; coordination complexity; cultural issues, technical issues related to information and artifact sharing, and architectural design, and finally knowledge management issues. Some sections of this course will include a hand-on global development project in conjunction with teams of students at other universities, while other sections will focus on a more in-depth theoretical discussion of these issues and concepts. PREREQUISITE(S): CSC 301 or CSC 383 or CSC 393. CSC 301 or CSC 393 is a prerequisite for this class.

SE 380 | DESIGN OF OBJECT-ORIENTED LANGUAGES | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate) This course covers issues in the design and specification of object-oriented programming languages. Sample topics include the use of patterns in program representation, static and dynamic semantics, subject reduction, sub-typing, inheritance, polymorphism, generativity and concurrency. PREREQUISITE(S): SE 350.

SE 390 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 1-8 quarter hours (Undergraduate) Independent study supervised by an instructor. Independent study form required. Can be repeated for credit. Variable credit. Prerequisite(s): Instructor consent required (variable credit)

SE 430 | OBJECT ORIENTED MODELING | 4 quarter hours (Graduate) Object-oriented modeling techniques for analysis and design. Provides the tools and techniques needed to solve complex, real-world software engineering problems in an object-oriented manner, using the most effective elements of the Unified Process. The course covers the essential concepts and notation of the Unified Modeling Language (UML), the standard notation for object-oriented analysis and design. Team project. PREREQUISITE(S): CSC 403. CSC 403 is a prerequisite for this class.
SE 433 | SOFTWARE TESTING AND QUALITY ASSURANCE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is designed for the software engineering professional to gain a greater understanding of the key ingredients in creating and/or managing a successful testing program to meet project needs. Topics covered include test lifecycle planning, test design & coverage analysis, complexity, levels of testing such as unit, integration, system, performance and stress testing. Best practice strategies in software testing such as verification & validation, early lifecycle testing, risk based testing and automation will also be examined including exposure to test automation methods and tools. PREREQUISITE(S): CSC 403.

CSC 403 is a prerequisite for this class.

SE 441 | CONTINUOUS DELIVERY AND DevOps | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
A study of the tools, techniques, and processes used in continuous delivery and DevOps. Students will learn to transform an organization that uses traditional software release methods into one that embraces continuous delivery and deployment. Topics will include: the economics of DevOps and continuous delivery; the role of virtualization, cloud technologies, and containers; automated builds and testing; value stream maps; the essentials of configuration management; effective use of source code control branches and feature flags to manage multiple lines of development; organizational factors affecting the success of continuous delivery and DevOps adoption including: culture, team organization, collaboration, and software development practices. PREREQUISITE(S): CSC 403.

CSC 403 is a prerequisite for this class.

SE 450 | OBJECT-ORIENTED SOFTWARE DEVELOPMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Principle, techniques and tools of object-oriented modeling, design, implementation, and testing of large-scale software systems. Topics include design patterns, application frameworks, architectural design, and the applications in the software development process to improve the extensibility, maintainability, and reliability of software systems. PREREQUISITE(S): CSC 403.

CSC 403 is a prerequisite for this class.

SE 452 | OBJECT-ORIENTED ENTERPRISE COMPUTING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course focuses on applying object-oriented techniques in the design, development, and integration of server-side enterprise applications using technologies such as servlets, Java Server Pages, and JDBC. Topics include web applications, multi-tier architecture, model-view-controller architecture, database connectivity, and security. PREREQUISITE(S): CSC 403.

CSC 403 is a prerequisite for this class.

SE 453 | ARCHITECTURE AND FRAMEWORKS FOR DEVELOPING CLIENT APPLICATIONS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will focus on software architectures, frameworks, and techniques for developing web-based thin client applications as well as rich desktop client applications. Topics will include discussion on design and architectural patterns, such as model-view-controller pattern; survey of widely used development frameworks for building client applications, such as Struts, Java Server Face (JSF), Swing, and SWT, etc.; discussion of widely used techniques such as AJAX, evaluation of the strengths and weaknesses of these technologies for making technology decisions. Students will gain hands-on experiences in developing applications that utilizes these frameworks and techniques. Prerequisite: SE 452.

SE 452 is a prerequisite for this class.

SE 456 | ARCHITECTURE OF REAL-TIME SYSTEMS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course discusses the principles, styles, and patterns of real-time software architecture. Trade-offs and ramifications of software architecture with respect to performance, maintainability, and reusability, will be explored. The course will also investigate the design and implementation of real-time behavior and constraints for Common Design Patterns such as Observer, Visitor, and Strategy. Finally, the course will demonstrate how creation of real-time Data Driven environment allows the run-time object data to control the behavior and flow of an application. These topics will be discussed in the context of best practices in software engineering such as iterative development, testing, and continuous integration. PREREQUISITE(S): CSC 403.

CSC 403 is a prerequisite for this class.

SE 457 | SERVICE-ORIENTED ARCHITECTURE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
An in-depth study of service oriented architecture (SOA) from the business, architectural, and technology perspectives. The business perspective will explain the imperatives behind SOA and discuss the significance of SOA in industry. The architectural perspective will discuss the different architectural models of software development and contrast these with SOA. The technology perspective will provide students with the opportunity to gain the required hands-on experience to analyze, design, implement and deploy SOA solutions that will meet both functional and non-functional requirements. Major topics include software architectures in practice, SOA development lifecycle, Enterprise Service Bus, SOA analysis and design methods, Web Services, and governance. Prerequisite: SE 450 or CSC 435.

SE 450 or CSC 435 is a prerequisite for this class.

SE 459 | AGILE SOFTWARE DEVELOPMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course focuses on the fundamentals, principles, tools, and techniques in agile software development. Students will gain hands-on experiences in agile software development through projects dealing with various aspects of agile development, including planning, construction, testing, and integration. Students will be able to effectively participate in and manage agile software development as a result of their successfully completing this course. PREREQUISITE(S): SE 450.

SE 450 is a prerequisite for this class.

SE 468 | SOFTWARE MEASUREMENT/PROJECT ESTIMATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Software metrics. Productivity, effort and defect models. Software cost estimation. PREREQUISITE(S): IT 403 and (SE430 or SE450)
IT 403 and (SE 430 or SE 450) are prerequisites for this class.

SE 475 | MANAGING GLOBALLY DISTRIBUTED SOFTWARE DEVELOPMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Managing Globally Distributed Software Development (GDSD) for IT projects. Issues associated with time zone differences, infrastructure support, geographical dispersion, and lack of centralized communication. The course will focus on the management, implementation and deployment of software within the context of outsourced, distributed development, and insourced projects. Additional topics include strategic management issues such as justification, vetting, consulting services and partnerships. Course will include several hands-on distributed development projects. PREREQUISITE(S): CSC 403.

CSC 403 is a prerequisite for this class.
SE 450 or SE 430 or IS 430 or PM 430 is a prerequisite for this class.

SE 477 | SOFTWARE AND SYSTEMS PROJECT MANAGEMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Project Management is presented from a practitioner's view. The four basic building blocks of software project management: people, process, tools, and measurements are covered. Special emphasis is placed on professional standards such as the Project Management Book of Knowledge and IEEE Software Engineering Standards. Specific topics include Managing People, Selecting Project Tools, Leadership & Motivation, Software Development Processes, Estimation, Risk Analysis, Scheduling and Tracking, Leveraging Measurements, and Project Completion. Consideration is given to rapid development and project cultural issues. PREREQUISITE(S): Knowledge of the Software development life cycle model, for example through courses such as SE430, ECT455, IS425, MIS555 or through appropriate work experience.

SE 480 | SOFTWARE ARCHITECTURE I | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
The Software Architecture process is concerned with describing, evaluating, and designing systems at the architectural level. This course will discuss the role of architecture and the architect in the software development cycle. It will introduce architectural patterns and tactics, architecture assessment techniques, architecture driven design, and techniques for documenting architectures. The course will involve design, development, and assessment activities. PREREQUISITE(S): SE 450.

SE 481 or SE 450.

SE 482 | REQUIREMENTS ENGINEERING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Requirements Engineering (RE) plays a critical role in the software development process. This course will introduce related vocabulary, concepts, and techniques, and will examine the role of RE in software and systems engineering. The course will cover topics related to eliciting, validating, negotiating, analyzing, specifying, and managing requirements. Popular RE tools will also be introduced. Prerequisite: SE430 or SE450.

SE 491 | SOFTWARE ENGINEERING STUDIO | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Students will work in small teams to develop realistic software systems in a master-apprentice environment. The instructor will serve as a master/mentor/project leader. Students will apply knowledge and skills they have learned in previous course in solving real world problems. PREREQUISITE(S): SE 450 or SE 456.

SE 511 | PRACTICES OF GLOBAL SOFTWARE DEVELOPMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course studies the challenges and solutions for developing software in a global environment. Topics covered include strategic issues related to allocation of tasks; communication issues that arise due to distance, time zone differences, infrastructure support, geographical dispersion, and lack of information communication; coordination complexity; cultural issues, technical issues related to information and artifact sharing, and architectural design, and finally knowledge management issues. Some sections of this course will include a hands-on global development project in conjunction with teams of students at other universities, while other sections will focus on a more in-depth theoretical discussion of these issues and concepts. Prerequisite(s): SE 450 or SE 430 or IS 430 or PM 430. A student may not take both IS 540 and SE 511 for credit toward a degree.

SE 450 or SE 430 or IS 430 or PM 430 is a prerequisite for this class.

SE 525 | SOFTWARE SECURITY ARCHITECTURE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Students in this course will learn architectural patterns for integrating security into software such as web applications. Topics include: an overview of software security; integration of authentication, access control, and auditing into software; programming with symmetric-key and asymmetric-key cryptography, including key distribution and key management, use of certificates, and SSL/TLS; security mechanisms in modern runtime environments, e.g., code signing, code verification, access control, and security policies. Students will get hands-on experience designing and implementing secure software. PREREQUISITE(S): CSC 435 and SE 450.

CSC 435 and SE 450 are prerequisites for this class.

SE 526 | SOFTWARE SECURITY ASSESSMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Students in this course will learn how to conduct software security assessment to identify software vulnerabilities in software such as web applications and operating system services. Topics include: common software vulnerabilities and attack vectors; malicious payloads, including shellcode structure; and application review techniques, including fuzzing and code auditing. Students will get hands-on experience identifying vulnerabilities in software. Prerequisite(s): CSC 435.

CSC 435 is a prerequisite for this class.

SE 529 | SOFTWARE RISK MANAGEMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Identification, estimation, evaluation, planning, controlling, and monitoring of risk involved in the development, maintenance, operation and evolution of systems. PREREQUISITE(S): IT 403 and SE 430 or consent.

IT 403 and SE 430 or Consent of Instructor are prerequisites for this class.

SE 533 | SOFTWARE VALIDATION AND VERIFICATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Techniques, methods and tools for software inspection and testing. Theory and applications of formal verification of programs. Techniques and tools for automated analysis of programs. PREREQUISITE(S): SE 450. SE 450 is a prerequisite for this class.

SE 546 | SOFTWARE ARCHITECTURE AND DESIGN FOR DESKTOP APPLICATIONS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will introduce students to architecture, design and implementation issues for developing GUI-based desktop application. The goal is to understand the engineering aspect of user interface development – that is the basic software architectures and designs that govern the development of graphical user applications including patterns like the Model-View-Controller and its derivatives, event-driven design, as well as addressing concurrency, performance, caching, and software packaging and distribution issues. The course will also provide an in depth exposure to the toolkits available in Java. Examples include JFC/Swing, JMF, JAF. Prerequisite(s): SE 450.

SE 450 is a prerequisite for this class.

SE 545 | SOFTWARE SECURITY ARCHITECTURE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Advanced methods and techniques in software specification, modeling, and model-driven development. Topics include approaches to software specification and modeling, formal specification languages, techniques for structural and behavioral modeling of software systems, and tools for analysis and transformation of software systems. PREREQUISITE(S): SE 430 or SE 450.
SE 554 | ENTERPRISE COMPONENT ARCHITECTURE | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course will focus on object-oriented component architectures for enterprise applications. Topics include: Enterprise Java Beans (EJBJava Naming and Directory Interfaces (JNDI), Java Mail and Messaging Services. PREREQUISITE(S): SE 450 or SE 452.
SE 450 or SE 452 is a prerequisite for this class.

SE 556 | ADVANCED ARCHITECTURE OF COMPUTER GAMES | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course discusses the advanced issues in software architecture and the engineering of computer games. The topics include engineering and programming issues in graphics, scene management, kinematics, simulation, collision detection. Software design patterns and frameworks for computer games. Project management, configuration management, and quality assurance of computer game development projects. PREREQUISITE(S): SE 456 and CSC 407.
SE 456 and CSC 407 are prerequisites for this class.

SE 560 | STRUCTURED DOCUMENT INTERCHANGE AND PROCESSING | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Document and data interchange among different applications is an extremely important aspect of software application development. This course will focus on emerging technologies associated with the Extensible Markup Language (XML), such as the Document Object Model (DOM), the Simple API for XML (SAX), the XML Stylesheet Language (XSL) and Transformation Language (XSLT), and XML Schema. Applications of these technologies will be discussed in conjunction with tools and techniques for parsing, transforming, and manipulating documents. PREREQUISITE(S): SE 450 OR (CSC 301 and SE 430)
SE 450 or (CSC 301 and SE 430) is a prerequisite for this class.

SE 579 | ANALYTICS AND DATA MINING IN SOFTWARE ENGINEERING | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course discusses the application of selected statistical analysis, data mining, and machine learning techniques to the area of Software Engineering. These techniques are used for purposes as varied as stakeholder analysis, mining software repositories, trace retrieval, bug prediction, recommender systems in Software Engineering domains, and software process improvement techniques. The course demonstrates how these techniques can be used to enhance project management and other software engineering activities in software intensive systems and provides students with hands-on experience using them on real project data. (No prior knowledge of data mining and knowledge management is assumed.) PREREQUISITE(S): SE 450.
SE 450 is a prerequisite for this class.

SE 581 | SOFTWARE ARCHITECTURE II | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
In this second Software Architecture course, students will be exposed to case studies of real-world software architectures for which reliability, performance, availability, scalability and other such concerns drive the architectural design. Students will gain hands-on practice in reverse engineering, designing, and assessing existing systems including performance testing. Student will build on their prior knowledge to design complex systems in principled and systematic ways. The course will involve designing and implementing a simulated high scalability, high reliability system. PREREQUISITE(S): SE 480.

SE 582 | SOFTWARE-INTENSIVE SYSTEMS ENGINEERING AND MANAGEMENT | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course will introduce students to fundamental principles of systems engineering for large and complex software intensive systems. The course will include a study of systems engineering failures, and will cover topics related to problem frames; systems level modeling of hardware and software components, concept definition, design tradeoffs, risk assessment, interface definition and related systems engineering activities. Additional topics such as product line development, ultra-large scale systems, and engineering of safety critical systems will also be covered. PREREQUISITE(S): (SE 477 or PM 430 or IS 430) and (SE 430 or SE 482 or IS 485)
(SE 477 or PM 430 or IS 430) and (SE 430 or SE 482 or IS 485) are prerequisites for this class.

SE 591 | SOFTWARE ENGINEERING STUDIO II | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This is the continuation of SE 491. SE 491 and 591 must be taken as a sequence in two consecutive quarters. PREREQUISITE(S): SE 491.
SE 491 is a prerequisite for this class.

SE 598 | TOPICS IN SOFTWARE ENGINEERING | 1-4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Specific topics will be selected by the instructor and may vary with each quarter. PREREQUISITE(S): For specific prerequisites, see syllabus or consult course instructor. (variable credit)

SE 599 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 1-8 quarter hours (Graduate)
Independent study supervised by an instructor. Independent study form required. Can be repeated for credit. Variable Credit. PREREQUISITE(S): None. (variable credit)

SE 690 | RESEARCH SEMINAR | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Readings and discussion on current research topics. Students may register for this course no more than three times. PREREQUISITE(S): Consent of the instructor.

SE 691 | SOFTWARE ENGINEERING STUDIO II | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This is the continuation of SE 491. SE 491 and 591 must be taken as a sequence in two consecutive quarters. PREREQUISITE(S): SE 491.

SE 695 | MASTER'S RESEARCH | 1-4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Students interested in a more in-depth study of a particular area will register for this course and work with a faculty member (not necessarily their academic advisor) on a research project. The work involved may include system development, empirical studies, or theoretical work. 4 credit hours of CSC 695 replaces one 500-level elective course in student's degree program. This course can be taken for 1-4 credit hours for up 8 credit-hours. PREREQUISITE(S): Consent of research advisor. Independent study form required. Students must successfully complete the foundation courses prior to their first enrollment in CSC 695. (variable credit)
SE 696 | MASTER'S PROJECT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
(4 credit hours) Students may register for this course only after their advisor has approved a written proposal for their project. Independent study form required. PREREQUISITE(S): Consent of advisor.

SE 698 | MASTER'S THESIS | 0 quarter hour
(Graduate)
A student who has made an original contribution to the area (typically through 8 credit-hours' worth of work done in CSC 695, but not necessarily) may choose to complete a Master's Thesis. The student and the student's research advisor form a Master's Thesis Committee. The student submits to the committee a thesis detailing the original results of the research project. After a public defense, the committee will decide whether to accept the thesis. In that case, the student will be allowed to register for this course and the transcript will show the thesis title as the course topic. PREREQUISITE(S): Successful defense of a Master's Thesis. (0 credit hours)

SE 699 | SOFTWARE ENGINEERING RESEARCH CONTINUATION | 1 quarter hour
(Graduate)
Students register for continuation credit after registering for SE 698 in each subsequent quarter until they complete their thesis. Students who fail to do so will have to reregister for SE 698 to meet the requirement for completing that course. PREREQUISITE(S): SE 698. (0 credit hours)

Sound Recording Technology (REC)

REC 200 | INTRODUCTION TO SOUND RECORDING TECHNOLOGY | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Introductory course to acquaint students with concepts and techniques of sound recording technology. Open to all music students and required for SRT majors. (2 quarter hours)
Status as an Undergraduate Music student or a Music Recording Minor student is a prerequisite for this class.

REC 201 | RECORDING TECHNOLOGY I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Basic studies in audio engineering with technological application in recording studio settings. Emphasis on acoustics, microphones, and microphone techniques. This is part of a two-year sequence of courses for sound recording technology majors.
Status as a Sound Recording Technology student is a prerequisite for this class.

REC 202 | RECORDING TECHNOLOGY II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Basic studies in audio engineering with technological application in recording studio settings. Emphasis on principles of digital recording and editing. This is part of a two-year sequence of courses for sound recording technology majors.
REC 201 and status as a Sound Recording Technology student is a prerequisite for this class.

REC 203 | RECORDING TECHNOLOGY III | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Basic studies in audio engineering with technological application in recording studio settings. Emphasis analog recording and signal processing. This is part of a two-year sequence of courses for sound recording technology majors.
REC 202 and status as a Sound Recording Technology student is a prerequisite for this class.

REC 204 | BASICS OF LIVE SOUND | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is designed to provide an overview of the technology and applications of the tools used in the field of live sound reinforcement. Topics will include: basic electronics, troubleshooting and equipment repair, audio and network cables and protocols, wireless audio, small and large venue sound integration and installation, monitor and sound system tuning, as well as analog and digital consoles. This course is built on prior material such as REC 200, which covers the basics of microphones, signal flow, and sound generation. (2 quarter hours)
Status as an Undergraduate Music student is a prerequisite for this class.

REC 209 | ELECTRONICS FOR MUSICIANS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is designed to teach practical skills in analog electronics. Some basic theory will be outlined using as little mathematics as possible. Hands-on skills to be covered include soldering, testing, and modifying solid state circuitry.
Status as an Undergraduate Music student or a Music Recording Minor student is a prerequisite for this class.

REC 216 | PRO TOOLS AND THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE RECORDING STUDIO | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The goal of this course is to transform students from casual listeners of recorded music into educated critical analysts. Students will study the history and development of recording technology and recording studios. Lab exercises will teach the basics of recording and signal processing using Digidesign Pro Tools software. Arts and Literature.

REC 217 | EDM AND THE ART OF ELECTRONIC MUSIC | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The course will trace the genesis of contemporary electronic dance music and explore the interrelationships between popular electronic music styles and the electroacoustic music of the twentieth and twenty-first centuries. Students will develop listening skills and key musical vocabulary to enable them to analyze, interpret and respond to historically significant works from a diverse body of relevant genres.

REC 300 | CONTEMPORARY FILM SCORING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Undergraduate level course designed for Music, CDM, Communication, and Theater majors who want an understanding of film music and the mechanics of scoring to picture. It will cover the basics of spotting films, writing with a click track, and utilizing synthesizers and samplers to realize film music.
Status as Undergraduate Music student, Undergraduate Theatre student, Undergraduate Communication student or Undergraduate CDM student is a prerequisite for this class.

REC 301 | RECORDING TECHNOLOGY IV | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Basic studies in audio engineering with technological application in recording studio settings. Emphasis on consoles and audio for film. This is part of a two-year sequence of courses for sound recording technology majors. COREQUISITE(S): REC 304.
REC 203 and status as a Sound Recording Technology student is a prerequisite for this class.
In-depth investigation of a topic in sound recording technology.

Status as a Sound Recording Technology student is a prerequisite for this class.

REC 302 | RECORDING TECHNOLOGY V | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Basic studies in audio engineering with technological application in recording studio settings. Emphasis on music production and the capstone audio/video sound design project. This is part of a two-year sequence of courses for sound recording technology majors. COREQUISITE(S): REC 305.
REC 301 and status as a Sound Recording Technology student is a prerequisite for this class.

REC 303 | RECORDING TECHNOLOGY VI | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Basic studies in audio engineering with technological application in recording studio settings. Emphasis on surround sound mixing, and DVD authoring. This is part of a two-year sequence of courses for sound recording technology majors. COREQUISITE(S): REC 306.
REC 302 and status as a Sound Recording Technology student is a prerequisite for this class.

REC 304 | SOUND PRACTICUM I | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Practical experience with technological applications in the recording studio. CO-REQUISITE(S): REC 301. (2 quarter hours)
REC 203 and status as a Sound Recording Technology student is a prerequisite for this class.

REC 305 | SOUND PRACTICUM II | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Practical experience with technological applications in the recording studio. COREQUISITE(S): REC 302. (2 quarter hours)
REC 304 and status as a Sound Recording Technology student is a prerequisite and REC 203 is a corequisite for this class.

REC 306 | SOUND PRACTICUM III | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Practical experience with technological applications in the recording studio. COREQUISITE(S): REC 303. (2 quarter hours)
REC 305 and status as a Sound Recording Technology student is a prerequisite and REC 302 is a corequisite for this class.

REC 307 | COMMERCIAL MUSIC PRODUCTION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
For students with a music theory background who want to learn how to realize music using digital sequencing and sampling. This course will focus on creating tracks in pop genres for film, soundtracks, video games, and commercials.
Status as an Undergraduate Music student or a Music Recording Minor student is a prerequisite for this class.

REC 308 | AUDIO FOR BROADCAST | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is designed to teach production audio, which encompasses studio and remote broadcast scenarios including broadcast roles, facility setups and audio signal flows, as well as ENG and field audio techniques. This course will also teach post-production audio, where students will learn the tools and techniques involved in finishing audio for a television interview show, a documentary film, as well as spatial audio for 360-degree video and VR.
Status as an Undergraduate Music student or a Music Recording Minor student is a prerequisite for this class.

REC 360 | TOPICS IN SOUND RECORDING TECHNOLOGY | 2-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In-depth investigation of a topic in sound recording technology.

REC 398 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 1-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Independent Study (2 quarter hours)
Status as a Sound Recording Technology student is a prerequisite for this class.

Spanish (SPN)

SPN 101 | BASIC SPANISH I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This is the first course in a three-course introductory sequence that as a whole constitutes "first year college Spanish" (SPN 101, SPN 102, and SPN 103). The course has three main goals: to develop some basic knowledge of Spanish as a foreign language, to develop some communicative skills in that language, and to attain some basic knowledge of the cultures of the Spanish-speaking world and learn some cultural differences between the U.S. and these cultures. This course is intended for students who have never taken a Spanish class before or who score 1-30 on the Spanish placement exam. This course is NOT appropriate for students who have non-classroom exposure to Spanish, such as from family or in the community; these students should enroll in a heritage Spanish course (SPN 114, 115, 200, or 205-207).

SPN 101S | BASIC SPANISH I FOR SUMMER | 6 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
(Covers the equivalent of SPN 101 and the first half of SPN 102.) The first half of beginning Spanish. Listening to, speaking, reading, and writing Spanish in a cultural context for the beginning student.

SPN 102 | BASIC SPANISH II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This is the second course in a three-course introductory sequence that as a whole constitutes "first year college Spanish" (SPN 101, SPN 102, and SPN 103). The course has various goals. The first one is to develop some basic communicative skills in Spanish as a second language. These include but are not limited to the following sample abilities: talking about pastimes and leisure activities, talking about activities in the past, describing typical household chores, using expressions associated with technology, and giving instructions. This course is intended for students who have taken SPN 101 at DePaul (or equivalent) or who score 31-45 on the Spanish placement exam. This course is NOT appropriate for students who have non-classroom exposure to Spanish, such as from family or in the community; these students should enroll in a heritage Spanish course (SPN 114, 115, 200, or 205-207).

SPN 103 | BASIC SPANISH III | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This is the third course in a three-course introductory sequence that as a whole constitutes "first year college Spanish" (SPN 101, SPN 102, and SPN 103). The course has several goals. The first one is to develop some basic communicative skills in Spanish as a second language. These include but are not limited to the following sample abilities: taking about feelings and mood changes, talking about what people do and for each other, expressing wishes and desires, narrating present and past actions, describing current events, using vocabulary related to professions and daily life. This course is intended for students who have taken SPN 102 at DePaul (or equivalent) or who score 46-55 on the Spanish placement exam. This course is NOT appropriate for students who have non-classroom exposure to Spanish, such as from family or in the community; these students should enroll in a heritage Spanish course (SPN 114, 115, 200, or 205-207).
SPN 103S | BASIC SPANISH III FOR SUMMER | 6 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
(Covers the equivalent of the second half of SPN 102 and all of SPN 103.)
The second half of beginning Spanish. Further work on the basic elements of the Spanish language, spoken as well as written, with due regard to the cultural context of Spanish expression.

SPN 104 | INTERMEDIATE SPANISH I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This is the first course of the sequence of Intermediate Spanish
(SPN 104, SPN 105, and SPN 106). The course follows a content-based approach where students learn about Hispanic culture through interaction and communication. The fundamental language learning goal of this course is to help students express, interpret, and negotiate meaning in context. This course is intended for students who have taken SPN 103 at DePaul (or equivalent), or who score 56-65 on the Spanish placement exam. This course is NOT appropriate for students who have non-classroom exposure to Spanish, such as from family or in the community; these students should enroll in a heritage Spanish course (SPN 114, 115, 200, or 205-207). SPN 104, 114, and 124 are equivalent courses. Students who place into SPN 104 but are interested in service learning should consider registering for SPN 124, which is the same level but with a service-learning component.

SPN 105 | INTERMEDIATE SPANISH II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This is the second course of the sequence of Intermediate Spanish
(SPN 104, SPN 105, and SPN 106). The course follows a content-
based approach where students learn about Hispanic culture through interaction and communication. The fundamental language learning goal of this course is to help students express, interpret, and negotiate meaning in context. This course is intended for students who have taken SPN 104 at DePaul (or equivalent), or who score 66-74 on the Spanish placement exam. This course is NOT appropriate for students who have non-classroom exposure to Spanish, such as from family or in the community; these students should enroll in a heritage Spanish course (SPN 114, 115, 200, or 205-207). SPN 105, 115, and 125 are equivalent courses. Students who place into SPN 105 but are interested in service learning should consider registering for SPN 125, which is the same level but with a service-learning component.

SPN 106 | INTERMEDIATE SPANISH III | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This is the third course in the sequence of Intermediate Spanish
(SPN 104, SPN 105, and SPN 106). The course follows a content-
based approach where students learn about Hispanic culture through interaction and communication. The fundamental language learning goal of this course is to help students express, interpret, and negotiate meaning in context. This course is intended for students who have taken SPN 105 at DePaul (or equivalent), or who score 75-95 on the Spanish placement exam. This course is NOT appropriate for students who have non-classroom exposure to Spanish, such as from family or in the community; these students should enroll in a heritage Spanish course (SPN 114, 115, 200, or 205-207). SPN 106 and 126 are equivalent courses. Students who place into SPN 106 but are interested in service learning should consider registering for SPN 126, which is the same level but with a service-learning component.

SPN 114 | INTERMEDIATE SPANISH FOR HERITAGE SPEAKERS I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This is the first course of Intermediate Spanish for Heritage Speakers
(SPN 114, 115 and 116) a combined basic and intermediate sequence for home-background speakers of Spanish who have had little or no previous formal study of the language. The course will help students further develop their communication skills while increasing the ability to improve their reading, speaking, listening, and writing skills as they explore and foster an appreciation of the Latino culture and heritage.

SPN 115 | INTERMEDIATE SPANISH FOR HERITAGE SPEAKERS II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This is the second course of Intermediate Spanish for Heritage Speakers
(SPN 114, 115 and 116) a combined basic and intermediate sequence
for home-background speakers of Spanish who have had little or no previous formal study of the language. The course will help students further develop their communication skills while increasing the ability to improve their reading, speaking, listening, and writing skills as they explore and foster an appreciation of the Latino culture and heritage.

SPN 116 | INTERMEDIATE SPANISH FOR HERITAGE SPEAKERS III | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This is the third course of Intermediate Spanish for Heritage Speakers
(SPN 114, 115 and 116) a combined basic and intermediate sequence
for home-background speakers of Spanish who have had little or no previous formal study of the language. The course will help students further develop their communication skills while increasing the ability to improve their reading, speaking, listening, and writing skills as they explore and foster an appreciation of the Latino culture and heritage.

SPN 124 | INTERMEDIATE SPANISH I: SERVICE LEARNING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is the service–earning version of SPN 104, the first course of the sequence of Intermediate Spanish. It covers all the same material but offers students the unique opportunity to enhance knowledge of the Spanish-speaking world both INSIDE and OUTSIDE the classroom.
Students will spend 25 hours per quarter (3 hours/per week) working with one of several organizations in Chicago’s Latino communities. These sites mostly serve new immigrants from Mexico and Central America who are in the process of integrating into new cultural environments. By participating in a language exchange on a weekly basis, the student will be an active learner and teacher. This course is intended for students who have taken SPN 103 at DePaul (or equivalent), or who score 56-65 on the Spanish placement exam. This course is NOT appropriate for students who have non-classroom exposure to Spanish, such as from family or in the community; these students should enroll in a heritage Spanish course (SPN 114, 115, 200, or 205-207). SPN 104, 114, and 124 are equivalent courses.
SPN 125 | INTERMEDIATE SPANISH II: SERVICE LEARNING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is the service-learning version of SPN 105, the second course of the sequence of Intermediate Spanish. It covers all the same material but offers students the unique opportunity to enhance knowledge of the Spanish-speaking world both INSIDE and OUTSIDE the classroom. Students will spend 25 hours per quarter (3 hours/week) working with one of several organizations in Chicago’s Latino communities. These sites mostly serve new immigrants from Mexico and Central America who are in the process of integrating into new cultural environments. By participating in a language exchange on a weekly basis, the student will be an active learner and teacher. This course is intended for students who have taken SPN 104 at DePaul (or equivalent), or who score 66-74 on the Spanish placement exam. This course is NOT appropriate for students who have non-classroom exposure to Spanish, such as from family or in the community, these students should enroll in a heritage Spanish course (SPN 114, 115, 200, or 205-207). SPN 105, 115, and 125 are equivalent courses.

SPN 126 | INTERMEDIATE SPANISH III: SERVICE LEARNING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is the service-learning version of SPN 106, the third course of the sequence of Intermediate Spanish. It covers all the same material but offers students the unique opportunity to enhance knowledge of the Spanish-speaking world both INSIDE and OUTSIDE the classroom. Students will spend 25 hours per quarter (3 hours/week) working with one of several organizations in Chicago’s Latino communities. These sites mostly serve new immigrants from Mexico and Central America who are in the process of integrating into new cultural environments. By participating in a language exchange on a weekly basis, the student will be an active learner and teacher. This course is intended for students who have taken SPN 105 at DePaul (or equivalent), or who score 75-95 on the Spanish placement exam. This course is NOT appropriate for students who have non-classroom exposure to Spanish, such as from family or in the community, these students should enroll in a heritage Spanish course (SPN 114, 115, 200, or 205-207). SPN 106 and 126 are equivalent courses.

SPN 130 | MOLILSAP STUDY ABROAD | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is specially designed to complement the Modern Language Introductory Languages Study Abroad programs, linked to the third quarter of the first year language program. The course will be taught abroad.

SPN 146 | INTERMEDIATE MEDICAL SPANISH | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course teaches students at the intermediate level the fundamentals of practical Spanish usage in medical situations involving Spanish-speaking patients in the U.S. Its goal is to facilitate intake of basic information and to set a foundation toward linguistic competence in Spanish with a focus on medical terminology. Cultural competence is an integral objective in language acquisition and is vital in our current health care setting. It will therefore inform all learning skills: listening, speaking, reading, and writing. In this course, particular attention will be given to cultural understanding, speaking, and listening skills.

SPN 197 | SPECIAL TOPICS IN SPANISH | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
See schedule for current offerings.

SPN 198 | STUDY ABROAD | 1-8 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Variable credit.

SPN 199 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 1-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Variable credit.

SPN 200 | TRANSITIONAL SPANISH FOR HERITAGE SPEAKERS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course provides transitional Spanish for intermediate Heritage Learners whose primary goal is to increase basic communication in the language and an expanded understanding of Hispanic culture. Listening, speaking, reading and writing skills continue to be developed with an emphasis on conversation, facilitated by the study of vocabulary and structure, exciting readings and films.

SPN 201 | ADVANCED GRAMMAR AND COMMUNICATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In this class students will work toward improving their speaking, listening, reading, and writing skills in Spanish at the advanced level as they explore various topics related to the history and cultures of the Spanish-speaking world. Students will also focus on four major grammar points that typically present a challenge for students of Spanish as a foreign language: the distinction between ser and estar, verb tense, verb aspect (preterite/imperfect), and verb mood (indicative/subjunctive). SPN 106 (or equivalent, including placement test or permission of instructor) is recommended. Heritage learners of Spanish at this level should take SPN 205 instead of SPN 201.

SPN 202 | ADVANCED COMPOSITION AND COMMUNICATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Students will work on improving their speaking, listening, reading, and writing skills in Spanish at the advanced level as they explore various topics related to the history and cultures of the Spanish-speaking world. Students will focus a little more, however, on written expression. Readings for the class will serve as models for various types of writing (primarily exposition and argumentation), and students will analyze the structure of these models as well as discuss their content. The course will also emphasize spelling, punctuation, and the effective use of the dictionary. SPN 106 (or equivalent, including placement test or permission of instructor) is recommended. Heritage learners of Spanish at this level should take SPN 206 instead of SPN 202.

SPN 203 | ADVANCED CONVERSATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will focus on improving the student’s oral skills in Spanish through intensive practice. Students will discuss a wide range of topics, and they will practice conversational strategies for a variety of situations. Upon completing this course, students should be able to do the following: 1) talk about the past in a coherent and fairly detailed manner; 2) deal effectively with unanticipated complications (e.g., a lost ticket); 3) adapt to formal and informal situations; 4) speak broadly on topics of personal interest; and 5) make themselves easily understood by Spanish speakers who are unaccustomed to dealing with non-native speakers. Class preparation will include readings (from various genres) and films. SPN 106 (or equivalent, including placement test or permission of instructor) is recommended. Heritage learners of Spanish at this level should take SPN 207 instead of SPN 203.

SPN 339 | THE GENERATION OF 1927 | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This advanced course examines the peninsular Spanish "Generation of 1927" in considerable depth with emphasis on the best known literary figure in the group, Federico Garcia Lorca. (Literature category #2: Spanish literature from the Enlightenment to the present). One of the following courses recommended: SPN 201, SPN 202, SPN 205 or SPN 206 (or equivalent or permission of instructor).

SPN 340 | SPANISH CREATIVE WRITING WORKSHOP | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This advanced course seeks to reinforce and further develop the student’s expression in Spanish by exploring different techniques in writing poetry and fiction. After approaching some basic concepts involved in the creative writing process, and with the constant practice of writing, students will be able to create texts in the style of preference. They will also gain more confidence with linguistics abilities. This class will be conducted in a workshop format, consisting of in-class writing exercises, workshop-like peer-sharing of texts, and discussions about the creative process. One of the following courses recommended: SPN 201, SPN 202, SPN 205 or SPN 206 (or equivalent or permission of instructor).

SPN 351 | SPANISH IN THE U.S. | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Spanish is the second most widely spoken language in the United States; it has been spoken in this country longer than English has. This course is an introduction to the varieties of Spanish spoken in the US. Students will examine the evolution of the phonological, grammatical, and lexical linguistic system of the Spanish of US Latino/a communities. Students will also explore how sociolinguistic concepts such as bilingualism, diglossia, code-switching, linguistic variation, linguistic change, standard vs. non-prestigious varieties, and language attitudes manifest in the US Spanish context. This course is intended to familiarize the students with issues of language use in social context. Students will discuss results of research on the relationship between language and society in US Spanish-speaking communities. They will become familiar with sociolinguistic concepts. Students also acquire experience in carrying out sociolinguistic research. One of the following courses recommended: SPN 201, SPN 202, SPN 205 or SPN 206 (or equivalent or permission of instructor).
SPN 352 | SPANISH PHONOLOGY AND PHONETICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This is an introductory course on the nature and structure of the sound system of the Spanish language. This course is offered to students who, having studied the language for at least two years, need a solid grounding of Spanish phonology and—in the case of non-native speakers of Spanish—a systematic practice of correct pronunciation patterns. It is also a requirement for Spanish majors. After a thorough study of the Spanish sound system, students will explore some related topics such as Spanish orthography, the history of the Spanish language, its place among Romance, Iberian, and American languages, and its rich dialectal variation. Lectures and discussions will be based on the required textbook and on additional materials (both written and audio). This class will be conducted in Spanish. One of the following courses recommended: SPN 201, SPN 202, SPN 205 or SPN 206 (or equivalent or permission of instructor).

SPN 353 | THE STRUCTURE OF SPANISH | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is an introduction to the scientific study of the structure of language, with a special emphasis on Spanish. It examines the structure of sentences (syntax), the formation of words (morphology), and the construction of meaning (semantics/pragmatics) in Spanish, and in contrast to English and other languages. One of the following courses recommended: SPN 201, SPN 202, SPN 205 or SPN 206 (or equivalent or permission of instructor).

SPN 354 | SPANISH SOCIO-LINGUISTICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is an introduction to the study of the relationship between language and society through the Spanish varieties in the Spanish-speaking world. Students will examine and revise ideologies, attitudes and beliefs about the Spanish language to understand this relationship. To lead students to examine their own beliefs and attitudes about language, they will be equipped with methods of linguistic analyses and strategies to find the social in the linguistic and the linguistic in the social from a critical perspective. One of the following courses recommended: SPN 201, SPN 202, SPN 205 or SPN 206 (or equivalent or permission of instructor).

SPN 355 | THE HISTORY OF THE SPANISH LANGUAGE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is a journey through the history of the Spanish language from Latin to the present day. One of the following courses recommended: SPN 201, SPN 202, SPN 205 or SPN 206 (or equivalent or permission of instructor).

SPN 356 | BILINGUALISM IN THE SPANISH-SPEAKING WORLD | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course examines bilingualism in the Spanish-speaking world in society and in individuals. At the societal level, it discusses the distribution of languages in contact with Spanish throughout the world and the social and political factors that affect language use, acquisition and maintenance, including language policy and bilingual education. At the individual level, it discusses first and second language acquisition and bilingual language processing and use, including code-switching and other linguistic features resulting from language contact. This class will be conducted in Spanish. One of the following courses recommended: SPN 201, SPN 202, SPN 205 or SPN 206 (or equivalent or permission of instructor).

SPN 370 | LATIN AMERICAN CIVILIZATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The course will explore the politics, social structures, traditions, artistic movements and historical periods of Latin America. The scope of the course covers the main pre-Columbian civilizations, the time of the Spanish discovery and colonization, the rise of new nationalities and their development, especially in relation to the United States and the emerging globalized world. One of the following courses recommended: SPN 201, SPN 202, SPN 205 or SPN 206 (or equivalent or permission of instructor).

SPN 371 | CULTURAL DIVERSITY AND LEGACIES THROUGH FILM | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course explores Latin American, Latino and/or Peninsular cultures which grapple with various historical, socio-economic and political issues through film. Throughout the course, students will question the construction of individual and collective identities in film, focusing on the intersections of cultural factors such as gender, race and ethnicity, social class, and language, among others. Students will also focus on the ideological substructures involved in the shaping and conforming of those identities by cultural institutions and social systems. Students will also learn vocabulary and techniques for analyzing the formal aspects of film as well as film narrative. One of the following courses recommended: SPN 201, SPN 202, SPN 205 or SPN 206 (or equivalent or permission of instructor).

SPN 372 | LITERATURE OF THE DOMINICAN REPUBLIC | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This advanced course will explore cultural diversity and the Dominican Republic political, gender and ethnic visions through poetry. Through poetic class experience students will decode culture and society in the Caribbean and U.S. Dominican Latino communities. Students will focus on the following issues: political representations of identity; representations of gender and the cultural readings of "machismo"; the role of art and other forms of cultural expression in shaping identity; cultural criticism of poems as a way to understand culture and the politics of marginality and forms of political mobilization. Literature category #4 (Latin American literature from Modernism to present). One of the following courses recommended: SPN 201, SPN 202, SPN 205 or SPN 206 (or equivalent or permission of instructor).

SPN 373 | AFRO-HISPANIC LITERATURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course in contemporary literature will seek to determine what distinguishes the Afro-Hispanic novel, short story, drama or poetry from other works in these genres written in Spanish. Students will read original works in order to analyze how the use of language, imagery and narrative voice reflect the experience of people of African descent in the Spanish-speaking world as seen (or heard) in the text and context of these works. In addition, students will explore how race, class, politics and culture interact and find expression in Afro-Hispanic literature. (Literature category #2: Spanish literature from the Enlightenment to the present or Literature category #4: Latin America from Modernism to the present). One of the following courses recommended: SPN 201, SPN 202, SPN 205 or SPN 206 (or equivalent or permission of instructor).
SPN 374 | LITERATURE OF THE CONQUEST | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This advanced course in Latin American literature explores the early encounters between Europe and the Americas. Students will analyze letters, reports, histories, and political tracts from European, Amerindian, and Mestizo sources. Students will also consider some visual documents, such as images from the Lienzo de Tlaxcala and early maps. Typical areas of focus include the initial contact (Columbus), Mexico (Cortes, Diaz del Castillo, the Florentine Codex), Peru (Xerez, “El Inca” Garcilaso, Guaman Poma de Ayala), and the sixteenth-century debates over the wars of conquest (Las Casas, Sepulveda). Topics include the role of these texts as instruments of empire, strategies of representation, strategies of resistance to imperialism, the role of women in the conquest, debates over what constitutes a “just” war, and the relevance of these texts for modern Latin American identities. (Literature category #3: Latin American literature from origins through Romanticism). One of the following courses recommended: SPN 201, SPN 202, SPN 205 or SPN 206 (or equivalent or permission of instructor).

SPN 375 | LATIN AMERICAN LITERATURE FROM INDEPENDENCE TO MODERNISM | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This advanced course in Spanish literature will introduce students to the most important literary movements in Hispanic American countries, beginning with the wars of independence from Spain until the last part of 19th century. Special attention will be given to authors such as Jose Marti, Jorge Issacs, Andres Bello and Ruben Dario, among others. (Literature category #3: Latin American literature from origins through Romanticism). One of the following courses recommended: SPN 201, SPN 202, SPN 205 or SPN 206 (or equivalent or permission of instructor).

SPN 376 | SOR JUANA INES DE LA CRUZ | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This advanced course in literature will explore the main works of the most influential Mexican poet of the Colonial period, Sor Juana Ines de la Cruz (1648-1695). One of the major themes in Sor Juana's work is the right of women to education. Sor Juana wrote poetry, plays, and essays in seventeenth-century Mexico, a society in which women's intellectual inquiry and access to knowledge was an unsafe endeavor and controlled by patriarchal hierarchies. Students will examine the relationship between politics, gender and writing in the context of the historical period, and analyze the spaces and borders occupied and visited by Sor Juana's lyric, ludic, astronomical, polemical, theatrical, theological, cosmological, culinary, colonial, and criollo writings. (Literature category #3: Latin American literature from origins through Romanticism). One of the following courses recommended: SPN 201, SPN 202, SPN 205 or SPN 206 (or equivalent or permission of instructor).

SPN 377 | PERUVIAN REALITIES IN A MULTICULTURAL SOCIETY: HISTORY, CULTURE, POLITICS, VIOLENCE & SOCIAL JUSTICE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This interdisciplinary course will introduce students to the history, culture, politics, and general life of the peoples of Peru. Through an exploration of a vast array of interdisciplinary readings, visual arts and films, students will gain a deep understanding of Peru's history from its extraordinary pre-Columbian civilizations to its citizens' twenty-first century post civil war struggles to achieve dignity and justice in a multicultural, multilingual and multiethnic nation where Andean, Amazonian, African, Asian and European traditions meet. As a consequence of immense economic and social inequalities, Peru has a long history of violence that resulted in an internal war that ended recently. Particular attention will be given to contemporary developments in terms of the interaction between culture and politics. (Literature category #3: Latin American literature from origins through Romanticism or Literature category #4 (Latin American literature from Modernism to present). One of the following courses recommended: SPN 201, SPN 202, SPN 205 or SPN 206 (or equivalent or permission of instructor).

SPN 378 | FOUNDATIONAL FICTIONS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This advanced course in Latin American literature explores the relationship of national consolidation and romantic novels. This course is based on the reading, discussion and critique of major representative “Foundational Fictions” in 19th-century Latin American literature. Students will examine how the construction of gender and race in these novels portrays the quest to forge new national identities. At the same time, students will analyze how the novels use their characters’ romantic relationships to suggest their nation’s political relationships, and thus contribute to the discourse on building the new societies that would replace Spain’s colonial empire and serve as a prototype for the modern Latin American state. (Literature category #3: Latin American literature from origins through Romanticism). One of the following courses recommended: SPN 201, SPN 202, SPN 205 or SPN 206 (or equivalent or permission of instructor).

SPN 391 | SOCIOLINGUISTICS OF HERITAGE LANGUAGE LITERACY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A heritage language learner has been described as "a student who is raised in a home where a non-English language is spoken, who speaks or merely understands the heritage language, and who is to some degree bilingual in English and the heritage language" (Valdes 2000:1). It is well-documented that for such students, literacy in the heritage language is often lost within just one or two generations. In this third course of DePaul's series on Latino Literacy, students will identify the prominent sociolinguistic issues that intersect with heritage language literacy. Through the reading of selected bibliography and guided reflections on both personal and service learning experiences, each student will arrive at a personalized assessment of the key topics affecting heritage language literacy. Possible topics include language socialization, language ideology and identities, and issues related to language contact with English such as code-switching and language shift/loss. One of the following courses recommended: SPN 201, SPN 202, SPN 205 or SPN 206 (or equivalent or permission of instructor).
SPN 392 | TRANSNATIONALISM AND SOCIAL JUSTICE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course explores the overarching theme of violence across different Latin American social realities. This course uses an interdisciplinary approach to explore the experience of revolution and repression in contemporary Latin America. Focusing on twentieth-century literature, films and culture, students will explore the making and unmaking of revolutionary political projects and human rights issues, the construction of distinct forms of cultural resistance and the different expressions of violence. (Literature category #4: Latin America from Modernism to the present). One of the following courses recommended: SPN 201, SPN 202, SPN 205 or SPN 206 (or equivalent or permission of instructor).

SPN 393 | LATINO MEDIA AND DIGITAL CULTURE LITERACY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will explore the role and impact of the media in the Latino community, and how, in this context, Latinos view themselves and how others view them. Students will explore Latino communities’ participation as creators and consumers of popular and media culture. Students will examine media organizations and their participants in their role in shaping popular culture. Finally, students will study the various ways that Latino communities exercise cultural citizenship as a form of resistance and in their struggle for just representation in an increasingly global society. This is an upper-level undergraduate/graduate inter-disciplinary seminar that draws on readings in cultural economy, political economy, cultural studies, history and sociology. Students who choose to take the class for JYEL credit are required to do a minimum of 25 hours of service. One of the following courses recommended: SPN 201, SPN 202, SPN 205 or SPN 206 (or equivalent or permission of instructor).

SPN 394 | LATINO CULTURAL LITERACY AND COMMUNITY ENGAGEMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

SPN 413 | THE GENERATION OF 1898 | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This advanced course will focus on the key group of Spanish writers known as the Generation of 1898. These writers felt that Spain at the end of the 19th century did not measure up to European standards of modernity and progress, and that its cultural and social life was at an inferior level when compared to the leading European countries. Spain was diagnosed as having a national malaise known as “abulia”; it was a kind of national sluggishness that prevented the country from profiting from and adjusting to the rapidly changing currents of modern world civilization. The task facing the Generation of 1898 was to bring Spain up to the level of the times. Students in the course will read a number of representative works written by some of the Generation’s principal members.

SPN 433 | GOLDEN AGE THEATER | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This advanced course will introduce students to the Spanish theater of the seventeenth century, with a focus on the comedia, a new popular art form that appealed to audiences across social classes. Students will explore the development of this genre, from the innovations of Lope de Vega, who gave the comedia its versatility and mass appeal, to the late baroque drama of Sor Juana Ines de la Cruz, who adapted the form for a colonial context. Other readings include plays by Cervantes, Calderon de la Barca (La vida es sue?o), and Tirso de Molina (whose Burlador de Sevilla is the first dramatization of the ?Don Juan? legend). Students will situate these works in their cultural contexts and consider their current relevance. They will also discuss film adaptations of some of the plays. Topics include questions of class and caste, gender roles, different notions of honor, freedom, and free will, and the theatrical elements of everyday life. Class will consist primarily of discussion of the assigned readings.

SPN 434 | ADVANCED TRANSLATION IN THE PROFESSIONAL WORLD: COMMUNITY-BASED SERVICE LEARNING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This is an advanced course with practical experience designed to bring translation knowledge and skills together to produce accurate and clear translations from English into Spanish and vice versa. Students will review fundamental translation theories and applications of written texts in various disciplines. They will acquire the skills and knowledge needed to ensure contextually-accurate terminology in the preparation of translated documents. Additionally, they will maintain the standards of the ethical code formulated by the American Translators Association, (ATA) Students will be exposed to the most modern online translation technology available, computer assisted translation (CAT) tools that supplement classroom learning with user-friendly online exercises of technical vocabulary designed to reinforce translation skills. Students will participate in a Community–Based Service Learning (CBL) for 25 hours per quarter, where they will help to produce "translations in progress" for local business and non-profit organizations that require translation services. As a final project, students will create a translation portfolio, which is composed of a reflection paper of the CBL experience, translation projects, curriculum vitae, and a cover letter. SPN 106 or equivalent, including placement test or permission of instructor, is recommended. Cross-listed with SPN 334.

SPN 435 | U.S. LATINA WRITERS | 4 quarter hours

SPN 440 | SPANISH CREATIVE WRITING WORKSHOP | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This advanced course seeks to reinforce and further develop the student's expression in Spanish by exploring different techniques in writing poetry and fiction. After approaching some basic concepts involved in the creative writing process, and with the constant practice of writing, students will be able to create texts in the style of preference. They will also gain more confidence with linguistics abilities. This class will be conducted in a workshop format, consisting of in-class writing exercises, workshop-like peer-sharing of texts, and discussions about the creative process.
SPN 451 | SPANISH IN THE U.S. | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Spanish is the second most widely spoken language in the United States; it has been spoken in this country longer than English has. This course is an introduction to the varieties of Spanish spoken in the US. Students will examine the evolution of the phonological, grammatical, and lexical linguistic system of the Spanish of US Latino/a communities. Students will also explore how sociolinguistic concepts such as bilingualism, diglossia, code-switching, linguistic variation, linguistic change, standard vs. non-prestigious varieties, language attitudes, manifest in the US Spanish context. This course is intended to familiarize the students with issues of language use in social context. Students will discuss results of research on the relationship between language and society in US Spanish-speaking communities. They will become familiar with sociolinguistic concepts. Students also acquire experience in carrying out sociolinguistic research. SPN 242 strongly recommended.

SPN 452 | SPANISH PHONOLOGY AND PHONETICS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This is an introductory course on the nature and structure of the sound system of the Spanish language. This course is offered to students who, having studied the language for at least two years, need a solid grounding of Spanish phonology and--in the case of non-native speakers of Spanish--a systematic practice of correct pronunciation patterns. It is also a requirement for Spanish majors. After a thorough study of the Spanish sound system, students will explore some related topics such as Spanish orthography, the history of the Spanish language, its place among Romance, Iberian, and American languages, and its rich dialectal variation. Lectures and discussions will be based on the required textbook and on additional materials (both written and audio). This class will be conducted in Spanish.

SPN 453 | THE STRUCTURE OF SPANISH | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is an introduction to the scientific study of the structure of language, with a special emphasis on Spanish. It examines the structure of sentences (syntax), the formation of words (morphology), and the construction of meaning (semantics/pragmatics) in Spanish, and in contrast to English and other languages.

SPN 454 | SPANISH SOCIOLINGUISTICS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is an introduction to the study of the relationship between language and society through the Spanish varieties in the Spanish-speaking world. Students will examine and revise ideologies, attitudes and beliefs about the Spanish language to understand this relationship. To lead students to examine their own beliefs and attitudes about language, they will be equipped with methods of linguistic analyses and strategies to find the social in the linguistic and the linguistic in the social from a critical perspective.

SPN 455 | THE HISTORY OF THE SPANISH LANGUAGE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is a journey through the history of the Spanish language from Latin to the present day.

SPN 456 | BILINGUALISM IN THE SPANISH-SPEAKING WORLD | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course examines bilingualism in the Spanish-speaking world in society and in individuals. At the societal level, it discusses the distribution of languages in contact with Spanish throughout the world and the social and political factors that affect language use, acquisition and maintenance, including language policy and bilingual education. At the individual level, it discusses first and second language acquisition and bilingual language processing and use, including code-switching and other linguistic features resulting from language contact. This class will be conducted in Spanish. SPN 106 or equivalent, including placement test or permission of instructor, is recommended.

SPN 470 | LATIN AMERICAN CIVILIZATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
The course will explore the politics, social structures, traditions, artistic movements and historical periods of Latin America. The scope of the course covers the main pre-Columbian civilizations, the time of the Spanish discovery and colonization, the rise of new nationalities and their development, especially in relation to the United States and the emerging globalized world.

SPN 471 | CULTURAL DIVERSITY AND LEGACIES THROUGH FILM | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course explores Latin American, Latino and/or Peninsular cultures which grapple with various historical, socio-economic and political issues through film. Throughout the course, students will question the construction of individual and collective identities in film, focusing on the intersections of cultural factors such as gender, race and ethnicity, social class, and language, among others. Students will also focus on the ideological substructures involved in the shaping and conforming of those identities by cultural institutions and social systems. Students will also learn vocabulary and techniques for analyzing the formal aspects of film as well as film narrative.

SPN 472 | LITERATURE OF THE DOMINICAN REPUBLIC | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This advanced course will explore cultural diversity and the Dominican Republic political, gender and ethnic visions through poetry. Through poetic class experience students will decode culture and society in the Caribbean and U.S. Dominican Latino communities. Students will focus on the following issues: political representations of identity; representations of gender and the cultural readings of "machismo"; the role of art and other forms of cultural expression in shaping identity; cultural criticism of poems as a way to understand culture and the politics of marginality and forms of political mobilization.

SPN 473 | AFRO-HISPANIC LITERATURE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course in contemporary literature will seek to determine what distinguishes the Afro-Hispanic novel, short story, drama or poetry from other works in these genres written in Spanish. Students will read original works in order to analyze how the use of language, imagery and narrative voice reflect the experience of people of African descent in the Spanish-speaking world as seen (or heard) in the text and context of these works. In addition, students will explore how race, class, politics and culture interact and find expression in Afro-Hispanic literature.
SPN 474 | LITERATURE OF THE CONQUEST | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This advanced course in Latin American literature explores the early encounters between Europe and the Americas. Students will analyze letters, reports, histories, and political tracts from European, Amerindian, and Mestizo sources. Students will also consider some visual documents, such as images from the Lienzo de Tlaxcala and early maps. Typical areas of focus include the initial contact (Columbus), Mexico (Cortes, Diaz del Castillo, the Florentine Codex), Peru (Xerez, "El Inca" Garcilaso, Guaman Poma de Ayala), and the sixteenth-century debates over the wars of conquest (Las Casas, Sepulveda). Topics include the role of these texts as instruments of empire, strategies of representation, strategies of resistance to imperialism, the role of women in the conquest, debates over what constitutes a "just" war, and the relevance of these texts for modern Latin American identities.

SPN 475 | LATIN AMERICAN LITERATURE FROM INDEPENDENCE TO MODERNISM | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This advanced course in Spanish literature will introduce students to the most important literary movements in Hispanic American countries, beginning with the wars of independence from Spain until the last part of 19th century. Special attention will be given to authors such as Jose Marti, Jorge Issacs, Andres Bello and Ruben Dario, among others.

SPN 476 | SOR JUANA INES DE LA CRUZ | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This advanced course in literature will explore the main works of the most influential Mexican poet of the Colonial period, Sor Juana Ines de la Cruz (1648-1695). One of the major themes in Sor Juana's work is the right of women to education. Sor Juana wrote poetry, plays, and essays in seventeenth-century Mexico, a society in which women's intellectual inquiry and access to knowledge was an unsafe endeavor and controlled by patriarchal hierarchies. Students will examine the relationship between politics, gender and writing in the context of the historical period, and analyze the spaces and borders occupied and visited by Sor Juana's lyric, ludic, astronomical, polemical, theatrical, theological, cosmological, culinary, colonial, and criollo writings.

SPN 477 | PERUVIAN REALITIES IN A MULTICULTURAL SOCIETY: HISTORY, CULTURE, POLITICS, VIOLENCE & SOCIAL JUSTICE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This interdisciplinary course will introduce students to the history, culture, politics, and general life of the peoples of Peru. Through an exploration of a vast array of interdisciplinary readings, visual arts and films, students will gain a deep understanding of Peru's history from its extraordinarily pre-Columbian civilizations to its citizens’ twenty-first century post civil war struggles to achieve dignity and justice in a multicultural, multilingual and multiethnic nation where Andean, Amazonian, African, Asian and European traditions meet. As a consequence of immense economic and social inequalities, Peru has a long history of violence. This resulted in an internal war that ended ten years ago. Particular attention will be given to contemporary developments in terms of the interaction between culture and politics. (Literature category #3: Latin American literature from origins through Romanticism/Literature category #4 (Latin American literature from Modernism to present).

SPN 478 | FOUNDATIONAL FICTIONS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This advanced course in Latin American literature explores the relationship of national consolidation and romantic novels. This course is based on the reading, discussion and critique of major representative "Foundational Fictions" in 19th century Latin American literature. Students will examine how the construction of gender and race in these novels portrays the quest to forge new national identity/ies. At the same time, students will analyze how the novels use their characters' romantic relationships to suggest their nation's political relationships, and thus contribute to the discourse on building the new society/ies that would replace Spain's colonial empire and serve as a prototype for the modern Latin American state. (Literature category #3: Latin American literature from origins through Romanticism).

SPN 491 | THE SOCIOlinguISTICS OF HERITAGE LANGUAGE LITERACY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
A heritage language learner has been described as "a student who is raised in a home where a non-English language is spoken, who speaks or merely understands the heritage language, and who is to some degree bilingual in English and the heritage language" (Valdes 2000:1). It is well-documented that for such students, literacy in the heritage language is often lost within just one or two generations. In this third course of DePaul's series on Latino Literacy, students will identify the prominent sociolinguistic issues that intersect with heritage language literacy. Through the reading of selected bibliography and guided reflections on both personal and service learning experiences, each student will arrive at a personalized assessment of the key topics affecting heritage language literacy. Possible topics include language socialization, language ideology and identities, and issues related to language contact with English such as code-switching and language shift/loss.

SPN 492 | TRANSNATIONALISM AND SOCIAL JUSTICE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course explores the overarching theme of violence across different Latin American social realities. This course uses an interdisciplinary approach to explore the experience of revolution and repression in contemporary Latin America. Focusing on twentieth-century literature, films and culture, students will explore the making and unmaking of revolutionary political projects and human rights issues, the construction of distinct forms of cultural resistance and the different expressions of violence.

SER 310 | TEACHING MATHEMATICS TO EXCEPTIONAL STUDENTS I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course provides the theoretical, content, and pedagogical foundations for teaching mathematics to diverse exceptional learners across all grade levels. Candidates review and deepen their own knowledge of basic math content with emphasis on number, number systems, operations, fractions, decimals, percent and measurement. They learn how to develop exceptional students' abilities to think and reason as well as build computation and problem-solving skills. Attention is given to Illinois Common Core standards and how to support exceptional students when introducing new concepts and correct misconceptions. The course covers informal assessment/progress monitoring, using assessment data to plan instruction and match instruction to exceptional student needs, and organizing instruction for exceptional learners in whole-class, small-group, and individual settings.

SER 311 | TEACHING MATHEMATICS FIELD EXPERIENCE LAB | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In this lab course, candidates provide math instruction to diverse, at-risk and exceptional students and use informal assessments and progress monitoring to guide instructional practices and differentiation for exceptional students. Supervision, coaching, and mentoring in implementing effective instructional strategies is provided by program faculty. The lab introduces the concept of documenting impact on student learning. This experience is offered in an on-campus facility that serves diverse at-risk learners and students with disabilities. (2 credit hours)

LSI 310 is a prerequisite for this class.

SER 312 | TEACHING MATHEMATICS FIELD EXPERIENCE LAB II | 1 quarter hour
(Undergraduate)
In this course candidates continue to learn/review mathematics content along with pedagogical content skills for exceptional learners across all grade levels with an emphasis on algebra and geometry. The course emphasizes identifying individual exceptional needs, strategies, curriculum, and connecting classroom assessment to instruction for exceptional, diverse, and at-risk math learners. Attention is given to Illinois Common Core standards. Candidates practice connecting math knowledge to other disciplines and incorporating reading and writing into math instruction. The course provides a comprehensive model for effective instruction for exceptional learners that includes informal assessment to determine student needs, flexible grouping, skills content delivery, progress-monitoring, and technology to support learning.

SER 313 | TEACHING MATHEMATICS LAB II | 1 quarter hour
(Undergraduate)
In this Lab, taken with LSI 312, candidates provide math instruction to diverse, at-risk and exceptional students in the lower grades, and use informal assessments and progress monitoring to guide instructional practices and differentiation for exceptional students. Supervision, coaching, and mentoring in implementing effective instructional strategies is provided by program faculty. The Lab introduces the concept of documenting impact on student learning. This experience is offered in an on-campus facility that serves diverse at-risk learners and students with mild-moderate disabilities. (1 credit hour)
SER 314 | TEACHING LITERACY TO EXCEPTIONAL STUDENTS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course covers the theoretical and historical foundations of literacy instruction for diverse, at-risk, and exceptional learners from PK-21. Topics include the theoretical and historical foundations of literacy instruction, oral language development as it relates to literacy, and foundational constructs of reading (i.e., phonological awareness, phonics, fluency, vocabulary, and comprehension). Strategies and methods for addressing the needs of middle and high school students with literacy deficits will also be addressed. Emphasis will be placed on understanding literacy development PK-12, utilizing the Common Core standards, analyzing and applying research-based instructional practices, and using assessment to guide instruction to meet the need of diverse literacy learners (at-risk and with disabilities). The course also examines informal assessments to determine student progress in reading and spelling.

SER 315 | TEACHING LITERACY FIELD EXPERIENCE LAB | 2 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
In this lab, candidates provide reading instruction to exceptional students and use informal assessments and progress monitoring to guide instructional practices and differentiation. Supervision, coaching, and mentoring in implementing effective instructional strategies for struggling readers are provided by program faculty. The course develops the concept of documenting impact on student learning. This experience is offered in an on-campus facility that serves at-risk literacy learners and students with disabilities. (2 credit hours)

SER 314 is a prerequisite for this class.

SER 316 | TEACHING LITERACY TO EXCEPTIONAL STUDENTS II: INSTRUCTION | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course focuses on literacy development for diverse, at-risk, and exceptional, learners in third grade and higher, including those with mild-moderate disabilities. Differences in reading abilities will be examined in light of providing appropriate, effective, and meaningful literacy instruction. Philosophical approaches, theoretical models, assessment measures, and practical implications for working with exceptional readers will be analyzed. Attention will be given to the literacy learning process, Common Core standards, the interaction of reading and learning in the content areas, and the connections between reading and writing in the upper grades. The course continues the examination of informal assessment to determine monitor exceptional student progress in reading, spelling, and writing. Uses of technology in literacy learning will also be examined.

SER 317 | TEACHING LITERACY LAB II | 1 quarter hour (Undergraduate)
In this Lab, taken with LSI 316, candidates provide reading and writing instruction to exceptional students in the upper grades and use informal assessments and progress monitoring to guide instructional practices and differentiation. Supervision, coaching, and mentoring in implementing effective instructional strategies for exceptional students are provided by program faculty. The course develops the concept of documenting impact on student learning. This experience is offered in an on-campus facility that serves at-risk literacy learners and students with mild-moderate disabilities. (1 credit hour)

SER 405 | TEACHING LITERACY TO EXCEPTIONAL LEARNERS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)

This course focuses on understanding literacy development in general, and for diverse, at-risk, and exceptional learners with mild-moderate disabilities, specifically. Differences in reading abilities will be examined in light of providing appropriate, effective, and meaningful literacy instruction. Philosophical approaches, theoretical models, assessment measures, and strategies and techniques for working with exceptional learners will be analyzed. Attention will be given to the literacy learning process, including the interaction between language, reading, and writing abilities. An overview of informal assessments that can be used to monitor exceptional student progress in reading, spelling, and writing will be provided and the uses of technology in literacy learning examined.

Status as a Graduate Education student is a prerequisite for this class.

SER 409 | TEACHING STUDENTS WITH SIGNIFICANT DISABILITIES | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)

This course offers strategies for assessing and teaching academic, life, communication, and social skills to students with more significant disabilities, including transition and vocational planning. Candidates will learn how to align curriculum with state learning standards and how to balance the teaching of academics with independent living skills, participation in community activities, and personal safety and health. Candidates will learn to manage physical and health concerns as well as learn how to employ technology to aid communication, including selection and use of augmentive and alternative communication (AAC) devices. In addition, candidates will train support staff in each of these areas.

Status as a Graduate Education student is a prerequisite for this class.

SER 410 | TEACHING MATHEMATICS TO EXCEPTIONAL LEARNERS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)

This course provides the theoretical, content, and pedagogical knowledge and skills for teaching mathematics through problem solving across all grade levels to diverse exceptional learners. Candidates review and deepen their own knowledge of basic math content with emphasis on number, number systems, operations, fractions, decimals, percent and measurement, algebra and geometry. They learn how to develop exceptional students' abilities to think and reason as well as build computation and problem-solving skills. Attention is given to Illinois Common Core standards and how to support exceptional students when introducing new concepts and correcting misconceptions. The course provides a comprehensive model for effective instruction for exceptional learners that include using assessment data to plan instruction and match instruction to exceptional student needs, flexible grouping, skilled content delivery, progress monitoring, and technology to support learning.

Status as a Graduate Education student is a prerequisite for this class.
SER 416 | LITERACY PRACTICUM IN SPECIAL EDUCATION I | 2 quarter hours
(Graduate)
In this course, candidates provide literacy (i.e., language, reading, spelling, writing) instruction to exceptional students and use informal assessments and progress monitoring to guide instructional practices and differentiation. Supervision, coaching, and mentoring in implementing effective instructional strategies for exceptional students is provided by program faculty. The course develops the concept of documenting impact on student learning. Faculty advisors and the Director of Field Experience and Student teaching, working in conjunction with individual students, will determine appropriate placements. (2 credit hours)
Status as a Graduate Education student is a prerequisite for this class.

SER 417 | PRACTICUM IN SPECIAL EDUCATION II | 2 quarter hours
(Graduate)
In this field-based course, candidates are introduced to teaching in a general education inclusion classroom. Candidates will interact with students and will plan and conduct small-group and large-group instruction in collaboration with the cooperating teacher. Faculty advisors and the Director of Field Experience and Student Teaching, working in conjunction with individual students, will determine appropriate practicum placements. (2 credit hours)
Status as a Graduate Education student is a prerequisite for this class.

SER 418 | PRACTICUM IN SPECIAL EDUCATION III | 2 quarter hours
(Graduate)
In this field-based course, candidates are introduced to teaching in a self-contained, special education classroom. Candidates will interact with students and will plan and conduct small-group and large-group instruction in collaboration with the cooperating teacher. Faculty advisors and the Director of Field Experience and Student Teaching, working in conjunction with individual students, will determine appropriate practicum placements. (2 credit hours)
Status as a Graduate Education student is a prerequisite for this class.

SER 419 | TEACHING LITERACY LAB | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
In this course, candidates provide literacy (i.e., language, reading, spelling, writing) instruction to at-risk literacy learners and students with mild-moderate disabilities. (4 credit hours)
Status as a Graduate Education student is a prerequisite for this class.

SER 420 | PRACTICUM IN SPECIAL EDUCATION III | 2 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course considers the theoretical, legal, ethical, and technical aspects of formal assessment in special education as well as models of nondiscriminatory assessment in the context of the requirements of special education law. Candidates gain knowledge of a variety of formal assessments including their purposes, characteristics, and limitations. They learn how to select, adapt, administer, score, interpret, and communicate the results of class-wide and individual assessments. Attention is given to collaborative assessment and educational planning based on assessment results, particularly the development Individual Education Program (IEP) goals, objectives, and recommendation for instruction.
Status as a Graduate Education student is a prerequisite for this class.

SER 421 | FORMAL ASSESSMENT IN SPECIAL EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course introduces students to the foundational concepts of reading assessment, with an emphasis on the multiple roles of assessment in today's schools: to evaluate, to classify, and to guide instruction. Students will be introduced to formal and informal measures of reading achievement and development, and will have scaffolded opportunities to administer, interpret, and use results for instructional planning. Additional topics to be covered include characteristics of informal and formal assessment (e.g., test construction, reliability and validity, and nondiscriminatory testing), and the roles of assessment in the diagnosis and identification of reading disabilities. Students will be introduced to case report writing to deepen their understanding of reading difficulties as well as to clearly communicate assessment findings to a variety of individuals, including parents.
Status as a Graduate Education student is a prerequisite for this class.

SER 430 | INTRODUCTION TO READING ASSESSMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course introduces students to the foundational concepts of reading assessment, with an emphasis on the multiple roles of assessment in today's schools: to evaluate, to classify, and to guide instruction. Students will be introduced to formal and informal measures of reading achievement and development, and will have scaffolded opportunities to administer, interpret, and use results for instructional planning. Additional topics to be covered include characteristics of informal and formal assessment (e.g., test construction, reliability and validity, and nondiscriminatory testing), and the roles of assessment in the diagnosis and identification of reading disabilities. Students will be introduced to case report writing to deepen their understanding of reading difficulties as well as to clearly communicate assessment findings to a variety of individuals, including parents.
Status as a Graduate Education student is a prerequisite for this class.

SER 431 | FOUNDATIONS OF LITERACY: ASSESSMENT AND INSTRUCTION I | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course focuses on understanding the foundations of literacy across the grade span, with a particular emphasis on the development of reading abilities among emergent and developing learners (preschool through 3rd grade). The history of theoretical models is explored in relation to current educational policies and practices. Topics include understanding the developmental process, utilizing a variety of informal assessments, and selecting research-based instructional practices. A strong emphasis is placed on designing standards-based lesson plans and the integration of narrative and expository texts to meet the unique needs of individual children, including those with identified disabilities and/or who exhibit learning challenges.
Status as a Graduate Education student is a prerequisite for this class.
SER 432 | DEVELOPING LITERACY: ASSESSMENT AND INSTRUCTION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course focuses on the development of literacy across the grade span, with a particular emphasis on the development of written language abilities among students at the intermediate and secondary levels (4th-12th grade). Topics include understanding the developmental process, utilizing a variety of formal and informal assessments, and selecting research-based instructional practices. A strong emphasis is placed on designing standards-based lesson plans to meet the unique needs of individual students. Strategies for providing differentiated instruction and interventions for students who require remediation of foundational skills, including those with identified disabilities and/or who exhibit learning challenges, are also explored.

SER 405 and status as an Advanced Masters Education student are prerequisites for this class.

SER 433 | ASSESSMENT AND DIAGNOSTIC TEACHING OF READING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is designed to give the student an understanding of the characteristics of children with reading difficulties, the process of diagnostic evaluation, test interpretation and report writing, and strategies for intervention. It is also designed to give practical experience with selected tests used to identify specific reading needs. Emphasis will be given to the use of case study material to analyze and interpret assessment data, write assessment results, and develop instructional recommendations.

SER 430 and status as a Graduate Education student are prerequisites for this class.

SER 434 | LITERATURE FOR SUCCESSFUL AND STRUGGLING READERS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will familiarize students with different genres of quality children's literature and how to select and use books that are appropriate and meaningful for children and youth with and without reading disabilities. Students will discuss, analyze, and critique literary elements (author's style of writing, character development, setting, mood, and theme), determine estimated readability levels, and engage in reader response activities that promote critical discussion and a personal interaction with text. Students will become familiar with authors, illustrators, and books that represent diverse cultures, races, ethnic and ability groups, and develop meaningful literature extensions that support various curricular areas, develop literacy skills, and promote an enjoyment of reading.

Status as a student in the Graduate Special Education and Reading Program is a prerequisite for this class.

SER 435 | LITERACY PROGRAMS: CURRICULUM AND COLLABORATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will prepare students to assume a leadership role within a school or district in selecting, implementing, and evaluating literacy instructional programs. Students will be supported in using educational research to inform decision-making and identifying effective methods and curriculum, particularly for students with identified disabilities and/or those who exhibit learning challenges. Approaches to collaborating with relevant stakeholders (e.g., administrators, teachers, school-based professionals, parents, and community members) and advocating for curricular change will also be explored.

Status as a Graduate Education student is a prerequisite for this class.

SER 437 | LEADERSHIP AND PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT IN LITERACY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
In this course, an emphasis will be placed on developing the necessary skills to support school-based professionals in the effective implementation of literacy instruction and assessment. Applying models of professional development and coaching, students will identify a variety of resources to design professional development activities that include modeling, scaffolding, evaluation, and reflection. Aspects of change theory and its application to creating school-wide professional development plans will also be examined.

SER 405, SER 432, and (SER 543 or SER 544) and status as a Graduate Education student are prerequisites for this class.

SER 438 | LITERATURE-BASED AND CONTENT AREA LITERACY INSTRUCTION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course addresses the integration of reading, writing, and oral language into the content areas. Candidates learn to assess the reading needs of students in content area courses and to design, select, modify, and evaluate a wide range of materials for the content areas. Attention is given to the characteristics of engaging, quality literature and well-structured, accessible expository texts, as well as applying these qualities to select books to engage K-12 students of a variety of backgrounds and skill levels. The course goes beyond teaching a set of isolated generic reading comprehension skills and provides explicit, research-based instructional strategies that can be applied across content areas to prepare students to read, write, talk, and think critically about complex texts, as well as to develop positive literacy identities and motivation to read.

SER 440 | SURVEY OF EXCEPTIONAL LEARNERS: PSYCHOLOGY AND EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
A survey of exceptional learners and characteristics of students with both high- and low-incidence disabilities, with consideration of placements appropriate for children with such disabilities. Emphasis on historical, theoretical, practical and legal implications and issues. The course also addresses the importance of developing and maintaining collaborative relationships with parents and professionals in order to maximize the academic, social, and emotional benefits of all learners.

SER 442 | SURVEY AND CHARACTERISTICS OF THE EXCEPTIONAL LEARNER | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
A survey of exceptional learners and characteristics of students with both high and low incidence disabilities, with consideration of alternative placements appropriate for children with various disabilities including the learning disabled. Emphasis on historical, theoretical, practical and legal implications and issues, as well as on the roles of special education professionals, including consultation and collaboration, in inclusion of exceptional learners.

SER 443 | PSYCHOLOGICAL TESTS AND METHODS IN DIAGNOSIS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Principles of measurement and test construction including an evaluation of standardized test instruments. Principles of broad-based assessment involving case history, criterion-referenced tests and informal assessment. Emphasis on understanding the strengths and limitations of a wide variety of assessment instruments.
SER 446 | PSYCHOLOGY AND EDUCATION OF THE EXCEPTIONAL CHILD | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Identification, characteristics, programs, schools, curricular variations, techniques for securing maximal development. Includes historical background, current legal and service provision issues including mainstreaming and inclusion.
(T&L 404 or T&L 425) and status as a Graduate Education student or status as a TEACH student are prerequisites for this class.

SER 446 | ADVANCED ISSUES AND STRATEGIES IN SPECIAL EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course will examine current trends, issues, and strategies in the field of special education. This is an advanced course that will consider topics related to inclusion, overrepresentation, and transition services such as modifying curriculum, positive behavioral supports, collaboration and co-teaching, teacher scheduling, student scheduling, behavioral and academic data collection within general education classrooms, communication with families, developing and implementing IEP's, and managing paraprofessionals. Prerequisite: LSI 442 or LSI 446 or equivalent.

SER 457 | SEMINAR AND RESEARCH IN SPECIAL EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course examines current research in special education including topics such as the social construction of special education; the assumptions of deficit vs. difference models of educational services; the overrepresentation of students of color and students from lower socioeconomic status backgrounds in special education; placement settings, inclusion, and service delivery models; and issues related to the short and long-term effects of special education on the lives of students with disabilities. Students select and pursue a topic of research interest and complete a professional portfolio. (Prerequisites: LSI 458, LSI 467, LSI 468, LSI 469).

SER 458 | TEACHING STUDENTS WITH HIGH INCIDENCE DISABILITIES I | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Introduction to the theoretical and practical approaches to instruction for students with high incidence disabilities across ages and levels of severity. Emphasis on developing an understanding of supportive learning environments, classroom and behavior management; developing collaborative practices with multiple service providers and families to meet the needs of diverse learners with high incidence disabilities. Strategies and materials for improving the social, emotional, and academic adjustment and functioning of students with high incidence disabilities are examined. Includes teaching social and emotional curricula; developing and implementing functional behavioral assessment; and monitoring growth and development in targeted areas. Strategies to increase the individual's self awareness, self-management, self control, self reliance, and self esteem are considered.
(SER 440 and Learning Behavior Specialist 1) or (SER 442 and SEE program) are prerequisites for this class.

SER 461 | COLLABORATIVE PRACTICE AND SPECIAL EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
The purpose of this course is to develop pre-service teachers' understanding of the importance of developing and maintaining collaborative relationships with parents and professionals in educational environments. Students will develop an understanding of professional and legal responsibilities, networks, organizations, and services available for students with disabilities and their families. Students will also examine various educational models for working collaboratively with teachers, parents, and support personnel in classrooms and schools. Students will articulate a personal philosophy and strategies for working collaboratively with families, teachers, paraprofessionals, and other professionals within educational environments.

SER 462 | INSTRUCTIONAL STRATEGIES FOR STUDENTS WITH DISABILITIES I: ACCESSING GENERAL EDUCATION CURRICULUM | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course focuses general theories of learning, instructional modifications, accommodations, grouping strategies, technology, and assessments used for helping to provide students with disabilities access to general education curricula. Course topics will focus on the effectiveness of these strategies for working with students with mild, moderate, and severe disabilities. Students will begin to articulate a personal philosophy and approaches designed to enhance the educational experiences of children and youth with disabilities and they will begin to examine the relationship between schooling and long term outcomes.

SER 464 | CONTEMPORARY ISSUES IN SPECIAL EDUCATION | 1-4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Current issues and problems in special education and reading will be discussed. Focus will be current research and best practices.

SER 465 | INDUCTION INTO THE FIELD OF EDUCATION I | 2 quarter hours (Graduate)
Designed primarily as a way to support student teachers through edTPA, this course utilizes a seminar approach to help students clarify their understanding of issues related to special education, general education, and teaching in urban schools. All students will prepare an electronic portfolio based on planning for instruction and assessment, instructing and engaging the focus learner, and assessing learning.

SER 466 | INDUCTION INTO THE FIELD OF EDUCATION II | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Designed primarily as a culminating course experience at the graduate level, this course utilizes a seminar approach to help students clarify their understanding of issues related to special education, general education, and teaching in urban schools. All students will prepare a portfolio based on their experiences within the graduate program. These portfolios will contain evidence of each student's development during the program and students will make connections between their own theoretical, philosophical, and professional orientations and the Urban Professional Multicultural Model.
SER 467 | TEACHING STUDENTS WITH HIGH INCIDENCE DISABILITIES II | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Continued study of the theoretical and practical approaches to instruction for students with high incidence disabilities across ages and levels of severity. Translation of diagnostic information into teaching strategies and development of an instructional plan (IEP) including transition needs. Emphasis on understanding theoretical models of literacy, literacy development, instructional strategies, and adjusting literacy instruction to meet the needs of diverse learners. Principles of diagnostic teaching will be discussed. Specific teaching techniques and materials will be reviewed, including appropriate uses of technology. (SER 440 and Learning Behavior Specialist 1) or (SER 442 and SEE program) are prerequisites for this class.

SER 468 | TEACHING STUDENTS WITH LOW INCIDENCE DISABILITIES I | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Introduction to the theoretical and practical approaches to instruction of children with low incidence disabilities including functional assessment and instructional strategies, curricular options and adaptations, as well as levels of participation and accommodation in the general curriculum. Emphasis will be placed on understanding theoretical models of language development and communication, instructional strategies for language and communication, and adjusting language instruction to meet the needs of diverse learners. Candidates will explore individualized planning (IEPs), transition needs, integration of related services into the instructional program, and strategies and materials for improving the social, emotional, and academic functioning of diverse students with low-incidence disabilities. (SER 440 and Learning Behavior Specialist 1) or (SER 442 and SEE program) are prerequisites for this class.

SER 469 | TEACHING STUDENTS WITH LOW INCIDENCE DISABILITIES II | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Continued study of the theoretical and practical approaches to instruction for diverse students with low incidence disabilities. Focuses on addressing the intellectual, educational, physical, motor, health, social, and transitional needs of diverse students with more severe low incidence disabilities. Examination of etiological factors, growth, development, and long-term outcomes. Developing collaborative efforts with family and multiple care and service providers is addressed. Provides strategies to facilitate maintenance and generalization of both academic and non-academic skills across learning environments. Includes experiences with assistive technology, community-based instruction, and designing and implementing a functional curriculum when needed. (SER 440 and Learning Behavior Specialist 1) or (SER 442 and SEE program) are prerequisites for this class.

SER 470 | STUDENT TEACHING IN SPECIAL EDUCATION | 6 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Five school days per week in supervised teaching experience for 12-weeks. Candidates will also attend a student teaching seminar (LSI 471) one day per week where they will discuss special education topics related to this experience. Faculty advisors and the Director of Student Teaching, working in conjunction with individual students, will determine appropriate student teaching placements. (6 credit hours)
Status as a Graduate Education student and LSI 440, 402, 403, 409, 410, 421, 416, 417, 418, 419 (or equivalent) are prerequisites for this class.

SER 471 | STUDENT TEACHING IN SPECIAL EDUCATION SEMINAR | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This seminar course provides support for candidates as they begin their student teaching experience. In addition and in conjunction with student teaching, candidates will complete a project designed to document a candidate’s ability to impact student learning based on three to five days of teaching (edTPA). Status as a Graduate Education student and LSI 440, 402, 403, 409, 410, 421, 416, 417, 418, 419 (or equivalent) are prerequisites for this class.

SER 475 | METHODS OF TEACHING EARLY CHILDHOOD STUDENTS WITH LOW INCIDENCE DISABILITIES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will focus on examining the developmental and learning characteristics of young children with low incidence disabilities. In specific, this course will focus on educating early childhood students with Autism Spectrum Disorders and those with Intellectual Disabilities. One of the primary goals of this course is to understand the learning needs of these children, and examine and evaluate various educational and therapeutic methods of working with them. A major part of this course will be devoted to characteristics associated with and interventions for children with Autism Spectrum Disorders.

SER 476 | SPECIAL EDUCATION CURRICULUM AND STRATEGIES FOR EARLY CHILDHOOD: HIGH INCIDENCE DISABILITIES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Study of the theoretical and practical approaches to instruction for young children with high incidence disabilities. Emphasis placed on the development of supportive learning environments, using special curricular and behavioral management strategies for all early childhood settings; application of collaborative practices with multiple service providers and families to meet the needs of diverse learners with high incidence disabilities. Strategies and materials for improving the social, emotional, and academic adjustment and functioning of young children with high incidence disabilities are examined. Includes teaching social and emotional curricula; implementing functional behavioral assessment; and monitoring growth and development in targeted areas. Strategies to increase the young child are self-awareness, self-management, self control, self reliance, and self esteem are considered. Application of diagnostic information into teaching strategies and implementation of an instructional plan (IEP) is a central tenet of the course. (Pre-requisite: SCG 404 and T&L 427) 25 clock hours for Level II Experience.

SER 477 | FOUNDATIONS OF LITERACY AND SPECIAL EDUCATION FOR THE MIDDLE GRADES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Introduction to disabilities and the historical and legal foundations of special education. This course will prepare candidates to address the emotional, social, psychological, and cognitive needs of students with disabilities, with a particular emphasis on addressing the needs of students with reading and learning disabilities at the middle school level, including developmental and remedial instruction and support. This course counts toward Reading Teacher endorsement. Co-requisites for this course are MGE 421 and MGE 431. In this course, students will: 1. MGE 401 is a prerequisite for this class.
SER 542 | PRACTICUM IN LITERACY ASSESSMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This practicum course provides students with an opportunity to apply theory to practice in assessing and teaching struggling literacy learners. Under the supervision of program faculty, students are responsible for completing a comprehensive assessment battery with a struggling literacy learner, interpreting results across assessments, developing and implementing an individual instructional plan, writing a case report, and discussing results with family members and/or other stakeholders.
SER 430 and status as a Graduate Education student are prerequisites for this class.

SER 543 | PRACTICUM IN LITERACY INSTRUCTION AND ASSESSMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This practicum course provides students with an opportunity to apply theory to practice in teaching struggling literacy learners. Under the supervision of program faculty, students are responsible for developing, implementing, and evaluating an individual learning plan for a client(s) that includes on-going assessment of learning objectives. Students write a case report, summarizing outcomes of instructional sessions, to communicate progress towards goals to a variety of individuals, including parents.
SER 431 and status as a Graduate Education student are prerequisites for this class.

SER 544 | PRACTICUM IN LITERACY INSTRUCTION, ASSESSMENT, AND COLLABORATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This practicum course provides students with an opportunity to apply theory to practice in teaching struggling literacy learners. Under the supervision of program faculty, students are responsible for developing, implementing, and evaluating an individual learning plan for a client(s) that includes on-going assessment of learning objectives. Students write a case report, summarizing outcomes of instructional sessions, to communicate progress towards goals to a variety of individuals, including parents. Collaboration with peers for professional growth, which involves providing feedback on each other’s practices, is also emphasized.
SER 431 and status as a Graduate Education student are prerequisites for this class.

SER 548 | INDEPENDENT STUDY IN READING AND OTHER LEARNING DISABILITIES | 2-4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
RREQUISITE(S): Permission of instructor, department chair and associate dean. (2 credit hours)

SER 549 | THESIS RESEARCH IN SPECIALIZED INSTRUCTION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
A Master of Arts candidate conducts original research, writes a thesis, and presents an oral defense before a committee of faculty members.
PREREQUISITE(S): SCG 410 and approved thesis proposal.

SER 552 | PRACTICUM EXPERIENCE WITH HIGH INCIDENCE DISABILITIES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Six weeks of supervised field experience in a cooperating school working with students with high incidence disabilities, together with structured opportunities for feedback and discussion of issues and problems encountered.
SER 440, SER 458, and SER 467 are prerequisites for this class.

SER 553 | PRACTICUM EXPERIENCE WITH LOW INCIDENCE DISABILITIES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Six weeks of supervised field experience in a cooperating school working with low incidence disabilities, together with structured opportunities for feedback and discussion of issues and problems encountered.

SER 585 | STUDENT TEACHING IN SPECIAL EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Five school days per week in supervised teaching experience for a full academic quarter. Faculty advisors and the Director of Student Teaching, working in conjunction with individual students, will determine appropriate student teaching placements. Permission required. (4 credit hours)

SER 586 | STUDENT TEACHING IN ELEMENTARY EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Five school days per week in supervised teaching experience for a full academic quarter. Faculty advisors and the Director of Student Teaching, working in conjunction with individual students, will determine appropriate student teaching placements. Permission required. (4 credit hours)

SER 597 | EARLY CHILDHOOD EDUCATION SPECIAL EDUCATION PRACTICUM | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Supervised teaching in a cooperating school serving young children with disabilities for three hundred clock hours; arranged in collaboration with supervising faculty member and the Field Experience Office. Candidates will reflect upon their teaching experiences with young children with disabilities; collaborate with colleagues and instructor to identify alternative strategies for problematic situations. Application and approval required. Open only to DePaul students.

SER 600 | REGISTERED STUDENT IN GOOD STANDING | 0 quarter hour
(Graduate)
Registration in this course is open to students who are not registered for any other courses but need to complete requirements/assignments for previously taken courses. It provides access to University facilities.
Permission of advisor required. (0 credit hours)
Status as a Graduate Education student is a prerequisite for this class.

SER 606 | REVIEW OF LITERATURE | 0 quarter hour
(Graduate)
This paper will give students the opportunity to develop and demonstrate written competence in a subfield of their disciplines and to enhance life-long learning. Specifically, they will broaden their knowledge base and inform themselves about a topic, issue, theory, etc., reviewing and synthesizing existing literature. To do so, students will need a variety of bibliographic skills including searching data bases. In other words, students will need to be able to ask and answer such questions as "What is known about? What are major issues and themes?" (0 credit hours)

SER 607 | INTEGRATIVE PAPER | 0 quarter hour
(Graduate)
Students will observe and/or participate in the reciprocal interaction of theory and practice, by investigating actual practice in the field as it relates to theory. This might take the form of investigating how a particular theory is applied in the field, developing a practical application of a theory, or conversely, developing/refining a theory based on investigations made in the field. In other words, as graduates encounter new theories and practices they will need to be able to investigate and evaluate them, asking and answering questions about "How theories work." (0 credit hours)
SPRTCMN 375 | SPORTS CAMPAIGNS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This class replicates the new business process for a public relations or sports marketing agency. Our partner firms provide two "real world" assignments from clients for a sports sponsorship or related sports business activity. Teams "compete" to win the business, which results in presentations to the agencies during the final. Students prepare a comprehensive new business pitch, including situation analysis, primary research, key insights, a big idea with tactical executions and evaluation. (*Course will be first offered in AUTUMN 2019)

PRAD 244 or PRAD 255 is a prerequisite for this class.

SPRTCMN 373 | SPORTS MEDIA ENTREPRENEURS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Entrepreneurship is at the core of many aspects of digital sports media entities as new business and opportunities emerge insight from sports communication and business training. This course provides students with a grounding in the process of planning, funding, launching, growing and managing a successful new sports media-related business; working in sports communication for an entrepreneurial venture; or freelancing/consulting. Through assignments, class discussions, site visits to entrepreneurial businesses and interaction with guest speakers, students will learn the risk, control and reward that comes with self-employment and working with startups in sports communication. (*Course will be first offered in SPRING 2019)

SPRTCMN 374 | SPORTS MEDIA RELATIONS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Sports Media Relations is designed for sports communications, public relations and business students who require an understanding of how both sports-focused and general interest media outlets operate as they cover sports topics. The course will demonstrate how sports communication professionals and general communications professionals who work on sports projects can: 1) connect and build relationships with media outlets, reporters, editors, producers, bloggers and other media influencers, 2) operate as a conduit or facilitator between their teams, leagues, school athletic department and/or organization and media that cover them, and 3) use of digital and social media to reach both journalists and fans/customers. The course will examine sports media across the spectrum of journalistic standards and credibility levels. Taught by an instructor with both PR counseling and major media sports reporting experience, the course will provide insight into strategies and tactics that resonate with media, as well as how sports journalists work and think. The course taps the expertise of other sports media relations professionals - including from Chicago's professional and collegiate teams - and other sports journalists to explore how sports media relations is evolving in the changing landscape of traditional, digital and social media. (*Course will be first offered in WINTER 2019)

PRAD 244 or PRAD 255 is a prerequisite for this class.

SPRTCMN 375 | SPORTS CONTENT CREATION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Sports media content is increasingly produced using journalism skills by in-house talent working for teams, leagues and other entities outside of traditional news organization. In this course, taught by top professionals working at outlets such as ESPN and The Big Ten Network, students learn skills and approaches to navigating audiovisual and text content across platforms, including documentaries, social media, and streaming coverage.
SPRTCMN 376 | SPORTS CRISIS CMN MANAGEMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course focuses on crisis communication management efforts by sports-related organizations including sports leagues, governing bodies, and university athletic program as well as the misdeeds of sports officials, individual athletes and the organizations or sponsorships linked to them. The course will emphasize the practical application of theories, strategies, tactics, and messaging in the crisis management process. Additionally, there will be a focus on planning for and preventing crises as well as experience in managing full-blown crises including Stakeholder communication. (*Course will be first offered in SUMMER 2019)
PRAD 255 and instructor permission are prerequisites for this class.

SPRTCMN 389 | SPORTS PODCASTING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Podcast listening and revenue have reached all-time highs. Sports podcasts, in particular, allow hosts and guests greater freedom to delve deeper into respective sports, games, and subjects than live radio and television. Podcasts are personal, portable, and flexible. Students may work individually or in groups in this course. Students will also produce a final podcast project that can be customized to the learning and career goals of individual students. Students do NOT need any previous radio or podcasting experience to succeed in this course. Some experience with Garageband or similar programs will definitely benefit students in this course. (*Course will be first offered in WINTER 2019)

SPRTCMN 396 | SPORTS COMMUNICATION CAPSTONE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This culminating experience for Sports Communication majors integrates the knowledge and skills learned during their undergraduate years with a forward-thinking professional sports-focused curriculum designed to prepare students for the competitive 21st century workplace. The course will cover such essential career-building topics as social media management, creating and leveraging a professional network; understanding effective teamwork strategies; ethical considerations in sports communication; and creating a plan and fine-tuning the skills needed to begin a career in the sports industry. Only SPRTCMN majors who have 144 hours or above are eligible to register for capstone. SPRTCMN majors may not earn credit for either CMN396 or PRAD396. (*Course will be first offered in SUMMER 2019)

Senior status and a major in Sports Communication are prerequisites for this class.

SAP VIEN01 | SHORT-TERM PROGRAM: VIENNA | 0 quarter hour (Undergraduate)
This study abroad program introduces students to the peoples, locations, and traditions significant in Vienna of both the fin-de-siecle and today. Present-day Vienna still bears the stamp of the great personalities that shaped its culture and identity in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, yet it is also a modernizing place, one that combines traditions of the past with innovations of the present, and exists as a global, multicultural center that straddles Western and Central Europe. It is also an ideal site for discovering how culture operates in people’s lives by closely examining the things they eat, how those things are acquired in a large city, and how what people eat can tell us who they think they are. As a city of modern tastes, Vienna is shown through an exploration of music, visual arts, architecture, coffeehouse culture, as well as an examination of Viennese foods and systems of eating. Sustainable Urban Development (SUD)

SUD 401 | SUSTAINABLE URBAN DEVELOPMENT I: PLANNING, POLICY & COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course addresses the concepts, practices, and tools for sustainable planning and provides an understanding for how to apply these to urban communities. The course is an intensive, topics-based overview of sustainable land use, housing, transportation, infrastructure, and community and economic development practices. The course is largely directed at contemporary policy issues and technical processes within the United States.

SUD 402 | SUSTAINABLE URBAN DEVELOPMENT II: GREEN INFRASTRUCTURE & THE ENVIRONMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This class focuses on the environmental aspects of city planning, including: resource management, environmental policy, transportation, LEED ratings and measures of environmental impact, integration of ecosystems within a land use planning framework, and community-based solutions to historical environmental injustice.

SUD 403 | BROWNFIELDS REDEVELOPMENT: PRACTICE AND IMPLEMENTATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Students form a grounded understanding of the Brownfield lifecycle: how and why they were created and the general processes governing their redevelopment. The class will review the current regulatory, economic, environmental, community, public health, and development conditions of brownfields, through site visits and, when possible, discussions with stakeholders from public agencies, community organizations, and the private sector. Through a practice component, class members work in teams to apply their general brownfields knowledge to particular challenges in the field and gain hands-on experience in applied environmental and economic development research and analysis, community brownfield practices, and sustainability planning.

SUD 404 | URBAN DESIGN LABORATORY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course teaches digital methods of creating visual information. Software used may include: Adobe Creative Suite, Google SketchUp, and advanced techniques for Microsoft PowerPoint, which can be applied by students in the SUD 501 and 502 courses.

SUD 420 | SUSTAINABLE URBAN FOOD SYSTEMS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
SUD 420 offers a critical analysis of the policies and practices that contribute to development of sustainable urban food systems in the North American context. The course surveys current literature on urban food systems and explores ways that cities have become centers for capital investment in (re)localization and regionalization of food production and distribution to serve higher income residents and to encourage community building, enhance education, improve food access and nutrition, and spur environmental restoration in economically distressed neighborhoods. Particular attention is paid to the concept of community food system as it is employed as an alternative narrative and practice to the concept global food system. Attention is paid to the way that historically marginalized groups seek to take control over food as a means to assert self-determination of communities. And a centerpiece of the course is engagement in field service with community groups that participate in their internship during the day and take three required evening courses.

SUD 430 | SUSTAINABLE URBAN TRANSPORTATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
The course introduces transportation geography and explores the characteristics of sustainable transportation systems. From electric vehicles to new services like car and bike sharing, the course examines the role that transportation plays in environmental, social, and economic sustainability. Students will learn about current issues in urban transportation (both passenger and freight), and receive an introduction to tools and techniques used by transportation planners, e.g., Geographic Information Systems (GIS).
SUD 433 | URBAN PLANNING | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
A seminar on the intellectual history and theories of urban planning and design, and their application in urban settings in the U.S. and abroad. Systematic study of case studies leads to the investigation of current urban planning issues in Chicago and other cities globally.

SUD 451 | SUSTAINABLE CITIES AND FOOD JUSTICE | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
While the need for food is universal, geographies of urban food production, distribution and consumption are anything but even. This course critically examines the contemporary global food system with the goal of providing students with skills and knowledge to understand the intersection of food justice activism and the development of sustainable cities. Students explore literature focused on current and past food justice campaigns that focus on how activists create policies and practices in support of more just urban food systems. Through examining—and taking part in—contemporary food justice advocacy campaigns, the course specifically explores urban food justice movements in the U.S. and internationally and guides students to form a critique of how literature on alternative food systems is incorporated into theories of sustainable urban development. Cross-listed with GEO 351 and PAX 351.

SUD 490 | SPECIAL TOPICS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
A course related to sustainable urban development.

SUD 499 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Intensive study of a topic of special interest; requires that the student and instructor work together independently on a specific topic or project. Instructor consent required.

SUD 501 | PROFESSIONAL SEMINAR IN SUSTAINABLE URBAN DEVELOPMENT | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
SUD 501 seeks to develop professional, communication and consultancy skills of SUD students through exploring transdisciplinary approaches to urban development. Engagement with urban planners, policymakers, community advocates, government employees, and other sustainability practitioners through guest lectures and site visits is combined with a set of assignments that move students toward defining and/or deepening their career or academic interests. Students are guided toward developing a set of questions about their particular specialty areas and then to utilize oral history methods to engage with leaders to learn more deeply about SUD issues and careers. The course culminates in an annual symposium where students present on a topic within SUD to a public audience. During the MA program, students must complete 100 hours of internship or approved off-campus work related to Sustainable Urban Development. Therefore, the grade for SUD 501 is awarded after (a) successfully completing the internship and (b) Successfully completing the SUD 501 course requirements.

SUD 502 | CAPSTONE - PROFESSIONAL PORTFOLIO | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
A discussion seminar that puts the skills learned on site into the wider academic context of the course. Students will draw from their internship to complete a project report as the culmination of this course.

SUD 592 | INDEPENDENT STUDY IN SUSTAINABLE URBAN FOOD SYSTEMS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
A one-quarter, 4-credit class for Non-SUD students enrolled in the Graduate Certificate in Sustainable Urban Food Systems. In concurrence with a required 100-hour off-campus internship, the course includes five online or in-person sessions with the SUD Internship Coordinator consisting of: critical analysis and reflection on internship activities in relation to literature on sustainable urban food systems, discussion on successes and challenges during the internship, discussion of readings and journal entries, development of a final reflective essay, and advising and mentoring on career development in sustainable urban food systems. SUD 420 or SUD 451 is a prerequisite for this class.

SUD 600 | CANDIDACY CONTINUATION | 0 quarter hour (Graduate)

Enrollment in this course is limited to three quarters and requires permission of the graduate director. Enrollment in this course allows access to the library and other campus facilities. This course does not carry an equivalent enrollment status and students in it are not eligible for loan deferment or student loans. This course is not graded. (0 credit hours)

TEACH Program (TCH)

TCH 320 | EXPLORING TEACHING IN THE URBAN HIGH SCHOOL | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
(JYEL CREDIT) This course is an invitation to secondary education as a profession, an opportunity for students considering education as a career to explore the reality of teaching and learning a disciplinary content area in a variety of Chicago-area schools. Students will become familiar with different narratives of teaching through teacher and student biographies, testimonials, literature, film, and classroom observations. They will explore the interrelationships between, for example, popular cultural beliefs about schooling; teacher and student identities; and classroom interaction. The instructor will coordinate observations in several classrooms as the basis for intensive, guided reflective work, aimed at supporting students' initial and subsequent efforts of developing identities as disciplinary content educators (25 hours of high school classroom observation required). Course is also an introduction to the TEACH Program. Offered during Fall, Winter, and Spring terms.
TCH 390 | CAPSTONE: INTEGRATING EDUCATION & DISCIPLINARY FOUNDATIONS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is designed to help students conceptualize issues and opportunities in teaching their disciplinary content to diverse students and in different classroom contexts. Up to ten hours of community-based service/observation required. In this course, students will analyze and reflect on how teaching in their disciplines is informed by diverse cultures of schooling and youth, including the influences of economic, social, cultural, political, gender, and religious factors on schooling, educational policy and opportunity. Students will use disciplinary content to critically and creatively reflect on the teaching of that content in secondary schools. Students will be introduced to issues and ways of presenting essential disciplinary content in ways that engage diverse learners, including learners who have not been served well by formal education. Students will also develop a theory of teaching that emphasizes the intersection of disciplinary content with multicultural perspectives. Offered during Spring term only.

TCH 401 | TEACHING AS A PROFESSION IN SECONDARY SCHOOL | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is an introduction to the TEACH Program, including the College of Education's conceptual framework and teacher dispositions, and to the professional world of secondary school teaching, including the policy bodies and stakeholders that impact teaching. Within this developing understanding of the larger context of secondary education, students will begin to articulate clearly professional identities and the behaviors inherent in those identities, including their impact on student learning. Drawing on previous coursework and their growing understanding of differences in individual, ethnic, and cultural group attitudes, values, and needs, students also will learn to recognize the complexities of teaching and learning in a pluralistic society. Ultimately, students will be committed to teaching as a responsible professional who acts in an ethical and collegial fashion. 25 Level 2 field experience required. Offered during Fall term only.

TCH 411 | THE NATURE OF ENGLISH | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is designed to help students to see that the field of English Studies is bigger than the component they probably identify as English (it's Literature, Writing, and Linguistics/Grammar). Students will explore the formation of the discipline up to the current day, focusing on the shifting understanding of ways of reading, writing and thinking about language. They will strive to answer the questions: "What does it mean to be a student of language and literature?" and, "What are the ways of knowing characteristic of English and Writing, Rhetoric, & Discourse majors?" In doing so, students will relate the disciplinary content of their major to their daily lives and interests and to the larger framework of human endeavor and understanding, including identifying its importance to the personal lives of high school students. The course is a prerequisite for TCH 421. Offered during Winter term only.

TCH 412 | THE NATURE OF HISTORY AND THE SOCIAL SCIENCES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course builds on the content course work students have done in the seven disciplines grouped under the heading "social sciences" (history, political science, geography, sociology, anthropology, economics, and psychology). In this class students will get further exposure to the basic concepts of the social science disciplines and consider the connections as well as differences between them. The course emphasizes how different disciplinary backgrounds lead students to bring different perspectives to their study of social phenomena and helps them see these phenomena from multiple vantage points. The course will employ a case study approach framed around social issues of interest to all seven disciplines (e.g. social control, threats, development, natural disasters).

By the end of the course, students will have applied the knowledge and skills of multiple social science disciplines to evaluate social phenomena, considered the relationship and differences between those disciplines, and be prepared to enter TCH 422 where they will apply their content knowledge to inquiry and teaching in the field. Offered during Winter term only.

TCH 413 | THE NATURE OF MATHEMATICS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course builds on students' mathematics understanding by emphasizing the universality of mathematics as a cultural endeavor. In it, students will explore the historical trends in math and how those trends have been taught. Students will understand that, mathematics, at its core, is deductive; however, it also requires intuition. Thus, the course examines the interaction among intuition, experimentation, conjecture, abstraction, and deductive reasoning not only in the classroom but also in the everyday use of mathematics. It also examines the interplay between concrete problem-solving and generalization. Offered during Winter term only.

TCH 414 | THE NATURE OF SCIENCE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is about the nature of science and the interactions between science and society. It will build on the foundation of understandings that students already have about the processes and conventions of science developed through their years as science students to create opportunities for deeper understandings of the beliefs and assumptions inherent to the creation of scientific knowledge. These opportunities will be developed through direct interactions with professional scientists as well as through case studies and readings that illustrate the strengths, limits and pitfalls of the scientific endeavor as well as provide opportunities for students to relate science to their daily lives and interests and to a larger framework of human endeavor and understanding (e.g., relationships among systems of human endeavor including science and technology; relationships among scientific, technological, personal, social and cultural values). Cases will be drawn from different scientific disciplines as well as from modern and historic times. In this way, science students will have a better understanding of what it means to be a scientist and how science interfaces with society. The course is a prerequisite for TCH 424. Offered during Winter term only.
TCH 412 | PREREQUISITE FOR THIS CLASS

This course builds on TCH 411 by preparing teacher candidates to distinguish between what needs to be taught (content) and how it is taught (pedagogy), with an emphasis on understanding the historical shifts in the teaching of content and how these shifts inform teaching and learning in today's English language arts classrooms. The course also introduces students to methods of inquiry and reflection on content pedagogical knowledge. Students will examine their own educational experience through the lens of the historical trends, focusing on how they learned and what they understood their teachers to be doing. This initial case study will serve as an introduction into case study methods. Students will also develop expertise in one of the three historical trend areas - reading, writing, and language - and examine how the trend has informed teaching and learning and shaped curriculum, pedagogy, and assessment. Students will develop a case study of a practicing teacher using the lens of the historical trend in which they are developing expertise. 25 Level 1 Field Experience hours required. Offered during Spring term.

TCH 411 is a prerequisite for this class.

TCH 422 | PREREQUISITE FOR THIS CLASS

This course builds on the content knowledge students developed and reinforced in TCH 412. More, it asks them to make the shift from considering how a person prepared in the social sciences analyzes social phenomena to how such a person teaches the social sciences. Students will do this by developing two units of inquiry-based case studies that they could use in their own classrooms. The topics of these case studies will vary from section to section, depending on the needs of the students and expertise of the instructor. Possible topics include the Constitution, the Cold War, slavery, and the Iraq War. As students work on these projects, they will continue to reflect on the course work they have done in the content areas as well as the instruction they see teachers delivering in their field experiences. They will contemplate such questions as: "What are the connections between the social science disciplines? How can they be taught together, creating interdisciplinary courses at the high school level? What are the differences between the social science disciplines and what does this mean for secondary pedagogy? How can teachers use inquiry with their students, making sure they have enough guidance to learn about social events but also the freedom to pursue their interests and make sense of the world on their own terms?" By the end of this course, students through readings and their projects will have advanced their learning about the nature of inquiry, its implementation in the classroom, and the connections and differences between the social science disciplines. 25 Level 1 Field Experience hours required. Offered during Spring term.

TCH 412 is a prerequisite for this class.

TCH 423 | PREREQUISITE FOR THIS CLASS

This course builds on TCH 413 by introducing students to inquiry methods to understand the teaching and learning of mathematics. Students will explore how mathematics has been and is taught by examining major paradigm shifts in mathematics education and the impact those paradigms and shifts have on pedagogical content knowledge, or knowledge of how to teach disciplinary content. Students will use case study methods to look at instructional practices and begin to articulate their own mathematics teaching pedagogy. With the completion of this course, students will have a deeper understanding of mathematical literacy and the barriers to understanding and teaching mathematics, as well as being able to identify what makes an exceptional math teacher who is able to address the needs of all students. 25 Level 1 Field Experience hours required. Offered during Spring term.

TCH 413 is a prerequisite for this class.

TCH 424 | PREREQUISITE FOR THIS CLASS

Following TCH 414, this course transitions from asking "what does a scientist do?" to a consideration of why science literacy in the general public has been so difficult to achieve. The focusing questions for TCH 424 are: "How do we teach science? What is science literacy? Why is an understanding of science important to the general public? and What are the major obstacles and strategies to achieving science literacy?" The course begins by participants self-reflecting on their own educational experiences that led to their paths in science education: what have been their successful learning strategies, how have teachers influenced their education and what have been successful (and less than successful) classroom instructional strategies? From this, students will begin science classroom observation, discussing their observations with their peers, and speaking with educators about their experiences teaching high school science and about the goals and short-comings of science education. Throughout this process, students will read seminal literature on science literacy and explore cases challenging their notions of the teacher-learner relationship and the relationship between science and society. As a result of this course, students will gain a deeper understanding of scientific literacy and the barriers to understanding and teaching science as well as identify what makes an exceptional science teacher able to prepare both future scientists and a knowledgeable public. 25 Level 1 Field Experience hours required. Offered during Spring term.

TCH 414 is a prerequisite for this class.
TCH 451 | RESEARCH METHODS & DISCIPLINARY INQUIRY: ENGLISH | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)

This course introduces students to education research methods and discipline-specific research and inquiry. During the first five weeks, the course focuses on basic questions, issues, and theoretical frameworks central to the purpose, conceptualization, conducting, writing, reading and using education research as a means for informing education theory, practice and policy. Candidates will be exposed to the multiple frameworks that inform education research and various methodologies employed in collecting and analyzing data. During the last 6 weeks of the course, the course focuses on research related to the teaching of the English language arts in the middle school and high school and pedagogical content knowledge, including research on teaching and learning, curricula and instructional delivery, assessment, and the relationship of socio-cultural, economic, and language use to teaching and learning discipline-specific content. Students will develop and implement small discipline-specific research projects, identifying research questions, conducting a literature search, developing a theoretical framework, and collecting and analyzing data. NOTE: Offered concurrently with TCH 481.

TCH 452 | RESEARCH METHODS & DISCIPLINARY INQUIRY: HISTORY AND THE SOCIAL SCIENCES | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)

This course introduces students to education research methods and discipline-specific research and inquiry. During the first five weeks, the course focuses on basic questions, issues, and theoretical frameworks central to the purpose, conceptualization, conducting, writing, reading and using education research as a means for informing education theory, practice and policy. Candidates will be exposed to the multiple frameworks that inform education research and various methodologies employed in collecting and analyzing data. During the last 6 weeks of the course, the course focuses on research related to the teaching of history and the social sciences in the middle school and high school and pedagogical content knowledge, including research on teaching and learning, curricula and instructional delivery, assessment, and the relationship of socio-cultural, economic, and language use to teaching and learning discipline-specific content. Students will develop and implement small discipline-specific research projects, identifying research questions, conducting a literature search, developing a theoretical framework, and collecting and analyzing data. NOTE: Offered concurrently with TCH 482.

TCH 453 | RESEARCH METHODS & DISCIPLINARY INQUIRY: MATHEMATICS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)

This course introduces students to education research methods and discipline-specific research and inquiry. During the first five weeks, the course focuses on basic questions, issues, and theoretical frameworks central to the purpose, conceptualization, conducting, writing, reading and using education research as a means for informing education theory, practice and policy. Candidates will be exposed to the multiple frameworks that inform education research and various methodologies employed in collecting and analyzing data. During the last 6 weeks of the course, the course focuses on research related to the teaching of mathematics in the middle school and high school and pedagogical content knowledge, including research on teaching and learning, curricula and instructional delivery, assessment, and the relationship of socio-cultural, economic, and language use to teaching and learning discipline-specific content. Students will develop and implement small discipline-specific research projects, identifying research questions, conducting a literature search, developing a theoretical framework, and collecting and analyzing data. NOTE: Offered concurrently with TCH 483.

TCH 454 | RESEARCH METHODS & DISCIPLINARY INQUIRY: SCIENCE | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)

This course introduces students to education research methods and discipline-specific research and inquiry. During the first five weeks, the course focuses on basic questions, issues, and theoretical frameworks central to the purpose, conceptualization, conducting, writing, reading and using education research as a means for informing education theory, practice and policy. Candidates will be exposed to the multiple frameworks that inform education research and various methodologies employed in collecting and analyzing data. During the last 6 weeks of the course, the course focuses on research related to the teaching of the sciences in the middle school and high school and pedagogical content knowledge, including research on teaching and learning, curricula and instructional delivery, assessment, and the relationship of socio-cultural, economic, and language use to teaching and learning discipline-specific content. Students will develop and implement small discipline-specific research projects, identifying research questions, conducting a literature search, developing a theoretical framework, and collecting and analyzing data. NOTE: Offered concurrently with TCH 484.

TCH 471 | TEACHING ENGLISH IN THE HIGH SCHOOL 1 | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)

This course introduces students to the theoretical and practical issues of teaching the English language arts in secondary classrooms. The course introduces candidates to research-based and theoretically grounded best practices in the teaching of reading, writing, speaking, and listening skills and sensibilities. Students will practice and reflect on writing instructional objectives, developing lesson plans, designing a curriculum unit, creating a classroom environment, and implementing instructional delivery strategies and methods, including the use of technology resources, that meet the needs of diverse learners, including English language learners and students who speak nonmainstream dialects of English. Students will reflect on their own emerging educational philosophies and theories. They will also demonstrate commitment to teaching as a professional who acts responsibly, ethically, and collegially in accordance to Vincentian personalism. 30 Level 2 Field Experience hours required. Offered during Fall term.

T&L 425 and status as a Graduate Education student or status as a TEACH student are prerequisites for this class.
TCH 472 | TEACHING HISTORY AND THE SOCIAL SCIENCES IN THE HIGH SCHOOL 1 | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course introduces students to the theoretical and practical issues of teaching history and the social sciences in secondary classrooms. The course introduces candidates to research-based and theoretically grounded best practices in the teaching of the basic concepts of the seven social science disciplines. Students will practice and reflect on writing instructional objectives, developing lesson plans, designing a curriculum unit, creating a classroom environment, and implementing instructional delivery strategies and methods, including the use of technology resources, that meet the needs of diverse learners, including English language learners and students who speak nonmainstream dialects of English. Students will reflect on their own emerging educational philosophies and theories. They will also demonstrate commitment to teaching as a professional who acts responsibly, ethically, and collegially in accordance to Vincentian personalism. 30 Level 2 Field Experience hours required. Offered during Fall term.
T&L 425 and status as a Graduate Education student or status as a TEACH student are prerequisites for this class.

TCH 473 | TEACHING MATHEMATICS IN THE HIGH SCHOOL 1 | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course introduces students to the theoretical and practical issues of teaching mathematics in secondary classrooms. The course introduces candidates to research-based and theoretically grounded best practices in the teaching of mathematics in all its representations. Students will practice and reflect on writing instructional objectives, developing lesson plans, designing a curriculum unit, creating a classroom environment, and implementing instructional delivery strategies and methods, including the use of technology resources, that meet the needs of diverse learners, including English language learners and students who speak nonmainstream dialects of English. Students will reflect on their own emerging educational philosophies and theories. They will also demonstrate commitment to teaching as a professional who acts responsibly, ethically, and collegially in accordance to Vincentian personalism. 30 Level 2 Field Experience hours required. Offered during Fall term.
T&L 425 and status as a Graduate Education student or status as a TEACH student are prerequisites for this class.

TCH 474 | TEACHING THE SCIENCES IN THE HIGH SCHOOL 1 | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course introduces students to the theoretical and practical issues of teaching the sciences in secondary classrooms. The course introduces candidates to research-based and theoretically grounded best practices in the teaching of the different sciences, including biology, chemistry, environmental science, and physics. Students will practice and reflect on writing instructional objectives, developing lesson plans, designing a curriculum unit, creating a classroom environment, and implementing instructional delivery strategies and methods, including the use of technology resources, that meet the needs of diverse learners, including English language learners and students who speak nonmainstream dialects of English. Students will reflect on their own emerging educational philosophies and theories. They will also demonstrate commitment to teaching as a professional who acts responsibly, ethically, and collegially in accordance to Vincentian personalism. 30 Level 2 Field Experience hours required. Offered during Fall term.
T&L 425 and status as a Graduate Education student or status as a TEACH student are prerequisites for this class.

TCH 471. The course provides students opportunities to continue to explore and develop research-based and theoretically grounded best practices in the teaching of the basic concepts of the seven social science disciplines with an emphasis on reflective and collaborative practice. The course provides extensive opportunities for planning, using, and evaluating a variety of instructional strategies, including the use of technology resources, through teaching demonstrations and modeling and field experiences. Students will fine-tune and reflect on writing instructional objectives, developing lesson plans, designing a curriculum unit, creating a classroom environment, and implementing instructional delivery strategies and methods that meet the needs of diverse learners, including English language learners and students who speak nonmainstream dialects of English. And like in TCH 471, students will reflect on and clearly articulate orally, in writing, and through practice an educational philosophy and theory. Students will also demonstrate commitment to teaching as a professional who acts responsibly, ethically, and collegially in accordance to Vincentian personalism. 30 Level 2 Field Experience hours required. COREQUISITE(S): Taken concurrently with TCH 451 or SCG 451. Offered during Winter term.
TCH 471 and status as a Graduate Education student are prerequisites for this class. This class is taken concurrently with either TCH 451 or SCG 451.

TCH 482 | TEACHING HISTORY AND THE SOCIAL SCIENCES IN THE HIGH SCHOOL 2 | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course continues students’ immersion into the pedagogical content knowledge development and practices that began in TCH 422 and TCH 472. The course provides students opportunities to continue to explore and develop research-based and theoretically grounded best practices in the teaching of the basic concepts of the seven social science disciplines with an emphasis on reflective and collaborative practice. The course provides extensive opportunities for planning, using, and evaluating a variety of instructional strategies, including the use of technology resources, through teaching demonstrations and modeling and field experiences. Students will fine-tune and reflect on writing instructional objectives, developing lesson plans, designing a curriculum unit, creating a classroom environment, and implementing instructional delivery strategies and methods that meet the needs of diverse learners, including English language learners and students who speak nonmainstream dialects of English. And like in TCH 472, students will reflect on and clearly articulate orally, in writing, and through practice an educational philosophy and theory. Students will also demonstrate commitment to teaching as a professional who acts responsibly, ethically, and collegially in accordance to Vincentian personalism. 30 Level 2 Field Experience hours required. COREQUISITE(S): Taken concurrently with TCH 452 or SCG 451. Offered during Winter term.
TCH 472 and Advanced Teacher Candidate Standing are prerequisites for this class. This class is taken concurrently with either TCH 452 or SCG 451.

TCH 481 | TEACHING ENGLISH IN THE HIGH SCHOOL 2 | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course continues students’ immersion into the pedagogical content knowledge development and practices that began in TCH 421 and TCH 471. The course provides students opportunities to continue to explore and develop research-based and theoretically grounded best practices in the teaching of reading, writing, speaking, and listening skills and sensibilities, with an emphasis on reflective and collaborative practice. The course provides extensive opportunities for planning, using, and evaluating a variety of instructional strategies, including the use of technology resources, through teaching demonstrations and modeling and field experiences. Students will fine-tune and reflect on writing instructional objectives, developing lesson plans, designing a curriculum unit, creating a classroom environment, and implementing instructional delivery strategies and methods that meet the needs of diverse learners, including English language learners and students who speak nonmainstream dialects of English. TCH 471 and status as a Graduate Education student are prerequisites for this class. This class is taken concurrently with either TCH 451 or SCG 451.
TCH 483 | TEACHING MATHEMATICS IN THE HIGH SCHOOL 2 | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course continues students’ immersion into the pedagogical content knowledge development and practices that began in TCH 423 and TCH 473. The course provides students opportunities to continue to explore and develop research-based and theoretically grounded best practices in the teaching of mathematics in all its representations with an emphasis on reflective and collaborative practice. The course provides extensive opportunities for planning, using, and evaluating a variety of instructional strategies, including the use of technology resources, through teaching demonstrations and modeling and field experiences. Students will fine-tune and reflect on writing instructional objectives, developing lesson plans, designing a curriculum unit, creating a classroom environment, and implementing instructional delivery strategies and methods that meet the needs of diverse learners, including English language learners and students who speak nonmainstream dialects of English. And like in TCH 474, students will reflect on and clearly articulate orally, in writing, and through practice an educational philosophy and theory. Students will also demonstrate commitment to teaching as a professional who acts responsibly, ethically, and collegially in accordance to Vincentian personalism. 30 Level 2 Field Experience hours required. COREQUISITE(S): Taken concurrently with TCH 453 or SCG 451. Offered during Winter term.
TCH 473 and status as a Graduate Education student are prerequisites for this class. This class is taken concurrently with either TCH 453 or SCG 451.

TCH 484 | TEACHING THE SCIENCES IN THE HIGH SCHOOL 2 | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course continues students’ immersion into the pedagogical content knowledge development and practices that began in TCH 424 and TCH 474. The course provides students opportunities to continue to explore and develop research-based and theoretically grounded best practices in the teaching of the different sciences, including biology, chemistry, environmental science, and physics with an emphasis on reflective and collaborative practice. The course provides extensive opportunities for planning, using, and evaluating a variety of instructional strategies, including the use of technology resources, through teaching demonstrations and modeling and field experiences. COREQUISITE(S): Taken concurrently with TCH 454 or SCG 451. Offered during Winter term.
TCH 474 and status as a Graduate Education student are prerequisites for this class. This class is taken concurrently with either TCH 454 or SCG 451.

TCH 495 | ASSESSMENT ISSUES IN SECONDARY EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course introduces candidates to theoretical and philosophical issues related to educational assessment. It addresses the range of assessments teachers will encounter in school settings, including individual cognitive and social and emotional assessments; course material, curricula, and disciplinary program assessments; and large scale high-stakes testing. The course provides candidates opportunities to explore student, program, and curricular assessment issues, including assessment methods and tools; standardized, quantitative, and qualitative assessments; formal and informal assessments; formative and summative assessments; integrated, self-, and peer assessments; cultural, social, economic, and language influences on assessments; and issues of reliability and validity in assessment. Offered during Fall, Winter, and Spring terms. COREQUISITE(S): Taken in conjunction with TCH 471/ TCH 472/TCH 473/ TCH 474 OR TCH 481/TCH 482/TCH 483/TCH 484.
T&L 425 and status as a Graduate Education student are prerequisites for this class. This class is taken concurrently with (TCH 471 or TCH 472 or TCH 473 or TCH 474) or (TCH 481 or TCH 482 or TCH 483 or TCH 484).

TCH 590 | STUDENT TEACHING | 6 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is the culminating experience for TEACH Program students and requires 11 weeks of onsite student teaching in a high school content area classroom. The course requires students to be in a high school full-time, participating in both in-class instruction and extra-curricular activities related to the school. Open only to TEACH Program Students; Student teaching application and approval required. (6 credit hours)

TCH 591 | STUDENT TEACHING SEMINAR | 2 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course must be taken concurrently with TCH 590. The seminar format provides students an opportunity to reflect on their student teaching experiences and to reach back and consider what they have learned in the TCH Program and their next steps as practicing teachers. COREQUISITE(S): TCH 590. (2 credit hours)

Teaching and Learning (T&L)

T&L 400 | CLINICAL EXPERIENCES WITH INFANTS AND TODDLERS | 1 quarter hour
(Graduate)
Teacher candidates will observe and interact with infants and toddlers (25 clock hours). Appropriate lesson planning and assessment techniques and tools will be emphasized in the seminar. (1 credit hour)

T&L 401 | CLINICAL EXPERIENCE IN EARLY LANGUAGE AND LITERACY DEVELOPMENT | 1 quarter hour
(Graduate)
Teacher candidates will observe and interact with young children and their families in programs, related to language and literacy development. A weekly seminar is required. (1 credit hour)

T&L 402 | CLINICAL EXPERIENCES WITH PRE-SCHOOLERS | 1 quarter hour
(Graduate)
Candidates will observe and interact with preschool-age children (25 clock hours). Appropriate early childhood curricula, assessment and instructional methodologies will be emphasized. COREQUISITE(S): T&L 407. (1 credit hour)
Admission to a College of Education graduate program is a prerequisite for this class.
T&L 403 | CLINICAL EXPERIENCES IN PRIMARY GRADES | 1 quarter hour (Graduate)
Students will observe, interact with, and teach primary-age children (25 clock hours). Appropriate curricula, assessment and instructional methodologies for children in the primary grades (K-3) will be emphasized. (1 credit hour)
Admission to a College of Education graduate program is a prerequisite for this class.

T&L 404 | INTRODUCTION TO ELEMENTARY EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This is the first in a sequence of theory and practice courses that serves to familiarize teaching candidates with the world of elementary schools. Through observation and participation in schools, self-reflection, independently created assignments, cooperative learning assignments and classroom discussion, candidates will acquire familiarity with schools and classrooms including: social/cultural context, classroom climate, classroom management, curricular coherence, standards-based instruction, and teacher professional beliefs and practices. Written critical reflections and papers serve as initial foundation for the development of teaching philosophies.

T&L 405 | INTRODUCTION TO THE ROLE OF SCHOOL SERVICE PERSONNEL: SCHOOL NURSE | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course focuses on organizational aspects of the school environment including the role of the school nurse as the administrator of the school health program, and as an advocate for children. The course also explores legal mandates that impact school communities, parent communication, common psychological issues impacting today's children, and the importance of collaborating with the school counselor, social worker, special education teacher, and other relevant personnel. Only students in the School Nurse program may take this course.

T&L 406 | LANGUAGE DEVELOPMENT IN EARLY CHILDHOOD (BIRTH TO 8) | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course examines language acquisition and development in young children, including culturally and linguistically diverse learners and children with atypical language development. Attention will be given to dialectical issues as these apply to growth and development of linguistic competencies through the early childhood years. Explored in this course are the core topics of linguistic?morphology, syntax, semantics, pragmatics, phonetics, and phonology. Psycholinguistic and sociolinguistic theories anchor the discussion of language learning in childhood. Issues of language delay and processing of symbolic information to facilitate the development of articulation, fluency, voice, and functional language are included.

T&L 407 | PREPRIMARY PROGRAMS: CURRICULUM AND STRATEGY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Students will plan, implement and evaluate activities that promote the physical, emotional, social, spiritual, creative, and cognitive development of preschool children from diverse cultural and socioeconomic backgrounds. Methods of facilitating children's play, individualization through building on children's experiences, learning styles and interests, using technology, and developing learning centers will be emphasized. Assessment practices are incorporated in this experience.

T&L 408 | CURRICULUM AND INSTRUCTION IN PRIMARY GRADES | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course provides an examination of the objectives, content, methods and materials used in the primary grades of elementary schools. A variety of teaching methods and classroom management strategies will be discussed and illustrated, including teacher-led instruction and student-centered instruction. Students will be encouraged to reflect upon their own emerging educational philosophies and teaching styles as they take part in laboratory and clinical experiences. Many opportunities for planning, using and evaluating a variety of teaching methods will be offered. Each student will prepare one teaching unit on a primary social studies theme. Appropriate tests and assessment are included.

T&L 409 | PROFESSIONAL PRACTICE IN ELEMENTARY SCHOOLS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course is an introduction to the professional roles required of elementary school teachers. Students will develop a knowledge-based framework for considering the many factors involved in decision-making in an elementary classroom. This framework will serve to guide students as they create a social studies curriculum unit, which integrates planning skills, teaching strategies, classroom management and evaluation techniques. Daytime clinical hours are required during this course. (Only for Special and Elementary Education (SEE) majors).

T&L 410 | CHILDREN'S LITERATURE AND FAMILY LITERACY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course addresses literacy development in young children and the roles of families and early childhood programs in fostering that development. Strategies for enhancing literacy, such as word play, storytelling, conversations will be provided and all appropriate genres of children's literature will be explored. Finally, the course features appropriate poetry, early books for infants and toddlers, read-aloud materials, and all genres of children's literature for young children.

Admission to a College of Education graduate program is a prerequisite for this class.

T&L 411 | ASSESSMENT IN EARLY CHILDHOOD INCLUSIVE SETTINGS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Candidates will study, use, and evaluate early childhood assessment methods and tools that are appropriate for young children with diverse learning, cultural, and socioeconomic experiences. Focus of the course is on the teacher candidate's acquisition of knowledge and skill regarding an array of formal and informal assessment instruments and techniques used to gather information needed for making decisions about typical and atypical children served in individual and group learning situations. Focus is directed toward the development of curricular goals and instructional approaches that evolve from the assessment information. Such information is used to create learning plans, including Individualized Family Service Plans (IFSP) and Individualized Education Plans (IEP), serving child and family responsibly.

Admission to a College of Education graduate program is a prerequisite for this class.
T&L 412 | EMERGING READING AND LANGUAGE ARTS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course focuses on the curriculum content and sequence, instructional and assessment strategies as well as considerations integral to the creation of authentic, effective emergent literacy environments and engagements for first through third grade. Theory and practice principles are woven into course assignments and required field experiences designed to observe, teach, and reflect upon instructional decisions made for individual as well as groups of children. Prevailing curricular and instructional models (e.g., code-based, meaning-oriented, balanced) and their histories are compared and contrasted. The influences of development, home language(s) and dialect(s) (especially those of U.S. metropolitan areas), and educational settings are studied and applied to candidate instructional planning and teaching. Case studies and lesson planning facilitate the application of course content. T&L 404 and admission to a College of Education graduate program are prerequisites for this class.

T&L 413 | READING/LANGUAGE ARTS IN THE INTERMEDIATE GRADES | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course extends Emerging Reading and Language Arts to facilitate increased independence in students as strategic readers and competent writers. It focuses on the further development of reading comprehension and writing abilities in the intermediate grades. Emphasis is placed on the complex nature of literacy addressing issues such as content-area literacies, learning in and across languages, and critically consuming and producing a wide variety of texts (including online, multimedia and print based). Application of course material is facilitated through fieldwork focusing on the design, teaching, and reflection on literacy lesson(s) for intermediate learners. T&L 412 and admission to a College of Education graduate program are prerequisites for this class.

T&L 415 | TEACHING AND LEARNING ELEMENTARY SCHOOL SCIENCE | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course is an introduction to materials, methods and strategies for helping students in grades 1-6 become scientifically literate: i.e., to understand the nature of science and its impact on technology. Particular attention will be given to theoretical views about how children learn science, the proper use of materials and equipment, the development of scientific thinking, e.g., skills in observing, classifying, collecting, and interpreting data, questioning strategies, and ways to assess student progress. Inquiry-based lesson plans and case studies invite application of course content. Daytime field required during this course.

T&L 414 or T&L 409 and admission to a College of Education graduate program are prerequisites for this class.

T&L 416 | TEACHING AND LEARNING ELEMENTARY SCHOOL MATHEMATICS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course is an introduction to materials, processes for developing, and strategies for mathematical literacy in grades 1-6. Particular attention will be given to the theoretical views about how children learn mathematics, the proper use of manipulative materials, the development of mathematical thinking, e.g., skills in estimation, pattern recognition, or spatial perception; the use of technology, and ways to assess student progress. Lesson planning, teaching, and critical reflection are an integral component of this course. Clinical hours required.

T&L 404 or T&L 409 and admission to a College of Education graduate program are prerequisites for this class.

T&L 418 | LEARNING THROUGH THE ARTS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course focuses on the arts (visual art, music, drama and dance) as an integral component of teaching and learning in the elementary school curriculum. Students will explore a variety of art forms and disciplines to develop a critical aesthetic and artistic vocabulary. Students learn to help children utilize artistic media in the exploration and expression of thoughts and feelings. Emphasis is placed on design, construction, and implementation, and assessment of authentic conceptual classroom arts activities that integrate the arts with other classroom curricula. Daytime clinical hours (10) are required during this course.

T&L 419 | CURRICULUM AND STRATEGIES: SOCIAL STUDIES | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course is an introduction to an integrated view of social studies for engaged citizenship. Through the study of strategies (such as concept formation, historical inquiry, role-play, etc), materials (such as primary sources) teacher candidates will learn and apply principles of curricular integration to create curriculum/units that engage elementary learners in the exploration of issues, ideas, and perspectives that impact our world. T&L 404 and admission to a College of Education graduate program are prerequisites for this class.

T&L 420 | MATH AND SCIENCE IN EARLY CHILDHOOD | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course applies child development principles to the planning of science and mathematics experiences for both typically and atypically developing young children. Emphasis is placed on understanding how children develop problem-solving skills, and on recognizing how teachers can facilitate inquiry-discovery experiences for young children with diverse learning styles and needs. Course assignments include participation in experiments and field-based experiences in mathematics and sciences. Teacher candidates are required to develop and provide developmentally and culturally appropriate activities in science and mathematics activities for young children. SCG 404, T&L 432, and admission to a College of Education graduate program are prerequisites for this class.

T&L 421 | CHILD AND FAMILY IN THE URBAN COMMUNITY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course focuses on understanding the diversity of children and families in approaches to development, learning, and disability. Strategies in developing positive and supportive relationships with families of young children with special needs, including family-centered practices, will be explored. Particular attention is given to the challenges faced by teachers and other professionals in early intervention in assessing children's needs and providing services, which are reflective of the child’s development within his/her diverse cultural and community context. In addition, the course examines ways to develop and maintain productive and collaborative relationships among professionals and families, communities, and other professionals across the range of support systems in the IFSP and IEP planning processes.
T&L 422 | CLASSROOM ASSESSMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course focuses on study, use, and evaluation of assessment practices in diverse, elementary school contexts. Assessment is addressed as part of instructional systems, attending to issues including: the appropriate use of standardized measures, formal and informal classroom assessment, portfolio development, as well as reporting to all stakeholders. This course also emphasizes ways of involving students and parents in assessment processes, how to observe and assess children individually and in classroom settings, and the use of numerous technologies as components of a classroom assessment system. Admission to a College of Education graduate program is a prerequisite for this class.

T&L 423 | FUNCTIONAL BEHAVIOR ASSESSMENT: INTERVENTION AND SUPPORT IN EARLY CHILDHOOD | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is designed to prepare early childhood pre-service teachers to work with children who present a variety of challenging behaviors in the classroom. Grounded in principles of Applied Behavior Analysis, the philosophy of the course is based on the premise that understanding the underlying causes of children's externalizing and internalizing behavior enables the teacher to utilize appropriate techniques in conducting behavior intervention and classroom management. Using Positive Behavioral Support and Functional Behavior Analysis (a competency required for all teachers under the provisions of IDEA), students will learn how to design and develop a Behavior Intervention Plan. Diverse methods for addressing a variety of behaviors are explored and practiced through field-based assignments that include application of behavioral assessment and intervention tools, as well as techniques. Understanding the impacts of current legislation, policy and research on practice is fostered and developed. SCG 404 and admission to a College of Education graduate program is a prerequisite for this class.

T&L 424 | INTRODUCTION TO SECONDARY EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is an introduction to the DePaul Secondary Education program as well as the professional world of secondary school teaching. In this course, candidates develop the knowledge and skills necessary for being a reflective practitioner. Candidates focus on understanding themselves (professional identity) and their behaviors in teaching situations with students in schools. These insights, combined with subject-matter knowledge, guide the development of various course assignments. Candidates will learn how to observe effectively in a school setting, to identify school governance issues, to understand school environment and the current social issues that shape it, and will experience a variety of teaching methods and resources for their future teaching. Candidates will acquire knowledge of important social concepts and theories that affect education, especially as they affect educational change in urban societies. As candidates become aware of differences in individual, ethnic, and cultural group attitudes, values and needs, they also will learn to recognize the complexities of teaching and learning in a pluralistic society. Candidates will be committed to teaching as responsible professionals who act ethically as well as in a collegial fashion. In addition to class attendance, candidates are required to complete 15 daytime fieldwork hours as part of the course. It is highly recommended that this course be taken concurrently with SCG 406.

T&L 425 | CURRICULUM AND INSTRUCTION IN SECONDARY EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will examine materials, methods, and techniques appropriate for teaching in secondary schools. Topics include writing instructional objectives, developing lesson plans, designing a curriculum unit, understanding classroom management and assessment related issues. Students will be encouraged to reflect upon their own emerging educational philosophies as well as draw from previous courses they have taken. Students will be given many opportunities for planning, using and evaluating a variety of instructional strategies while preparing and teaching a micro lesson in front of their peers. Students will be committed to teaching as a professional acting responsibly, ethically, and collegially in accordance to Vincentian Personalism. 30 hours Level 1 Field Experience required.

T&L 426 | TEACHING WRITING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Prepares teacher candidates for teaching writing and composition at the middle and secondary school levels. The course focuses upon methods of teaching composition, examination of literature and research about the composing process, the development of language and reading skills, and the assessment and evaluation of writing. The development of writing curriculums will also be explored. 30 hours Level 2 Field Experience required.

T&L 427 and admission to a College of Education program are prerequisites for this class.

T&L 427 | YOUNG EXCEPTIONAL CHILD: METHODS AND CHARACTERISTICS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is a survey of the field of early childhood special education, including the Early Intervention System. Characteristics of infants, toddlers, and young children with special needs are examined in this course. Methods of working with different disabilities during children's early years will be explored. Strengths and needs of families of young children with disabilities and collaboration with family members will be emphasized. Understanding the impacts of current legislation, policy, and research on practice is fostered and developed. Completing 15 hours of field experience in an early childhood special education setting is a part of this course's requirements.

SCG 404 and admission to a College of Education graduate program is a prerequisite for this class.

T&L 428 | TEACHING LITERATURE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Prepares teacher candidates for teaching literature at the middle and secondary school levels. Examines contemporary issues in the teaching of literature, explores methods of teaching major literary genres, addresses problems of literacy and focuses on the transactional nature of reading and writing. Emphasis on developing a repertoire of ways of teaching literature and a variety of literature curriculums. 30 hours Level 2 Field Experience required.

T&L 425 and admission to a College of Education program are prerequisites for this class.
T&L 429 | TEACHING YOUNG ADULT LITERATURE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is devoted to the study of Young Adult Literature: an exciting, emerging field. Issues and ideas to be examined include the following: current debates regarding issues in curriculum and teaching; selecting, reading, evaluating, and teaching young adult literature; cultivation of life-long reading habits and literacy development. Students will become familiar with major writers of young adult literature, read diverse texts, explore major genres, review award winning novels, consider the role of the media, and develop creative projects.

T&L 425 and admission to a College of Education program are prerequisites for this class.

T&L 430 | TEACHING LITERACY K-12 | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course provides an overview of the curriculum, instruction, and assessment strategies used in K-12 classrooms to foster and develop students' L1 and L2 literacies. Through guided examination of prevailing theories of language acquisition and development that currently influence classroom practices across the K-12 continuum, this course enables future teachers of world languages to grow in their understanding of the literacy-learning contexts that students will bring to their language classrooms. Issues that emerge in planning and conducting literacy instruction in schools are discussed and deliberated through university classroom experiences as well as required field experiences (15 hours, minimum; level 1). Course participants enjoy multiple opportunities to apply and analyze theories; to observe, critique, and practice instructional strategies; to make informed curricular and instructional decisions; and to use assessment to inform one's planning.

T&L 431 | EARLY LANGUAGE AND LITERACY DEVELOPMENT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will focus on enhancing language development and promoting early literacy in young children. It addresses instruction and assessment of language and literacy skills. Students will learn how family/child and teacher/child interactions promote language and literacy development and learning. Implementation of language and literacy curricula and activities that lead to growth in the key areas of literacy development for preschool and primary aged children will be explored. (Combination of previous T&L 406 and T&L 412).

T&L 432 | EARLY CHILDHOOD CURRICULUM STRATEGIES AND PHILOSOPHY (BIRTH-8) | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Operating from a constructivist curricular perspective that considers individual child and the social learning context, candidates will plan, implement and evaluate activities that promote the physical, emotional, social, spiritual, aesthetic, creative, and cognitive development of young children from diverse cultural and socioeconomic backgrounds. Methods of facilitating children's play; individualization through building on children's experiences, learning styles and interests; using technology and, developing learning centers will be emphasized. A variety of teaching methods and classroom management strategies will be discussed and illustrated, including teacher led instruction and student-centered instruction. Students will be encouraged to reflect upon their own emerging educational philosophies and teaching styles as they take part in laboratory and field experiences. Many opportunities for planning, using and evaluating a variety of teaching methods will be offered. Each student will write at least one teaching unit on a primary social studies theme. (Combination of previous T&L 407 and T&L 408).

Admission to a College of Education graduate program is a prerequisite for this class.

T&L 433 | EARLY CHILDHOOD SPECIAL EDUCATION STRATEGIES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course focuses on a range of curricular and instructional strategies that foster individual abilities and meet the individual learning needs within the contexts of group and individualized instruction in a variety of learning situations: classrooms, community and home environments. Teacher candidates acquire knowledge and skill to develop individual long-term and short-term educational service plans based on knowledge of children's needs and abilities; families' goals, priorities, and concerns for their children; communities; content areas; and early childhood curriculum goals. (Replaced HSC 408).

T&L 434 | LITERACY, LITERATURE, & THE YOUNG CHILD | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course addresses the phenomenal process of literacy development in young children. Strategies for enhancing literacy through unlocking the phonemic code, acquiring vocabulary, and comprehending oral as well as print messages are emphasized within the context of choosing and using high-quality literature for children from birth through age 8. Curriculum content and sequence, instructional strategies, and assessment processes are interwoven across course assignments and field experiences. The influences of development, home languages and dialects (especially those of U.S. metropolitan areas), and educational settings are studied and applied to candidates' instructional planning and teaching.

SCG 404 and admission to a College of Education program is a prerequisite for this class.

T&L 436 | TEACHING AND LEARNING SECONDARY SCHOOL MATHEMATICS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Prepares teacher candidates for teaching mathematics at the middle school and secondary school levels. Examines contemporary issues in teaching mathematics, methods of teaching secondary mathematics, and recent history in mathematics curriculum development of alternative teaching strategies and the implementation of the NCTM Standards. Lesson and unit development, evaluation and classroom management also will be discussed. 30 hours Level 2 Field Experience required.

T&L 425 and admission to a College of Education program are prerequisites for this class.

T&L 439 | METHODS OF SECONDARY SCIENCE EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is designed to update teachers in the methods of teaching science. This involves reviewing the processes of science, theories of learning, and instructional strategies appropriate to laboratory science. This course also provides an update on the current trends and issues in science education as well as an analysis of successful science curricula programs. 30 hours Level 2 Field Experience required.

T&L 425 and admission to a College of Education program are prerequisites for this class.
T&L 440 | EARLY CHILDHOOD EDUCATION CROSS-CULTURAL STUDIES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
The course will discuss the historical, philosophical and cultural foundations of the education of young children in a multicultural society, emphasizing the role of ethnicity in development of young children within the context of families, childcare centers, and educational systems. Topics include: history of immigration and predictions for the future; the effects of population shifts on the education of English Language Learners; the impact of laws, litigation and executive orders on bilingual/English-as-a-Second Language education; understanding cultural and linguistic differences regarding locating and using educational resources.

T&L 441 | EARLY CHILDHOOD METHODS AND MATERIALS FOR ENGLISH LANGUAGE LEARNERS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course focuses on best practices in teaching and learning in ESL and bilingual early childhood classroom contexts. Students will learn about different approaches and methodologies currently used to support the development of listening, speaking, reading and writing in social and academic contexts in learners of English as a second language. Curriculum based-assessment, cultural awareness and self-reflective practice will also be addressed.

T&L 442 | EARLY LITERACY DEVELOPMENT AND SECOND LANGUAGE ACQUISITION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will examine the process of learning and using a second language. Research in second language acquisition (SLA) is multi-disciplinary in nature, reflecting the complexity of language learning and use. Linguistic, psychological and social processes that underlie language(s) learning and use will be introduced and applied to the understanding of this learning in young children. In this course, language acquisition theory concerning relationships between early literacy and oral language development in first and subsequent languages will be addressed.

T&L 443 | ASSESSING YOUNG BILINGUAL/ESL LEARNERS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will focus on the discussion of basic principles and current approaches to assessment of language learning students in ESL Children's language learning or language learning of children in EST and bilingual early childhood and early elementary educational settings. The different purposes of process and product assessment tools, authentic and curriculum-based forms of assessment, issues in the assessement of English Language Learners (ELLs), and assessment in academic areas for early elementary ELLs will be explored.

T&L 444 | INTERNSHIP IN EARLY CHILDHOOD ESL/BILINGUAL EDUCATION SETTINGS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will focus on application of the theories in effective teaching practices, and assessment procedures appropriate for young English Language learners. It will emphasize on application of knowledge gained from previous ESL/ELL courses, and demonstration of skills necessary to work collaboratively and effectively with families of young English Language learners. Professional behaviors that respect, value, and support all children’s native language and culture will be reinforced. (100 clock hours)

T&L 449 | STANDARD AND CONTENT-BASED METHODS OF TEACHING WORLD LANGUAGES K-12 | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course prepares candidates to teach world languages at the elementary, middle and secondary school levels consonant with an aligned approach to meeting national and state WLE standards and Common Core standards. It examines the theory and practice of traditional or standard methods of teaching world languages (e.g., communicative approach, natural approach, etc.) with an emphasis on developing alternative, post-method strategies and using diverse resources, as well as on reformulating world languages instruction to integrate subject matter content into the curriculum, including science, social studies, math, fine arts, etc. Engages candidates in understanding and applying the "Five Cs" - Communication, Cultures, Connections, Comparisons, and Communities outlined in the national standards toward this end. Lesson and unit development, evaluation/assessment, and classroom management also will be discussed. Issues that emerge in planning and instruction are discussed and deliberated through university classroom experiences as well as required fieldwork (20/15 hours; level 1 in language of certification).

T&L 425 and admission to a College of Education program are prerequisites for this class.

T&L 455 | READINGS IN AMERICAN HISTORY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Prepares students for teaching American history at the secondary level. Readings focus on the foundational texts of American history from the colonial era to the late 20th century; with an emphasis on gaining content knowledge and applying it to teaching in the secondary classroom. Class discussions focus on matters of interpretation, evidence, and historiography. Offered during Fall and Summer terms.
T&L 465 | ART AND PEDAGOGY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course alongside T&L 466 is intended as a two-course sequence each complementing the other. As T&L 465 explores the source materials and major concepts of visual art's content, T&L 466 focuses on teaching visual art. Building from the content requirements from their program or experience, students will understand how the art studio (content) experiences where ideas are developed translate to the preparation of teaching. Students will do this through multiple curriculum based projects intended for use in their own classrooms, including a 6th - 12th grade general course reader to assist in introducing an art historical overview that influences and connects to general middle and high school studio practices. As students work on these projects, they will continue to reflect on the coursework they have done in the content area as well as watching and learning from classroom teachers and teaching artists in the field. They will contemplate such questions as: What are the connections among the arts disciplines? How can they be taught together, creating interdisciplinary courses at the middle and high school levels? What are the differences among the arts disciplines and what does this mean for secondary pedagogy? How can teachers use inquiry with their students, making sure they have enough guidance to learn about artists, artistic periods and the nature of how artworks are produced. Site visits required. 30 hours Level 2 Field Experience required.

T&L 425 and admission to a College of Education program are prerequisites for this class.

T&L 466 | TEACHER AS ARTIST | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course builds on the work in T&L 465, which alongside T&L 466 is intended as a two-course sequence each complementing the other. As T&L 465 focuses on the art of teaching the visual arts, T&L 466 explores the source materials and major concepts of visual art content. Historically, artistic movements have shaped and currently identify the theories we use to define our most immediate environment. The major concepts can be connected to the artist studio and to the descriptions some artists make about the studio as a teaching space. How can they be taught together, creating interdisciplinary courses at the middle and high school levels? What are the differences among the arts disciplines and what does this mean for secondary pedagogy? How can teachers use inquiry with their students, making sure they have enough guidance to learn about artists, artistic periods and the nature of how artworks are produced. Site visits required. 30 hours Level 2 Field Experience required.

T&L 425 and admission to a College of Education program are prerequisites for this class.

T&L 480 | INTERNSHIP WITH INFANTS AND TODDLERS | 2 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Candidates conduct 75 hours of intense supervised fieldwork in an infant/toddler center where they are observing and documenting behavior and interactions, planning activities, and assessing development in children ages birth to 3. Candidates will also participate in a twice a quarter, hour and a half, seminar to reflect and discuss aspects of infant/toddler development and care, making connections between theory and practice. Onsite meetings with groups of candidates will be held weekly for supervision and reflection on practice. (2 credit hours)

T&L 481 | INTERNSHIP IN PRESCHOOL SETTING (75 CLOCK HOURS OF SUPERVISED EXPERIENCE) | 2 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Candidates conduct 75 hours of intense supervised field work in preschool during the winter quarter. The internship is designed for advanced ECE candidates to be taken before student teaching. Candidates taking this internship have either taken ECE 310: Preprimary Programs: Curriculum and Strategy (at the undergraduate level), and T&L 432: ECE Curriculum Strategies and Philosophy (at the graduate level) in a previous quarter, or they are taking these courses as co-requisites with this internship. (2 credit hours)

Admission to a College of Education graduate program is a prerequisite for this class.

T&L 482 | INTERNSHIP IN PRIMARY SETTING (75 CLOCK HOURS OF SUPERVISED EXPERIENCE) | 2 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Candidates conduct 75 hours of intensive supervised field work in a primary grade (K-3) during the spring quarter. The internship is designed for advanced ECE candidates to be taken before student teaching. Candidates taking this internship have either taken ECE 311: Curriculum and Instruction in Primary Grades (at the undergraduate level), and T&L 432: ECE Curriculum Strategies and Philosophy (at the graduate level) in a previous quarter, or they are taking these courses as co-requisites with this internship. (2 credit hours)

Admission to a College of Education graduate program is a prerequisite for this class.

T&L 495 | DESIGNING CURRICULUM FOR INFANTS AND TODDLERS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Research in neuroscience indicates that the brain developmental foundation for all later learning is created in the first three years of life. The impact and impetus for the adults (families and caregivers) who nurture and teach children from birth to three will be explored in this course. The course will examine the developmental milestones, as well, as each child’s developmental profile to create a developmentally appropriate curriculum to enhance the foundation for all later learning. The course explores ways to provide a safe and challenging environment; to focus on play as a vehicle for learning for optimal developmental outcomes. Collaboration with families in addressing each child’s development is featured in the course. Candidates will be expected to design curricula to meet the needs of linguistically and culturally diverse children, as well as young children with special needs.

T&L 525 | READING, WRITING, AND COMMUNICATING ACROSS THE CURRICULUM | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course analyzes the relationships among reading, writing, speaking and listening. It encourages middle level and high school teachers in all disciplines to take these interrelationships into account and to plan curricula that include current teaching strategies to enable students to become better readers, writers and thinkers in their various content-areas. This course will also concentrate on group process and its role in effective teaching within and across content-areas. Language use, learning and teaching are considered from a multicultural perspective. 30 hours Level 2 Field Experience required.

TCH 471 or TCH 472 or TCH 473 or TCH 474, and status as a Graduate Education student is a prerequisite for this class.
T&L 585 | INDEPENDENT STUDY TOPICS | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course is a self-directed graduate course in the Visual Arts Education Program. Candidates who consider this course must develop a written proposal for their work and identify professional expectations of this quarter long immersion in advanced study. Candidates may select from a range of possible pursuits from preparing a new body of work or preparing an exhibition to working within a host of selected museums or galleries as an art education intern throughout the city and suburbs. All candidates are required to meet with a faculty member for an initial interview to discuss contact hours, needs and limitations, critique times and locations and the required documentation from the 11 week experience. All proposals must be approved by a faculty member in the program.

T&L 575 | WLE HISTORY, POLICY, AND CURRICULUM DEVELOPMENT | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course engages students in WLE curriculum development and language program advocacy, creation, and sustainability based on an examination of federal and state WLE history and policies and on a review of national and state standards. Reviews theory and application of curriculum development to world language instructional programs, such as design, scope and sequence, organizational patterns, materials and media, teacher training, parent and community involvement, and evaluation. Principal world language education program models are examined and analyzed in light of WLE history, policy, and standards (20/15 hours; level 1).

T&L 449, BBE 407, BBE 526, BBE 560 and BBE 570 are prerequisites for this class.

T&L 583 | FIELD EXPERIENCE LAB | 1 quarter hour (Graduate)
This field-based course will facilitate pre-service teacher candidates’ experiences working in elementary and middle school classrooms. This supervised field experience is an opportunity to apply content and pedagogical knowledge in authentic settings. Approximately 24 clock hours are scheduled at school sites and visible during registration though subject to modification based on changes in schools’ schedules. Students will enroll in this course multiple times during their program across diverse sites and will engage in different activities aligned with concurrent courses. (1 credit hour)

T&L 584 | PRE-STUDENT TEACHING FIELD EXPERIENCE | 1 quarter hour (Graduate)
This field-based experience occurs in teacher candidates’ student teaching sites. Scheduling is negotiated between teacher candidate and mentor teacher based on classroom social studies and science content area schedule. This supervised field experience is an opportunity to apply content and pedagogical knowledge as well as gain introductory contextual understandings of student teaching site. For T&L EE majors, completed application to student teaching. (1 credit hour)

T&L 585 | ELEMENTARY STUDENT TEACHING | 6 quarter hours (Graduate)
Students will be placed for a minimum of 10 weeks in an elementary school. Seminar will meet once a week, in the participating schools and/or at DePaul. At first, they will focus on issues of immediate concern to student teachers. As the students gain experience the seminar will examine six or eight classroom issues, that is, topics which students have found to be significant on the basis of their experience. These would include such things as assessment, evaluation, classroom management, curriculum planning, and relationships with colleagues. After delineating what the issues are, students would be expected to analyze and discuss readings which relate to the issues. Open only to DePaul students.
COREQUISITES: T&L 586. (6 credit hours)

T&L 586 | ELEMENTARY STUDENT TEACHING SEMINAR | 2 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course is taken concurrently with T&L 585, Elementary Student Teaching. In this course, students will have opportunities to reflect on their student teaching experience and prepare materials to support their employment searches and careers as teachers. COREQUISITE(S): T&L 585 (2 credit hours)

T&L 588 | INDEPENDENT STUDY IN TEACHING AND LEARNING | 1-4 quarter hours (Graduate)
PREREQUISITE(S): Permission of instructor, department chair and Associate Dean. (1 credit hour)

T&L 589 | THESIS RESEARCH IN TEACHING AND LEARNING | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
A student writing a thesis registers for this course for four quarter hours of credit. Where the thesis research and the writing of the thesis itself are prolonged beyond the usual time, the program advisor may require the student to register for additional credit.
SCG 451 and an approved thesis proposal is a prerequisite for this class.

T&L 590 | SECONDARY STUDENT TEACHING | 6 quarter hours (Graduate)
Students will be placed for a minimum of 10 weeks in a secondary school. Seminar will meet once a week, in the participating schools and/or at DePaul. At first, they will focus on issues of immediate concern to student teachers. As the students gain experience, the seminar will examine six or eight classroom issues; that is, topics which students have found to be significant on the basis of their experience. These would include such topics as assessment, evaluation, classroom management, curriculum planning, and relationships with colleagues. After delineating what the issues are, students would be expected to analyze and discuss readings that relate to the issues. Open only to DePaul students. (6 credit hours)

T&L 591 | SECONDARY STUDENT TEACHING SEMINAR | 2 quarter hours (Graduate)
This course is taken concurrently with T&L 590, Secondary Student Teaching. In this course, students will have opportunities to reflect on their student teaching experience and prepare materials to support their employment searches and careers as teachers. COREQUISITE(S): T&L 590 (2 credit hours)
T&L 595 | WORLD LANGUAGES STUDENT TEACHING | 6 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Student teaching is the culminating experience of the World Languages certification program. It is a ten-week, 30-hour/week experience. Students must successfully complete student teaching with a grade of B- or better in a language classroom in which they are seeking certification to teach. The course is taken concurrently with T&L 592, World Languages Seminar. Open only to DePaul students. (6 credit hours)

T&L 593 | WORLD LANGUAGES SEMINAR | 2 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is taken concurrently with T&L 592, World Languages Student Teaching. In this course, students will have opportunities to reflect on their student teaching experience and prepare materials to support their employment searches and careers as teachers. COREQUISITE(S): T&L 592 (2 credit hours)

T&L 595 | EARLY CHILDHOOD STUDENT TEACHING | 6 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course requires students to participate in supervised teaching at a cooperating school, five full days per week, for an academic quarter. Part of the teaching will be in a preprimary setting and part will be in a primary setting. Feedback and discussion of issues encountered in student teaching as well as new materials and techniques of student teaching will be included. Open only to DePaul students. (6 credit hours)

T&L 596 | EARLY CHILDHOOD STUDENT TEACHING SEMINAR | 2 quarter hours
(Graduate)
In this seminar, candidates will reflect upon their teaching experiences with young children, and collaborate with colleagues and instructor to identify alternative strategies for problematic situations. Candidates will outline ways to maintain strategies for lifelong learning. In addition, candidates will share resume development and job-search strategies. COREQUISITE: T&L 595.

T&L 600 | REGISTERED STUDENT IN GOOD STANDING | 0 quarter hour
(Graduate)
Registration in this course is open to students who are not registered for any other courses but need to complete requirements/assignments for previously taken courses. It provides access to University facilities. Permission of advisor required. (0 credit hours)

Status as a Graduate Education student is a prerequisite for this class.

T&L 606 | SCHOOL NURSE INTERNSHIP | 8 quarter hours
(Graduate)
In this eleven week supervised experience, the school nurse intern has the opportunity to develop and use school nursing methods, materials, and programs in public schools. He or she will work under the guidance of a licensed school nurse and will be supervised by a DePaul supervisor who is also a licensed school nurse.

T&L 614 | INDUCTION INTO THE TEACHING PROFESSION: EARLY CHILDHOOD | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is designed to assist first-year early childhood teachers in making the transition from student teaching to teacher. It creates a bridge between first-year teachers’ formal education and the realities of their classrooms, providing assistance with: understanding their induction into the profession; analyzing their new educational contexts; actualizing their educational philosophies; developing their pedagogical knowledge; and identifying and making the most of professional support systems within their schools. T&L 595 is a prerequisite for this course.

T&L 615 | SPECIAL TOPICS IN TEACHING AND LEARNING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Current issues and problems in education will be discussed. Focus will be current research and best practices.

T&L 625 | CANDIDACY CULMINATING PROJECT (STUDENT IN GOOD STANDING) | 0 quarter hour
(Graduate)
Registration in this course is required of all students who are not enrolled in a course but are completing culminating projects for their program of study, including theses, papers, and final portfolios. It provides access to university facilities. Permission of advisor required. (0 credit hours)

Status as a Graduate Education student is a prerequisite for this class.

Telecommunications (TDC)

TDC 599 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 1-8 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Independent study supervised by an instructor. Independent study form required. Can be repeated for credit. (variable credit)

TDC 690 | RESEARCH SEMINAR | 1-4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Readings and discussion on current research topics. Students may register for this course no more than twice. PREREQUISITE(S): Consent of the instructor. (variable credit)

TDC 696 | MASTER’S PROJECT | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
(4 credit hours) Students may register for this course only after their advisor has approved a written proposal for their project. PREREQUISITE(S): Consent of advisor. Independent study form required.

TDC 698 | MASTER’S THESIS | 2 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Students may register for this course only after their advisor has approved a written proposal for their thesis. Students must continue to register for this course every quarter after their first registration in it until they complete their project or thesis to the satisfaction of their advisor. They earn two hours of credit for each such registration but only four hours of credit will apply for degree credit. PREREQUISITE(S): Consent of advisor. Independent study form required. (2 quarter hours)

Theatre Studies (THE)

THE 105 | HISTORY OF DRAMATIC LITERATURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Second course in a 3 course sequence. Status as an Undergraduate or Graduate Theatre student is a prerequisite for this class.

THE 106 | HISTORY OF DRAMATIC LITERATURE: CLASSICAL GREECE AND ROME | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Third course in a 3 course sequence. Status as an Undergraduate or Graduate Theatre student is a prerequisite for this class.
THE 141 | DESIGN WORKSHOP | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
First course in a 3 course sequence. This course will introduce the student to the art of theatre design through the examination of the principles of design and composition, the elements of theatrical design, and the nature of collaboration and communication. It is intended for those who plan to work in the theatre in areas other than design. The focus is on the aesthetic, rather than the technical, aspects of design and on how design fits into the framework of the study of theatre in general. The class is intended to prepare those pursuing a career in theatre for communicating and working with designers. Assignments will emphasize the development of creative skills and a common vocabulary in order to establish a framework for informed choices, and for an appreciation of theatre design and its various areas of specialization. In this first course we will explore the fundamentals of visual design. Students will do several basic design projects during the quarter. The process of theatrical design will be introduced by working with a classic script for design analysis and preliminary design parameters.

Status as an Undergraduate or Graduate Theatre student is a prerequisite for this class.

THE 142 | DESIGN WORKSHOP | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Second course in a 3 course sequence. In the second quarter the class will focus on applying the fundamentals of the first course to the specific task of theatre design. The emphasis is on scenic design, but costumes, lighting, and sound will also be featured. The script analyzed in the first course will continue to be used to explore the integration of design parameters with the aesthetic and conceptual goals of production. We will also discuss the design process and some of the techniques utilized by designers. Later in the quarter another classic script will be used as the foundation for a final design project culminating in a scenic design for that script.

THE 141 and status as an Undergraduate or Graduate Theatre student is a prerequisite for this class.

THE 143 | DESIGN WORKSHOP | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Third course in a 3 course sequence. In the third quarter the emphasis is on group artistic work. In this 'practicum' quarter students will collaborate in small groups on a design for a mythological story. Following that, and for the bulk of the quarter, students will be assigned to design teams consisting of director and designers. These teams will follow the entire design process, using a Shakespeare script, culminating in the formal presentation of a fully designed production. It is important to understand that the focus of this course is on design process and communication. The technical aspects of theatre design are kept to a minimum. The course aims to help theatre artists in their collaboration with theatre designers.

THE 142 and status as an Undergraduate or Graduate Theatre student is a prerequisite for this class.

THE 208 | UNDERAGE ONSTAGE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This class examines theatrical literature from the Ancient Greeks through today to uncover how and why playwrights include children in their works and what effect this has on audiences. Contributing variables examined while studying these plays include the time period in which they were written, the social, political, and cultural context, the playwright’s style, and the genre. The class will also explore the choice faced by a number of directors: whether to use children true to the age in the script, or adults who can still play young people. The vocabulary of Dramatic Text Analysis will be taught and used when providing written and oral examination of plays covered.

THE 210 | SCRIPT ANALYSIS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A study of classical text analysis. Using dramatic literature from naturalism to the avant garde, students will dissect how the plays work structurally.
Status as an Undergraduate or Graduate Theatre student is a prerequisite for this class.

THE 211 | GAGA, GUNS & GAULTIER - THE POWER OF THEATRE IN POP CULTURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The course investigates popular culture’s influence on theatre and performance, and theatre’s influence on pop culture. We will look at plays that were written as spectacle performances, plays written based on pop culture trends, and essays relating to pop culture and its relation to the concept of performance. The course investigates complex ways in which popular culture in performance generates meaning and effect, and will also examine traditions of vaudeville, spectacle theatre, fashion shows, and the rise of the pop-cultural icon. Through readings of plays, essays, and videos, this course will address the following questions: How does the cross-fertilization between pop culture and theatre work, and why? How has dramatic literature used pop culture trends to communicate to audiences? Have other art forms used theatre to create, or enhance their performative aesthetics?

THE 212 | INTRODUCTION TO THEATRE STUDIES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is a general introduction to the aesthetics of the various forms and permutations of theatrical performance. It is a study of performance as an art, with particular emphasis upon its cultural and social influences in our society, and its relationship with the other arts and humanities. The course will emphasize the development of skills for articulate verbal and written response to performances.
Status as an Undergraduate or Graduate Theatre student is a prerequisite for this class.

THE 214 | ETHICAL DECISION MAKING IN THE THEATRE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Ethical decisions are a challenging part of every profession. Ethical Decision-Making in the Theatre assumes two basic questions: What is an ethical decision, and why is ethics of particular resonance for theatre professionals? Through readings, writing assignments, and class discussions, this course will work to define ethics by examining examples of both ethical and unethical behavior, will examine the ethical role that theatre plays in our society, and will debate the responsibilities that we carry into the profession as theatre artists and professionals. Through group work we will determine a framework for ethical thinking and will apply this framework to specific situations facing the theatre profession today, ultimately determining whether or not the result is an ethical decision.
Status as an Undergraduate or Graduate Theatre student is a prerequisite for this class.

(Undergraduate)
In this course students explore the underlying formal principles found in various works of architecture, music, visual art, literature, and theatre. Each week students apply these principles to the writing and presentation of short theatrical works. The goal of this course is to expose students to a wide array of approaches to dramatic form.
Status as an Undergraduate or Graduate Theatre student is a prerequisite for this class.

THE 234 | DRAMATURGY I: INTRODUCTION TO DRAMATURGY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The first course in the three-term Dramaturgy I sequence. Through reading about the history of dramaturgy, the course develops the intellectual framework necessary to think about the art and science of the discipline and focuses on the study of dramaturgical issues of the past two decades. Students work on theoretical projects. Some attendance at theatre productions may be required.
Status as an Undergraduate or Graduate Theatre student is a prerequisite for this class.

THE 235 | DRAMATURGY I: INTRODUCTION TO PRODUCTION DRAMATURGY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The second class in the three-term Dramaturgy I sequence, this course continues the work of THE 234 and emphasizes writing in a workshop context as well as the process of collaboration and hands-on collaboration itself. Much of the student work focuses on in-house theoretical theatre productions. Students who are dramaturgy-criticism majors prepare to work on their first dramaturgy project, the MFAI short plays.
Status as an Undergraduate or Graduate Theatre student is a prerequisite for this class.

THE 236 | DRAMATURGY I: TYA AND PLAYWORKS DRAMATURGY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The third class in the three-term Dramaturgy I sequence, this course focuses on the dramaturgy for theatrical productions aimed at young audiences. A major emphasis in the class is the preparation of the actor packets and study guides for The Theatre School's Playworks series.
Status as an Undergraduate or Graduate Theatre student is a prerequisite for this class.

THE 246 | STAGE DESIGN FOR NON-MAJORS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The course introduces the essential principles of designing for the stage. The art of stage design is explored through the analysis and interpretation of dramatic literature. Students will engage in script analysis, creative research, critical writing, model building and rendering to present visual and written work that represents their personal reflection on the plays examined in the class.

THE 254 | POLITICAL THEATRE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course surveys political theatre from the ancient Greeks right up until today. Through an examination of the political contents of specific plays and of theoretical reading, such as manifestos, the course instructs students in critical thinking, the relationship between form and content, and between a society and one genre of art.

THE 256 | THEATRE FOR YOUNG AUDIENCES DRAMATIC LITERATURE: PLAYS FOR THE ONCE AND FUTURE AMERICAN AUDIENCE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Over the past one hundred years or so, artists and educators in the United States have specifically dedicated themselves to sharing and creating aesthetic, creative experiences for young people. But what have been the impulses behind these plays and creations? Why specifically devise a theatre for young audiences (TYA)? Are children just little adult theatre goers or has an approach and methodology developed through the years to speak directly to young people? The goal of this introductory course is find some answers to these questions by surveying the history of dramatic literature for children in the United States from the beginning of the last century to the present day. Through readings, lectures, workshops, and discussions students will gain insight into the TYA theories, philosophies, styles, and practices that have accumulated over the years. By excavating the past and examining the present, students will achieve further appreciation and understanding of the spectrum of theatrical experiences written and improvised for children.

THE 258 | SHADOWS OF UNDERSTANDING: THE HOLOCAUST IN THEATRE AND PERFORMANCE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The Holocaust of the 20th Century perpetrated and executed by Nazi Germany, has both seared itself into people's consciousness and become very much a part of world culture. Theatre and performance have been created to try to understand this event and search for meaning. Created through multiple perspectives and styles - historical and political, philosophical and religious, realistic and surrealistic, using dark humor and the power of memory, focusing on gender relations - there is no one method of presenting the Holocaust artistically. Through a close investigation of key theatre and performances, students will discover many works that were unknown to them and that will help to shed some light on these representations more deeply, reflecting the complexity of the Holocaust in a search for understanding and ultimately seeking to answer this imperative, "Can and should art be made from representations of genocidal atrocity?"
THE 260 | CHICKS, MEAN GIRLS AND FEMMES FATALES: WOMEN WRITING IN THE AMERICAN THEATRE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course examines ninety years of women's dramatic writing in America from the jazz age to today. We will look at plays written by women, and theoretical essays about the plays and playwrights; biographies, as well as historical materials illuminating plays; themes and forms. Identity has always been important to American dramaturgy and women have always occupied a unique place in the theatre: as actresses, as spectators, as icons, as demons, and finally as creators. Women have been playwrights but they have also been producers and theatre adventurers.

THE 261 | OCULAR PROOF: SHAKESPEARE'S INFLUENCE ON CINEMA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Shakespeare's plays explore the scope and depth of the human experience. Using the visual elements of cinema, these epic stories translate effectively for modern audiences. Students will read four plays by Shakespeare, and explore their thematic and dramatic interpretations on film: two adapted from Shakespeare's themes and two cinematic versions of the plays themselves which will elucidate the 'ocular proof' of Shakespeare's influence on cinema.

THE 268 | INTRODUCTION TO THE PRODUCTION PROCESS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course introduces students to the specifics of the production process and focuses on similarities and differences between the curricular perspective of the production process at The Theatre School and that of the professional world. University Internship Program (UIP)

UIP 200 | DESIGN YOUR FUTURE: CAREER AND MAJOR EXPLORATION | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Who am I? What should I study? What kind of work might I enjoy? Through this course, you will build the foundation needed to design your career. We will start with career reconnaissance, exploring and building language around your VIPS (values, interests, personality, and skills). Next, we will dive into market reconnaissance, exploring careers and majors of interest. Using these as your guide, you will leave this course with a strong foundation for sound career decision making.

UIP 205 | CREATE YOUR CAREER TOOLKIT | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Creating a written and oral suite of career communications is essential to your career development. In order to be competitive in today’s job market, you need to be able to craft and share your story. Through written communication, such as resumes and cover letters to oral communication, such as your elevator pitch and interview stories, you need to understand how to effectively communicate brand YOU. Through this course, students will learn by doing, leaving with their own personalized career communication toolkit that will help them to navigate networking, apply for a job, and/or ace the interview.

UIP 210 | HARNESS YOUR STRENGTHS | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Talent is the source of true potential. Using the Clifton StrengthsFinder assessment, you will identify your talents - the thoughts, feelings, and behaviors that come most naturally to you. Through this course, we will explore ways for you to build your natural talents into your strengths and apply them to several areas of your career development.

UIP 215 | LAUNCH YOUR SEARCH: JOB AND INTERNSHIP SEARCH STRATEGIES | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Want an internship, but are not sure where to start? Or maybe you are seeking full-time employment and want to be more strategic in your search. Through this course, you will design a customized search strategy that will position you for success in landing your dream job or internship! Topics covered include self-discovery, identifying/researching target organizations, refinement of your career communication suite, offer/negotiation best practices, and designing/executing your search plan.

UIP 220 | INTERNATIONAL STUDENTS: JOB AND INTERNSHIP SEARCH STRATEGIES | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
As an international student, you may have additional challenges to your job/internship search. From navigating visa matters to overcoming cultural barriers, you need to carefully manage each phase of the process. With these challenges also comes opportunities - from your global experience to unique set of skills and abilities. Through this course, you will develop strategies for seeking employment in the U.S. and/or your home country, while understanding how to navigate the nuts and bolts of the U.S search for internships, OPT, or H-1B jobs.
UIP 225 | REPOSITION YOUR CAREER PLAN | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Are you at a career crossroads? Career journeys are rarely linear. More often than not, one of your internships and/or classes makes you reconsider your career plan. While changing the direction of your career may seem intimidating, this experience is completely normal. Utilizing our three step process for repositioning your career plan (self-assessment/research/design), this course will provide you with the tools needed to reposition your career plan and get back on track for success.

UIP 243 | EXPLORING A CAREER ABROAD | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This 2-credit course is part of a 2 course series. This course will give undergraduate students who are interested in careers abroad a chance to analyze their own individual skills, values, and interests and explore career options. In addition, this course will involve a study abroad trip to London, England. In this study abroad component students will meet alumni who have worked and lived abroad. Students will research international careers ahead of the meeting and ask thoughtful and relevant questions to support their reflection assignments on careers abroad. The course will provide a self-evaluation that will help point students towards careers that best fit their interests and abilities. It will also introduce students to many different careers abroad and the process of finding work abroad and following through with the process.

UIP 244 | DESIGNING A CAREER ABROAD | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This 2-credit course is part of a two course series. The series is designed to help undergraduate students who are interested in working abroad, with an opportunity to assess values, skills, interests and career options as well as connect with alumni who are working abroad in London, England. In this second course of the series, students will learn how their recent study abroad experience as well as their academic courses, campus activities and work experience will transfer to the workplace and be of interest to potential employers. Students will then identify the wealth of transferable skills they have already acquired, which will give employers concrete evidence of their qualifications for positions. These transferable skills, such as how to communicate clearly and effectively, the ability to be creative and solve complex problems, and having had multicultural experiences are characteristic of a liberal arts education and are much in demand. At the end of the course, students will learn how to articulate both their academic accomplishments and transferable skills in a way that will impress potential employers.

UIP 250 | NAVIGATING THE WORKPLACE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
UIP 250 integrates academic curriculum with supervised work experiences in both the private and public sectors. Internships are an essential part of a student’s academic experience at DePaul. The course promotes the life-long education process of integrating work and learning; enables students to view their internship experiences within a broad world perspective; assists career decision-making; drives individual success through on-the-job experiences; and provides students with valuable networking and other career-development opportunities. NOTE: All UIP 4-credit courses are completely online and all fulfill DePaul’s Experiential Learning requirement. If you have completed the requirement already, the course will be counted as a general elective course. Your internship must be approved by the UIP Manager, located in the Career Center.

UIP 290 | STUDENT-ATHLETES: EXPLORE CAREERS | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
As a student athlete, you possess a unique set of skills and experiences that are highly valued by employers. Through this course, you will build the foundation of you career game plan. We will start with career reconnaissance, exploring your VIPS (values, interests, personality, and skills), paying close attention to your unique transferable skills and abilities you bring to the table as a student athlete. Next, we will dive into market reconnaissance, exploring careers and majors of interest. Using these as your guide, you will leave this course with a strong foundation for sound career decision making and the ability to make connections between your sports-related skills and the workplace.

UIP 295 | STUDENT-ATHLETES: KICKSTART YOUR CAREER STRATEGY | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Just as training for your sport makes you a better athlete, developing a strategic career plan will help ensure you are career-ready upon graduation. Through this course, you will build upon the foundation of your career game plan and learn how to develop and implement strategies that propel you towards career success. From resumes to networking to interviewing, all aspects of career development will be covered. Whether you are looking to transition out of sport or stay in the game, this course will help you develop a solid search strategy while helping you position the value of your student-athlete experience to potential employers.

VFX 440 | PREVISUALIZATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course introduces techniques for the rapid prototyping of creative camera and visual solutions for film and animation. Topics include story analysis, shot and sequence design, technical visualization for production, and editing an effective previsualized animatic. PREREQUISITE(S): DC 420.
VFX 474 | COMPOSITING I | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Compositing is the art and science of manipulating the content of photographic images. This project-based course builds the core set of compositing live-action filmed footage. Students will be introduced to design, supervision and production of a visual effects project. PREREQUISITE(S): DC 420 or ANI 423 or equivalent 3D experience.
VFX 478 | COMPOSITING II | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course expands compositing into three dimensional space for set extensions and the integration of computer generated content. Emphasis on camera tracking, projections, multi-pass, and 3D compositing techniques. Students will supervise CG integration into a visual effects project.
VFX 474 is a prerequisite for this class.
VFX 480 | CG COMPOSITING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course introduces advanced concepts in compositing utilizing computer generated and filmed assets. Workflows will be explored employing matchmoving, realistic CG lighting, render passes, and multi-pass compositing techniques. PREREQUISITE(S): VFX 474 and ANI 439.
VFX 490 | ADVANCED TOPICS IN VISUAL EFFECTS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Advanced study in visual effects focusing on a specific area each quarter such as: virtual reality, stereoscopic compositing, visual effects supervising, visual effects producing, optical effects, etc. May be repeated for credit.
VFX 599 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 1-8 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Independent study form required. PREREQUISITE(S): Consent of instructor. (variable credit)

Women's and Gender Studies (WGS)
WGS 100 | WOMEN'S LIVES: RACE/CLASS/GENDER | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will introduce students to Women's & Gender Studies by exploring a range of issues that contemporary women face through experiences stratified by race, class, gender, sexuality, and disability. Topics will include women's identities; body image and the media; women's sexuality; intimate relationships and families; women, violence and criminalization; women's work, wage discrimination, and welfare reform; women's health issues, such as reproductive rights, and medical research. Participants will have opportunities to examine ways that this stratification interacts in varied eras, cultures, and sub-cultures to shape women's lives. Students will engage in an activist focus as they are introduced to the layers of oppression that affect many women's lives, from the personal to the global. As they analyze social, cultural, and political issues through "gendered lenses", participants may expand a view of their personal lives to include a framework that encourages resilient responses to such oppression.
WGS 105 | DATING IN COLLEGE: ENDING VIOLENCE AND CREATING CHANGE | 2 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Growing out of a decade-long community-based service learning program held in Chicago high schools entitled “Take Back the Halls: Ending Violence in Relationships and Schools,” this college course brings topics of activism, community, and ending violence into a university setting. In this course, we will meet weekly to examine personal, interpersonal, and institutionalized systems of oppression including issues of domestic violence, sexual violence, racism, homophobia, and sexism, among others. We will explore how these issues intersect with one another and will formulate strategies on how to activate against forms of violence and systems of oppression. The course will operate as a seminar in which we will discuss these issues in relation to readings, popular media, and personal lived experience.

WGS 200 | WOMEN’S STUDIES IN TRANSNATIONAL CONTEXTS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course is a transnational approach to Women's & Gender Studies, examining how goods, money, and media images of women cross national in new ways. A further focus is on how this transformation of national boundaries depends not only upon political changes but also upon economic and cultural shifts. This transnational perspective pays attention to the inequalities and differences intersecting race, class, and gender that arise from new forms of globalization as well as from older histories of colonialism and racism. The course is designed to give the student an in-depth look at a world of connections that do not necessarily create similarities in how women variously experience that world. It introduces students to research by and about women that reflects transnationality in all of its possibilities and challenges.

WGS 212 | GROWING UP FEMALE IN THE U.S. | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course examines what it means to grow up female in the contemporary U.S. It explores the ways in which girls develop and are socialized through childhood and adolescence, focusing on how families, schools, peers, and the larger culture influence young women’s lives and the ways in which race, ethnicity, class and sexual orientation affect their growth and learning and how their interaction might affect the behaviors and choices of young women as they mature.

WGS 215 | GENDER AND EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course examines gender as a social construct and its meanings within the context of educational institutions, its implications for teaching and learning, and organizational practices that may oppress and/or empower groups or individuals. Emphasis is given to social forces within the larger society that affect education and schooling; sex-stereotyping and gender bias; teacher behaviors; attitudes, practices, and expectations; student motivation and achievement; principles of non-sexist education; gender bias in settings outside of schools; current issues in the media and popular culture; and the ways in which gender bias and sexism interact with other forms of prejudice, inequality, and oppression.

WGS 219 | WOMEN AND SCIENCE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
In this course, we will examine the evolving relationship between women and science. There are growing opportunities for and representation of women in scientific fields in many parts of the world, but there are historical contexts that should be considered and remaining challenges that are being addressed. We will begin the course with a review of the scientific method—what is this process and what about it has enabled it to attain legitimacy as a way of knowing the world? We will also learn about female scientists in the fields of environmental geography and ecology who have broken gender norms and boundaries and made notable scientific contributions. Students will learn through several case studies of both well-known scientists as well as those who are less widely recognized. Finally, we will examine aspects of science and culture that have impacted women's participation and achievements.

WGS 225 | CONSTRUCTING GENDER AND SEXUALITY | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course will consider the theories and practices of differential embodiments and the experiences of bodies that don’t fit the norm: queer bodies, fat bodies, transgender bodies, bodies of color. In Western/Global North cultures, the mind is given more importance than the body, and historically, oppressed groups have been associated more with bodies than minds. The course will aid in understanding and questioning the dominant norms that promote “normal” bodies and normative embodiment and offer alternative theories and practices of embodiment. Students interested in the performing arts, social and health sciences, fat studies and disability studies, as well as women's and gender studies students will find valuable frameworks in this class.

WGS 230 | CONTESTED BODIES | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course will explore through interdisciplinary theory and research how gender and sexuality are socially constructed. It will examine how such constructions have evolved over time and how individuals of diverse identities and cultural backgrounds have been affected by the changes. Discussion will focus on the roles played by powerful societal institutions (e.g. religious, political, and medical) in effectively defining what is considered gender-appropriate behavior and legitimate sexual expression. Finally, the activism of recent social movements to psychological and politically empower individuals who are neither heterosexual nor traditionally masculine or feminine will be explored.

WGS 249 | GENDER AND POLITICS IN IRELAND | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course explores the relationship between gender and politics in Ireland, focusing on the political history of gender relations in Ireland, women's political involvement throughout the enormous changes of the 20th Century, and contemporary legal and public policy issues related to sex/gender. The attitudes and behaviors of women as voters, activists, officeholders and peace activists will be examined, as will Ireland’s place in global gender issues. We will pay particular attention to the changes that have taken place since Ireland’s entry into the EU, the "Celtic Tiger" transformations of the Irish economy, and the impact of the recent worldwide economic recession on gender and politics in Ireland, along with the efforts of women, North and South, to further the process of peace in the North, which has been wracked by violence for several decades. Cross-listed with IRE 249.
WGS 250 | FEMINIST FRAMEWORKS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course introduces feminist theories and methodologies with an emphasis on how theoretical frameworks shape specific research, policies, and praxis. The course will provide an introductory exploration of feminist frameworks in relationship to specific issues and questions within women's studies, with some attention to the resulting research/analytic methods. The class will delineate, analyze and compare the underlying assumptions and frameworks of a variety of feminist theories (i.e. historical materialist, liberal, radical, standpoint and identity-based, critical race, postcolonial, and transnational theoretical frameworks) in relation to a set of issues and questions (e.g. violence against women, reproductive rights). The class will explore the relationship between these frameworks and knowledge production, public policy, and social change efforts within national and transnational contexts. Thus, the students will be able to discern how theories frame research questions and methods, as well as how they frame policy issues and action proposals; and students will be able to analyze the theoretical frameworks comparatively.

WGS 255 | DECONSTRUCTING THE DIVA | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course studies the figure of the diva as a powerful cultural text, central to both understanding historical conceptions of socially normative femininity and to uncovering and examining our own present-day conceptions of what it means to be feminine, to be a woman. Through fiction, drama, biography, autobiography, film, audio recordings, and gender, the course explores representations of the diva in literature, art, and popular and high culture. The goal of this course is to investigate the ways that “diva” has actually been code for women (and sometimes men) behaving outside of societal norms. Students will do this both historically and thematically, uncovering a path in which “women behaving badly” are routinely censured, and silenced. Students will also investigate how women both resist and re-appropriate this label. This course also seeks to explore the lives of both extraordinary and ordinary women, contextualizing the historical moments that they both contested and were sometimes consumed by.

WGS 260 | GENDER, SEXUALITY AND VIOLENCE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course explores the social, political, and cultural contexts of interpersonal violence with a focus on sexual violence and dating violence among and against adolescents and young adults. This course also will emphasize activist strategies and anti-violence movements.

WGS 270 | WOMEN IN CARIBBEAN SOCIETIES | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This is a survey course which focuses on the diverse social, cultural and political realities of women in the Caribbean region across and within historical periods marked by colonialism, slavery and indentureship; anti-colonial, nationalist and labor movements; economic globalization and the emergence of the postcolony. Drawing on primary documents, images, feminist postcolonial writings, the course investigates how women of indigenous, African, Chinese, Indian and multiracial (or “mixed”) descent have been positioned within various societies, and in relationship to each other. Topics covered include visual representations of women, gender and sexuality; forms of resistance and political engagement; motherhood, reproduction and the State; women in various religious traditions; work and economic status; social class, color and femininities; popular culture.

WGS 275 | BLACK FEMINIST THEORIES IN A U.S. CONTEXT | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course introduces students to the major figures, statements, and movements that shape Black feminist thinking, writing and activism in the United States. Issues examined may include social and economic equity, beauty and voice, activism and social change; and the exploration of identity and subjectivity through the lens of intersectionality, including race, gender, sexual orientation, class, citizenship, and immigrant status. Throughout we will consider how Black feminist thought is situated in larger frameworks of Western feminist thought and its linkages with international feminist discourses.

WGS 290 | SPECIAL TOPICS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
See course schedule for current offerings.

WGS 300 | FEMINIST THEORIES | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Disagreements about what counts as feminist theory have raged as the borders of feminist discourse have shifted over the past two and a half decades. Yet most feminists continue to insist that sex/gender be considered basic categories of analysis and theory. Broadly conceived, feminist theory—historical or contemporary—represents an attempt to understand and interpret the roots and causes of women’s place in the world. This course examines how different theoretical perspectives address gender, class, racial, and sexual inequalities and the method(s) proposed for social change. Students will be required to critically engage these theories in terms of how they address the commonalities and differences among women, especially insofar as these are grounded in race, class, and sexual identifications and dissonances. This course is a core requirement for the Women’s & Gender Studies major.

WGS 250 is a prerequisite for this course.

WGS 303 | GENDER, VIOLENCE AND RESISTANCE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course explores the social and cultural contexts of interpersonal violence in women’s lives, with a focus on domestic violence, rape, harassment. The course seeks to understand how gender, race, class, sexuality, and national differences and inequalities shape the experiences of violence, the social and institutional responses to violence, and strategies for resistance and change.

WGS 305 | MOTHERING, WORK, AND REPRODUCTIVE JUSTICE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course examines the institution of motherhood and gendered and racialized divisions of labor through the framework of reproductive justice in a cross-cultural and transnational perspective. What does mothering have to do with the feminization of poverty? How does the labor of mothers impact struggles for social justice and equality? Why is making visible the work of mothering critical to the pursuit of economic justice? What are the entanglements of mothering in relation to queerness as well as heterosexuality? Central topics will include ideas about motherwork, sexuality, labor and wealth inequalities, marriage, reproductive rights and politics, and capitalism with attention to the imperatives of gender, racial, and economic justice. This course includes interdisciplinary scholarship drawing from history, popular culture, autobiography, critical race theory, feminist economics, and motherhood studies.
WGS 306 | GENDER AND FAMILIES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Gender and Families is an upper-level undergraduate course that considers issues raised by the diverse roles that women, men, and children play in families. It focuses particular attention on the social construction of gender in families, and examines families in their social, economic, and political contexts. Topics covered include adult intimate relationships, the social construction of motherhood and fatherhood, and shifting gender relations of power in families, family stress and adaptation, and the impact of social policies on families' lives.

WGS 307 | WOMEN IN THE MIDDLE EAST: BEYOND THE VEIL | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course explores how Middle Eastern Women have been represented in the media outside of the Middle East, by Arab women scholars, and "Third World" feminists and challenges these representations by focusing on issues such as veiling, the everyday lives of Middle Eastern Women, political activism, literary works, economics and social class, and media representations.

WGS 310 | FEMINIST ETHICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course explores theoretical issues regarding women's moral experience and feminist approaches to liberation from various forms of socio-cultural and political oppression. It explores the moral status of women from their own experiences and perspectives, in contrast to traditional Western ethics' characterizations, as well as feminist ethical perspectives on oppressive social practices, such as racism and violence against women, and the ethical dimensions of difference among women.

WGS 314 | ANTIRACIST FEMINISMS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course introduces students to the wide array of feminist thinking regarding ideologies of race, racism, white privilege, ethnocentrism, racial and ethnic identifications, and their relationship to gender, class, sexual and national identities and locations. The ways that racism has divided women's movements and feminist organizations will be examined along with the work of feminist scholars, writers, activists, and advocates who have articulated explicitly anti-racist theories, analyses, and programs within the U.S. as well as internationally.

WGS 316 | REPRESENTATIONS OF THE BODY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course reflects the current explosion of intellectual interest in the body as a site of cultural meaning. The course addresses the questions of how the body is socially created and sustained. It explores those questions in terms of tensions between nature and culture, body and spirit, and how discourses of power converge in and on the body.

WGS 320 | TRANSFORMATIVE JUSTICE: THEORY AND PRACTICE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course introduces students to transformative justice responses to violence that do not rely on state institutions. These include collective processes for support and healing, intervention, accountability, and prevention. The pedagogical praxis of learning will be through communal peacemaking circles and collective strategy sessions to create community responses to violence. Cross-listed as WGS 420.

WGS 322 | FEMALE IDENTITIES: YOUNG ADULT LITERATURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is an introduction to Young Adult Literature as a genre and explores how this literature relates to adolescent girls' experiences in diverse cultural contexts. It addresses themes related to physical and emotional development, the development of personal values and beliefs; the construction of identity; beliefs and attitudes about the body; interpersonal relationships; gender and sexuality; and coping with change, death, belonging, alienation, and escape. Course materials are multicultural with a focus upon the experiences of female adolescents in terms of ethnicity, culture, gender, religion, disability, as well as other dimensions of difference within national and international contexts.

WGS 324 | WOMEN IN THEATRE: A GLOBAL PERSPECTIVE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course explores constructions of lesbian lives, politics, and identity in a global context. Students will study character as a dramatic construct with respect to gender, race, and class; it examines how dramatic images are as diverse as their cultural contexts; explores the concepts of reader and viewer response to theater; and interrogates the relationship between the American theatrical image and the larger global context within which images are created.

WGS 326 | WOMEN AND LAW | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course examines the historical roots and contemporary realities of law, race, gender, and nation, and the role of women in their relation with the law, e.g., through laws and judicial decisions dealing with equal opportunity. Cross-listed as PSC 363.

WGS 330 | LESBIAN LIVES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course explores constructions of lesbian lives, politics, and communities in the U.S. using the political cartoons of artist Alison Bechdel as a primary text, along with theoretical and historical readings. Students examine the constructions of identities and politics within lesbian culture, paying particular attention to how these have changed and evolved over time, and how community can be created and sustained. Cross-listed with WGS 430.

WGS 332 | CREATING CHANGE: CONTEMPORARY GLBT POLITICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course explores the historical roots and contemporary realities of gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgendered (GLBT) politics, nationally and internationally. GLBT groups and individuals are gaining political recognition, challenging institutions, and creating change by asserting claims to rights and protections under law. Such issues as hate crimes, marriage, AIDS, and ballot initiatives over non-discrimination law and policy have entered the political mainstream since the 1970's. This course examines the GLBT movement, its political and social strategies, conflicts and issues, and the political roles played by its members as participants in political culture. Cross-listed as PSC 312 and LGQ 332.
WGS 334 | GIRLHOOD ALL AROUND THE WORLD | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will address issues related to growing up female and coming of age in the 21st century within a global context. We will focus on the following questions, what does it mean to be female, a girl, a young woman in diverse cultural and cultural contexts, examining the ways in which community, family, peers, schools and relationships with others, popular culture and public policy influence their lived experiences, attitudes, beliefs, behaviors, choices and possibilities. The analytical framework will be rooted in understanding how the intersections of race, ethnicity, class, sexual orientation, religion, and belief systems influence notions of the self, the body, and the construction of female identities.

WGS 336 | WOMEN AND FILM | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course engages in the practice of critical literacy in the viewing of films, U.S. based and international, with attention to issues of representation, images, construction of identities and circulation of messages about what it means be to female in the contemporary world. Central topics will include issues and ideas about film as art, as a cultural product, and as an industry. Various genres of films will be examined and the course will also explore women as subjects, actors, producers and critics of film.

WGS 338 | SEXUAL JUSTICE: LESBIANS, GAYS AND THE LAW | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course examines the historical and contemporary relationships between lesbians, gays, and the law in the U.S., focusing on the intersections of power, sexuality, and identity with issues of sexuality-based discrimination. It focuses on case law, along with social science and legal literature, seeking out a diversity of voices and experiences. Primary emphasis will be on cases that have come before the U.S. Supreme Court since the mid-1950's, with particular attention paid to how groups and individuals have reached out to the court system for redress of injustice and how these groups and individuals have exercised or failed to exercise power within the legal process. Cross-listed with LGQ 338.

WGS 342 | QUEER PIONEERS: CULTURE, GENDER, AND POLITICAL ACTIVISM | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course examines some of the historical roots and contemporary realities of lesbian and gay politics in the United States through the biographies of pioneering individuals whose lives and work shaped an ongoing struggle for civil rights and social justice. The biographies of individuals who, as activists and artists, rose to challenge the conventions of culture, gender, and political exclusion will be studied in-depth to both illuminate the politics of social movement and suggest how these diverse individuals and experiences may influence past and future efforts for cultural and political change. Cross-listed with LGQ 319.

WGS 345 | WOMEN, WAR AND RESISTANCE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course aims to make feminist sense of contemporary wars and conflicts. It analyzes the intersections between gender, race, class, and ethnicity in national conflicts. The class traces the gendered processes of defining citizenship, national identity and security, and examines the role of institutions like the military in the construction of femininity and masculinity. The course focuses on the gendered impact of war and conflict through examining torture, mass rape, genocide, and refugee displacement.

WGS 352 | GENDER, COMMUNITY, AND ACTIVISM: COMMUNITY-BASED LEARNING IN WGS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Gender, Community, and Activism : Community-Based Learning in WGS is an interdisciplinary experiential/service learning seminar designed for undergraduate and graduate students in the field of Women's and Gender Studies. In an effort to provide students with an experience that integrates the feminist-informed theoretical work of the classroom with practical application in the community, the course will pair students with internship opportunities at community-based organizations that focus on a cause/issue related to their particular area of scholarly interest. The course is designed to encourage learning by doing and reflecting, where students will be asked to reflect on their internship experiences outside of the classroom through course readings, written assignments, and class discussion.

WGS 354 | CONTEMPORARY KNITTING: GENDER, CRAFT, AND COMMUNITY SERVICE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will explore the gendered history of knitting and its contemporary popularity as both a creative leisure-time activity and a means of providing community service. The social history and social construction of a gendered division of labor surrounding knitting, with its complexities, provide the theoretical foundation of the course. Students will learn the basic techniques of knitting and will be expected to practice their new skills in- and out-side of the classroom. They will reach a level of proficiency sufficient to producing a minimum of three contributions to service knitting projects.

WGS 355 | WOMEN AND ART | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This class considers both the history of women artists and representations of women from other cultures around the world, from prehistory to the contemporary era. In addition, it will introduce feminist methodologies that can be applied to specific case studies. Cross-listed with HAA 366, WGS 455 and MLS 474.

WGS 362 | INTRODUCTION TO TRANSGENDER STUDIES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course considers the emerging interdisciplinary field of transgender studies and its indebtedness to transgender history and activism, paying particular attention to the relationship between trans studies in the academy and in queer and feminist communities. Introducing the student to the relationship between trans studies and feminist studies, philosophy, science and LGBTQ studies, we won't attempt to justify trans existence or identity but rather address the interlocking structures that both survey and exclude trans bodies. Cross-listed with LGQ 362.

WGS 363 | GLOBALLY QUEER: TRANSNATIONAL LGBTQ POLITICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course explores how political issues affecting lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, and queer (LGBTQ) communities and individuals are linked to global and transnational politics of citizenship, power, security, and political economy. It focuses on how gender roles, relationships, and identities are constructed, deployed, challenged, and resisted around the world, paying particular attention to how these systems and structures are interconnected. Cross-listed as WGS 463.
WGS 364 | POLITICAL AUTOBIOGRAPHY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This class explores the interplay of political, social, economic and aesthetic factors in feminist autobiography from a transnational perspective. We examine the ways that women’s autobiography is being used to write themselves into history. Story is integral in the process of healing and building solidarity and coalitions for gender based organizing. Further, autobiography creates a space for the “alter-history” to be told: the absence of testimony and experience is created for others to gain hope, strength, and deeper understanding of others and themselves. Various forms and critiques of feminist autobiographies are explored, and how each impacts the political possibilities for readers. Cross-listed with PAX 364.

WGS 375 | FEMINISMS OF THE BLACK DIASPORA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is designed to offer a critical examination of black women's experiences and thought within a global and transnational framework. The course examines works by and about black women in diverse social, political, and geographical contexts: the continent of Africa, Western Europe, Canada, Latin America, the Caribbean, and Australia. Topics to be explored will include issues of politics and ideology; power and inequality based on intersectionality of race and other dimension of identity; agency, activism, and social movements; the mass media, popular culture and social policies. Cross-listed with WGS 475.

WGS 378 | UTOPIAN AND DYSTOPIAN LITERATURE AND FILM: GENDER, RACE AND BEYOND | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
What does the future hold for humankind on this planet and elsewhere? What will life be like in the not too distant as well as far distant futures? How will societies be organized? What kinds of cultural milieus will shape life and living? How will identities be articulated and negotiated? Who will govern? Who will be in resistance? Who will be present and who will be absent? How will things come to be? These questions will form the core of our study of a genre devoted to social commentary, envisioning vastly different ideas about the future, emergent from 20th century works.

WGS 386 | BLACK WOMEN'S EXPERIENCES: VARIABLE TOPICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Topics vary. This course is designed to address issues related to the particular experiences of women in the Black Diaspora. Topics will vary in terms of their particular focus in addressing issues that are important to understanding Black women's experiences in a US context and globally--making interconnections to the experiences of women of other ethnic, cultural, and national backgrounds. The course will provide occasions for students to study and examine issues such as Black women’s cultural criticism, Black women in the arts, engagement in activism and social and political movements--literature and the media. Cross-listed with WGS 486 and ABD 386.

WGS 387 | TEEN VIOLENCE PREVENTION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course is an interdisciplinary experiential/service learning seminar in which students will participate in, and critically reflect upon, a relationship violence prevention program in Chicago area high schools. This class will explore adolescent development, considering the ways in which economic, social, political and cultural contexts influence that development. In addition, we will focus on adolescent relationships, group work with teens, aggression and violence in intimate -- in particular teen -- relationships, and evaluation of programs to prevent teen violence. Each week students will address a set of theoretical and/or practical themes that in some way relate to teen violence and aggression, as well as prevention of such violence. Discussions of each theme will draw on course readings, lecture materials, and perhaps most importantly, students’ experiences working with teens in schools.

WGS 388 | QUEER THEORY: AN INTRODUCTION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course examines some of the central texts of queer theory in order to contextualize and historicize the notion of homosexuality as a primary category of identity. The issue of sexual normativity as it relates to gay and lesbian assimilation will also be discussed. Because of the significant relationship of gender and sexuality, we will also examine theories of embodiment and take up the debates around the politics of intersect and transgender identities. Formerly WMS 284.

WGS 390 | WOMEN ACROSS CULTURES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
A critical analysis of the experiences of women around the world in diverse social contexts, examined through different disciplines, with a special emphasis on economics, politics and culture. Focus is on African, Asian and Latin American cultures and nondominant groups within western societies. (Cross-listed as WGS 490 and MLS 441)

WGS 391 | METHODS AND SCHOLARSHIP IN WOMEN'S STUDIES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
An exploration of the transforming effects that feminist methodologies and scholarship have had in the social sciences and humanities. This course emphasizes interdisciplinary research approaches, feminist publishing, and the interplay of research and activism, as it prepares students to write a research proposal. Not recommended for non-majors. (Cross-listed as WGS 491)

WGS 392 | INTERNSHIP | 1-4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
By arrangement. Variable credit.

WGS 394 | WOMEN, SELF, AND SOCIETY SEMINAR | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Women, Self and Society Seminar (cross-listed as Women’s and Gender Studies 480 and Master’s of Liberal Studies 468). Variable Topics. See course schedule for current offerings.

WGS 395 | WOMEN’S STUDIES ADVANCED SEMINAR | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The Advanced Seminar emphasizes interdisciplinary methodology and students’ independent research. Designed to be an integrating experience, the seminar will focus on discussion, response to research, and blending theory and application. The primary goal of the Advanced Seminar is the successful completion of a project or thesis reflecting your knowledge and passionate interests developed in your Women’s and Gender Studies major, and it is designed to facilitate this process. Not recommended for non-majors.

WGS 391 or instructor permission is a prerequisite for this course.
This course explores how Middle Eastern Women have been represented in the media outside of the Middle East, by Arab women scholars, and “Third World” feminists and challenges these representations by focusing on issues such as veiling, the everyday lives of Middle Eastern Women, political activism, literary works, economics and social class, and media representations.
WGS 424 | WOMEN IN THEATRE: A GLOBAL PERSPECTIVE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course examines the concepts of gender and theatrical performance with reference to history, culture, critical response, viewer interpretation, and identity in a global context. Students will study character as a dramatic construct with respect to gender, race, and class; it examines how dramatic images are as diverse as their cultural contexts; explores the concepts of reader and viewer response to theater; and interrogates the relationship between the American theatrical image and the larger global context within which images are created.

WGS 426 | WOMEN AND LAW | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course investigates the variety of ways in which women come into relation with the law, e.g., through laws and judicial decisions dealing with equal opportunity.

WGS 430 | LESBIAN LIVES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course explores constructions of lesbian lives, politics, and communities in the U.S. using the political cartoons of artist Alison Bechdel as a primary text, along with theoretical and historical readings. Students examine the constructions of identities and politics within lesbian culture, paying particular attention to how these have changed and evolved over time, and how community can be created and sustained. Cross-listed with WGS 330.

WGS 440 | GENDERED COMMUNICATION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Examines research into the ways the various aspects of communication are affected by and affect the social construction of gender. Topics covered include language and language usage differences, interaction patterns and perceptions of the sexes generated through language and communication. (Cross-listed as CMNS 523)

WGS 445 | WOMEN, WAR AND RESISTANCE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course aims to make feminist sense of contemporary wars and conflicts. It analyzes the intersections between gender, race, class, and ethnicity in national conflicts. The class traces the gendered processes of defining citizenship, national identity and security, and examines the role of institutions like the military in the construction of femininity and masculinity. The course focuses on the gendered impact of war and conflict through examining torture, mass rape, genocide, and refugee displacement. Cross-listed as WGS 345.

WGS 452 | GENDER, COMMUNITY, AND ACTIVISM: COMMUNITY-BASED LEARNING IN WGS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Gender, Community, and Activism: Community-Based Learning in WGS is an interdisciplinary experiential/service learning seminar designed for undergraduate and graduate students in the field of Women's and Gender Studies. In an effort to provide students with an experience that integrates the feminist-informed theoretical work of the classroom with practical application in the community, the course will pair students with internship opportunities at community-based organizations that focus on a cause/issue related to their particular area of scholarly interest. The course is designed to encourage learning by doing and reflecting, where students will be asked to reflect on their internship experiences outside of the classroom through course readings, written assignments, and class discussion.

WGS 455 | WOMEN AND ART | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Examines the work of the most significant women artists from the Renaissance to the present. It will also investigate how women have been represented in Western art by both male and female artists. Cross-listed as MLS 474.

WGS 460 | GENDER AND SOCIETY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Attention to the growing literature and empirical research on changing patterns in economic, psychological, and social outcomes for women and men. Consideration of various theories of gender differentiation and equality. (Cross-listed as MLS 447 and SOC 470)

WGS 462 | INTRODUCTION TO TRANSGENDER STUDIES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course considers the emerging interdisciplinary field of transgender studies and its indebtedness to transgender history and activism, paying particular attention to the relationship between trans studies in the academy and in queer and feminist communities. Introducing the student to the relationship between trans studies and feminist studies, philosophy, science and LGBTQ studies, we won't attempt to justify trans existence or identity but rather address the interlocking structures that both survey and exclude trans bodies.

WGS 463 | GLOBALLY QUEER: TRANSNATIONAL LGBTQ POLITICS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course explores how political issues affecting lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, and queer (LGBTQ) communities and individuals are linked to global and transnational politics of citizenship, power, security, and political economy. It focuses on how gender roles, relationships, and identities are constructed, deployed, challenged, and resisted around the world, paying particular attention to how these systems and structures are interconnected. Cross-listed as WGS 363.

WGS 464 | POLITICAL AUTOBIOGRAPHY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This class explores the interplay of political, social, economic and aesthetic factors in feminist autobiography from a transnational perspective. We examine the ways that women's autobiography is being used to write themselves into history. Story is integral in the process of healing and building solidarity and coalitions for gender based organizing. Further, autobiography creates a space for the "alter-history" to be told: the absence of testimony and experience is created for others to gain hope, strength, and deeper understanding of others and themselves. Various forms and critiques of feminist autobiographies are explored, and how each impacts the political possibilities for readers.

WGS 465 | GLOBALIZATION, TRANSNATIONALISM, AND GENDER | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course examines how gender-based inequities are linked to global and transnational politics of power, security, political economy, militarism, and ecology. There will be a focus on how gender roles, relationships, and identities are constructed, deployed, challenged, and resisted around the globe, paying particular attention to how systems and structures of gender, race, class, sexuality, age, ability, culture, religion, nation etc. are interconnected. It will explore how resistance to structural inequities is constructed within and across national boundaries, paying particular attention to the role of non-governmental organizations (NGOs) worldwide and how the responses of NGOs to crises (e.g., nuclearism, uneven economic development, environmental degradation) highlight the shortcomings of state-centered decision making.
This course will examine women's individual and collective involvement in social, economic, and political resistance and change. The course will focus on women's participation with attention to the ways that gender shapes the history and development of social movements organized at local, national, regional and global levels, within and across differences of race, class, ethnicity, nationality, religion, geographic location and sexuality. Concrete examples of women's and gender movements within particular historical and geographical contexts, including within Africa, Latin America, Europe, the Middle East, Asia, the United States, among others, will be highlighted.

WGS 470 | ADVANCED PSYCHOLOGY OF WOMEN AND GENDER | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
A review of research and theory on women's and gender, including sexist biases and methodology, feminist therapy, violence against women, and gender differences in the development of power and sexuality. Cross-listed as MLS 478 and PSY 561.

WGS 473 | SEMINAR IN GRADUATE PROPOSAL WRITING | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This is a required proposal writing course designed for graduate students in Women's and Gender Studies. The class will provide space for discussion, shared experiences and intellectual resources for students to be able to write effective proposals for their final MA projects or research grants grounded in feminist praxis. The main objective of the class will be to provide a structured process toward constructing proposals collaboratively, highlighting practices of peer feedback.

WGS 400 and WGS 491 are prerequisites for this class.

WGS 475 | FEMINISMS OF THE BLACK DIASPORA | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course is designed to offer a critical examination of black women's experiences and thought within a global and transnational framework. The course examines works by and about black women in diverse social, political, and geographical contexts: the continent of Africa, Western Europe, Canada, Latin America, the Caribbean, and Australia. Topics to be explored will include issues of politics and ideology; power and inequality based on intersectionality of race and other dimension of identity; agency, activism, and social movements; the mass media, popular culture and social policies. Cross-listed with WGS 375.

WGS 478 | UTOPIAN & DYSTOPIAN LITERATURE AND FILM: GENDER, RACE AND BEYOND | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
What does the future hold for humankind on this planet and elsewhere? What will life be like in the not too distant as well as far distant futures? How will societies be organized? What kinds of cultural milieus will shape life and living? How will identities be articulated and negotiated? Who will govern? Who will be in resistance? Who will be present and who will be absent? How will things come to be? These questions will form the core of our study of a genre devoted to social commentary, envisioning vastly different ideas about the future, emergent from 20th century works.

WGS 480 | SELECTED TOPICS: WOMEN, SELF AND SOCIETY | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Topics vary. See schedule for current offerings. [Cross-listed as MLS 468 and WGS 394].

WGS 485 | WOMEN, GENDER, AGENCY, AND SOCIAL CHANGE | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course will examine women's individual and collective involvement in social, economic, and political resistance and change. The course will focus on women's participation with attention to the ways that gender shapes the history and development of social movements organized at local, national, regional and global levels, within and across differences of race, class, ethnicity, nationality, religion, geographic location and sexuality. Concrete examples of women's and gender movements within particular historical and geographical contexts, including within Africa, Latin America, Europe, the Middle East, Asia, the United States, among others, will be highlighted.

WGS 486 | BLACK WOMEN'S EXPERIENCES: VARIABLE TOPICS | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Topics vary. This course is designed to address issues related to the particular experiences of women in the Black Diaspora. Topics will vary in terms of their particular focus in addressing issues that are important to understanding Black women's experiences in a US context and globally: making interconnections to the experiences of women of other ethnic, cultural, and national backgrounds. The course will provide occasions for students to study and examine issues such as Black women's cultural criticism, Black women in the arts, engagement in activism and social and political movements –literature and the media.

WGS 488 | QUEER THEORY: AN INTRODUCTION | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course examines some of the central texts of queer theory in order to contextualize and historicize the notion of homosexuality as a primary category of identity. The issue of sexual normativity as it relates to gay and lesbian assimilation will also be discussed. Because of the significant relationship of gender and sexuality, we will also examine theories of embodiment and take up the debates around the politics of intersex and transgender identities.

WGS 490 | WOMEN ACROSS CULTURES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
A critical analysis of the roles of women in societies around the world, with special emphasis on economics, politics and culture. Focus is on African, Asian and Latin American cultures and nondominant groups within Western societies. Topics vary each quarter. (Cross-listed as MLS 441 and WGS 390)

WGS 491 | METHODS AND SCHOLARSHIP IN WOMEN'S & GENDER STUDIES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
An exploration of the transforming effects that feminist methodologies and scholarship have had in the social sciences and humanities. This course emphasizes interdisciplinary research approaches, feminist publishing, and the interplay of research and activism, as it prepares students to write a research proposal.

WGS 493 | FINAL PROJECT INDEPENDENT RESEARCH | 4-8 quarter hours
(Graduate)
This course involves individual investigation and research (toward completion of the Master's thesis, project, or portfolio) under the supervision of a faculty member. A minimum of 4 credit hours required. Course can be repeated for a total of 8 credit hours.

WGS 495 | SPECIAL TOPICS IN WOMEN'S STUDIES | 4 quarter hours
(Graduate)
Topics vary. See schedule for current offerings.

WGS 496 | CANDIDACY CONTINUATION | 0 quarter hour
(Graduate)
This 0-credit hour course is available to master's degree candidates who are actively working toward the completion of a thesis, project, or portfolio. Enrollment in this course is limited to three quarters and requires thesis/project advisor and graduate director approval and demonstration to them of work each quarter. Enrollment in this course allows access to the library and other campus facilities. This course carries and requires the equivalent of half-time enrollment status. The student may be eligible for loan deferment and student loans. This course is graded as pass/fail. (0 credit hours)
WGS 497 | CANDIDACY MAINTENANCE | 0 quarter hour (Graduate)
This 0-credit hour course is available to graduate students who are not registered for a course in a given quarter but need to maintain active university status. Enrollment in this course is limited to three quarters and requires permission of the graduate director. Enrollment in this course allows access to the library and other campus facilities. This course does not carry an equivalent enrollment status and students in it are not eligible for loan deferment or student loans. This course is not graded. (0 credit hours)

WGS 498 | FOREIGN STUDY | 4 quarter hours (Graduate)
Foreign Study.

WGS 499 | INDEPENDENT STUDY | 12.00 quarter hours (Graduate)

World Language Education (WLE)

WLE 326 | THEORETICAL FOUNDATIONS OF TEACHING ESL AND WLE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course introduces key foundational theories of English as a second language and world language education that form the basis of our development as language education practitioners and professionals. The course explores theories of language, theories of learning and learners, and theory-driven teaching, as well as the philosophical paradigms that inform them. Foundational theories are introduced as problem-solving tools that provide interdisciplinary perspectives of English as a second language and world language education, and as frameworks for critically reading literature on language education theory, research, and methods.

WLE 349 | STANDARD AND CONTENT-BASED METHODS OF TEACHING WORLD LANGUAGES K-12 | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course prepares candidates to teach world languages at the elementary, middle and secondary school levels consonant with an aligned approach to meeting national and state WLE standards and Common Core standards. It examines the theory and practice of traditional or standard methods of teaching world languages (e.g., communicative approach, natural approach, etc.) with an emphasis on developing alternative, post-method strategies and using diverse resources, as well as on reformulating world languages instruction to integrate subject matter content into the curriculum, including science, social studies, math, fine arts, etc. Engages candidates in understanding and applying the “Five Cs”-Communication, Cultures, Connections, Comparisons, and Communities outlined in the national standards-toward this end. Lesson and unit development, evaluation/assessment, and classroom management also will be discussed. Issues that emerge in planning and instruction are discussed and deliberated through university classroom experiences as well as required fieldwork (20/15 hours; level 1 in language of certification).

WLE 360 | SECOND, WORLD AND HERITAGE LANGUAGE ACQUISITION | K-12 | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course is an introduction to the theoretical study of second, world and heritage language acquisition (SLA) from a generative and psycholinguistic perspective at the K-12 levels. The content of the class is founded on the major concepts and issues of language acquisition, including UG-access, L1-transfer, age effects, and the acquisition of form vs. meaning. The course pays particular attention to empirical second and world language studies at the syntax/semantics interface. Course readings and discussion examine the complexities of the processes involved in acquiring a world language that includes the relation between first and SLA; contrastive and error analysis; interlanguage; the social and cultural influences on SLA; learner variability, learning strategies; and classroom interaction analysis. Issues surrounding second and world language acquisition are discussed and deliberated through university classroom experiences as well as required field experiences (20/15 hours; level 2).

WLE 370 | SECOND & WORLD LANGUAGE LITERACIES AND CULTURES | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course examines the interdisciplinary study of first, second and world languages and multiple L1 and L2 literacies in their cultural, social, and political contexts, with emphasis on issues of ethnicity, identity, social class, gender, power, and other related topics relative to ideologies of reading and writing the world through reading and writing the word. Special focus is placed on these topics as they pertain to the extent research on language, literacy, and culture represented in the WLE certification language communities, as well as in the literature, art, music, and popular culture of those communities as means of advocating students' sense of identity as global citizens (20/15 hours; level 1).

WLE 375 | WLE HISTORY, POLICY, AND CURRICULUM DEVELOPMENT | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course engages students in WLE curriculum development and language program advocacy, creation, and sustainability based on an examination of federal and state WLE history and policies and on a review of national and state standards. Reviews theory and application of curriculum development to world language instructional programs, such as design, scope and sequence, organizational patterns, materials and media, teacher training, parent and community involvement, and evaluation. Principal world language education program models are examined and analyzed in light of WLE history, policy, and standards (20/15 hours; level 1).

WLE 326, WLE 349, WLE 360, WLE 370 and BBE 307 are prerequisites for this class.

WLE 384 | CAPSTONE IN WORLD LANGUAGE EDUCATION | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course is taken concurrently with WLE 385, Student Teaching in World Languages. In this course, students will have opportunities to reflect on their student teaching experience and prepare materials to support their employment searches and career as teachers. COREQUISITE(S): WLE 385.
WLE 385 | STUDENT TEACHING IN WORLD LANGUAGES | 12 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
(12 credits) Student teaching is the culminating experience of the World Languages certification program. It is a ten-week, 30-hour/week experience. Students must successfully complete student teaching with a grade of B- or better in a language classroom in which they are seeking certification to teach. The course is taken concurrently with WLE 384, World Languages Capstone. Application and approval required. Open only to DePaul students. (12 credit hours)

Writing Rhetoric and Discourse (WRD)

WRD 98 | PREPARATION FOR COLLEGE READING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
For students who need extra preparation in the development of college reading skills. Emphasizes development of reading strategies suitable for understanding a range of texts.

WRD 102 | BASIC WRITING II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
WRD 102 prepares students for college-level writing by examining composing processes and the way writers function in a community of other writers and readers. The course helps students increase the effectiveness of their writing practices and develop a sense of confidence in themselves as writers. The course is ideal for students with less writing experience or those who want more exposure before taking WRD 103.

WRD 102X | BASIC WRITING (FOR NON-NATIVE SPEAKERS) | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
WRD 102X prepares students for college-level writing by examining composing processes and the way writers function in a community of other writers and readers. The course helps students increase the effectiveness of their writing practices and develop a sense of confidence in themselves as writers. The course is ideal for students with less writing experience or those who want more exposure before taking WRD 103 or 103x. X sections are specifically designed for students whose first or dominant language is not English. Students have the opportunity to focus on writing challenges that are unique to writing English as a second or additional language, including increased attention to language skills and to the cultural expectations of U.S. academic audiences. The lower enrollment capacity allows for greater attention to students’ individual writing needs. WRD 102x addresses the same learning outcomes as WRD 102.

WRD 103 | COMPOSITION AND RHETORIC I | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
An introduction to the forms, expectations, and conventions of writing at the college level. Emphasis on audience analysis, rhetorical stance, and the nature of the composing process.

WRD 103X | COMPOSITION AND RHETORIC I (FOR NON-NATIVE SPEAKERS) | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
An introduction to the forms, expectations, and conventions of writing at the college level. Emphasis on audience analysis, rhetorical stance, and the nature of the composing process. X sections are specifically designed for students whose first or dominant language is not English. Students have the opportunity to focus on writing challenges that are unique to writing English as a second or additional language, including increased attention to language skills and to the cultural expectations of U.S. academic audiences. The lower enrollment capacity allows for greater attention to students’ individual writing needs. WRD 103x addresses the same learning outcomes as WRD 103.

WRD 104 | COMPOSITION AND RHETORIC II | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Developing a convincing argument with information and evidence drawn from a variety of sources. Emphasis on effective research strategies and professional use of sources.

WRD 104X | COMPOSITION & RHETORIC II (FOR NON-NATIVE SPEAKERS) | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Developing a convincing argument with information and evidence drawn from a variety of sources. Emphasis on effective research strategies and professional use of sources. X sections are specifically designed for students whose first or dominant language is not English. Students have the opportunity to focus on writing challenges that are unique to writing English as a second or additional language, including increased attention to language skills and to the cultural expectations of U.S. academic audiences. The lower enrollment capacity allows for greater attention to students’ individual writing needs. WRD 104x addresses the same learning outcomes as WRD 104.

WRD 105 | WRITING IN THE DISCIPLINES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course prepares new international transfer students for academic success at DePaul. It serves as an introduction to academic support services and opportunities available at DePaul, and the conventions of US academic culture, and the City of Chicago as an academic and culture resource. Topics include differences in approaches to teaching and learning; creating and sustaining productive student-faculty relationships; successful study patterns; and the relationship between liberal and professional education in American culture. Students will do assigned reading on course topics, keep a reflective journal, and engage with each other through discussion and presentation.

WRD 108 | COLLEGE READING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Devoted to the acquisition and development of analytical, critical, and interactive reading skills essential to continued success in college, regardless of intended major. Emphasizes effective reading techniques, vocabulary development, and comprehension improvement applicable to all academic disciplines.

WRD 111 | TRANSITION DEPAUL | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course prepares new international transfer students for academic success at DePaul. It serves as an introduction to academic support services and opportunities available at DePaul, and the conventions of US academic culture, and the City of Chicago as an academic and culture resource. Students will do assigned reading on course topics, keep a reflective journal, and engage with each other through discussion and presentation.

WRD 200 | WRITING IN THE DISCIPLINES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Preparation for writing in academic disciplines. Special attention to forms, conventions, and expectations in university writing at the intermediate level.
WRD 201 | DIGITAL WRITING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
An introduction to the study and practice of writing in the digital age. Students will consider a range of digital text types, such as web pages, social media, blogs, online videos, and interactive media, to better understand the technologies, rhetorical conventions, and practices that contribute to and emerge from digital texts. Students will also produce digital texts of their own. No prior digital production experience is necessary.

WRD 103 (C- or better required) or HON 100 is a prerequisite for this course.

WRD 202 | PROFESSIONAL WRITING FOR BUSINESS | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Effective organization and design of documents common in business life - letters, memos, reports, and resumes. Attention to audience, purpose, and style. Two quarter hours credit.

WRD 104 or HON 100 is a prerequisite for this course.

WRD 202X | PROFESSIONAL WRITING FOR BUSINESS (FOR NON-NATIVE SPEAKERS) | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Effective organization and design of documents common in business life - letters, memos, reports, and resumes. Attention to audience, purpose, and style. These sections are specifically designed for students whose first or dominant language is not English. Students will have the opportunity to focus on writing challenges that are unique to writing in a second or additional language, including increased attention to language skills and to the cultural expectations of both U.S. and international business audiences. These sections address the same course objectives all WRD 202 sections. Two quarter hours credit.

WRD 104 or HON 100 is a prerequisite for this course.

WRD 203 | STYLE FOR WRITERS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course provides students with opportunities to explore stylistic choices in written prose. Students will examine both published work and their own writing to explore how to manipulate language in specific contexts to achieve specific ends. Writing workshops will help students provide and receive constructive comments aimed at revision of drafts.

WRD 204 | TECHNICAL WRITING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In this course, students learn to communicate and interpret specialized information for readers’ practical use. The course highlights the action-oriented goals of technical writing and the importance of accurately communicating information to users. The course provides an overview of key issues related to technical writing such as usability, audience analysis, designing pages and screens, effective collaboration with peers, interpreting and presenting data, and writing clearly and persuasively. Students learn to write, revise and present common technical writing genres such as instructions, tutorials, manuals, reports, product/process descriptions, proposals, and oral presentations.

WRD 205 | HISTORY OF LITERACIES AND WRITING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Literacy is traditionally defined as the ability to read and write. This course will expand that definition to also explore the technological, cultural, and political aspects of literacy from the earliest archeological record of writing to modern information technology and digital literacy. Students will examine practices and narratives surrounding literacy, learn how both physical media and social power constrain what information gets recorded and how, and question the implications of these constraints on the ways we define and engage literacy and writing.

WRD 206 | PROFESSIONAL WRITING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In this introductory course, students learn fundamentals of professional writing, with a special focus on distinguishing academic writing from workplace writing. The course provides a solid foundation that students can build on as they develop specializations in their professional fields. Through a series of short assignments, students explore the structure and format of typical professional writing documents, examine a variety of workplace writing situations, and begin developing a clear and concise style appropriate for professional settings. Students analyze and write a number of workplace genres, such as memos, emails, letters, resumes, short reports, web documents, and professional presentations.

WRD 207 | INTRODUCTION TO WRITING AND RHETORIC | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
An introduction to key concepts in the history of rhetoric, the development and current state of rhetoric and writing, and the impact of rhetoric on contemporary life. The course aims at understanding rhetoric as a theoretical approach, a set of practices, and a discipline.

WRD 208 | INTRODUCTION TO REASONED DISCOURSE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Study of the problems of reasoned discourse, emphasizing invention and construction of arguments for varied audiences.

WRD 104 or HON 100 is a prerequisite for this course.

WRD 209 | GENRE AND DISCOURSE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In this class, students examine how discourse and genres are used to frame issues and instantiate values and beliefs. Students will explore theories of genre and discourse, learn to analyze how genre and discourse operate, understand the relationship of formal features to beliefs and practices, and produce texts in a variety of genres.

WRD 227 | WRITING RESEARCH WITH IDENTITY | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
An introduction to exploring the relationship between identity and research and its effect on writing research papers. Students will reflect on how their cultural and socioeconomic background intersects with their desire to write research papers. The course is specifically designed for students in DePaul's Arnold Mitchem Fellows Program.

WRD 228 | WRITING AN ANNOTATED BIBLIOGRAPHY | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In this course, student will learn how to create annotated bibliographies that align with their research identity. Students will identify a research topic, develop a preliminary question, and analyze sources to create an annotated bibliography. The course is specifically designed for students in DePaul's Arnold Mitchem Fellows Program.

WRD 229 | WRITING A LITERATURE REVIEW | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In this course, students will learn how to write literature reviews that align with their research identity. Using their annotated bibliography create from WRD 228 students will outline, draft, and finalize a literature review that improves their understanding of a research topic in preparation for future research projects. The course is specifically designed for students in DePaul's Arnold Mitchem Fellows Program.
WRD 231 | GOOGLING GOD: RELIGIOUS PRACTICES IN DIGITAL CULTURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course examines how religious rituals and practices, in both historical and contemporary contexts, have been adopted and adapted in digital culture and by new media technologies. By exploring the intersections of religious and digital practices, students will consider the relationship between spiritual transcendence and secular technologies and will identify diverse religious perspectives and evaluate ethical positions on the relationship of religion, technology, and culture.

WRD 232 | THE LANGUAGE OF DISABILITY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course considers a variety of texts, such as scholarly works, symbols, and expressions in popular culture, to explore the critical role language plays in determining disability and related concepts. We will consider how both dominant and dissenting cultural discourses regulate actions we take on behalf of or against those-defined as disabled. The course will explore how rhetorical dynamics in varied professions shape the implications of disability, making it appropriate to students with a wide range of academic and career interests.

WRD 103 (C- or better required) or HON 100 is a prerequisite for this course.

WRD 240 | ARGUMENTATIVE WRITING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Students in this course will learn techniques for constructing argumentative writing, working with rhetorical methods of inventing and arranging written arguments. Students will examine different genres of argument, but the focus in the course will be on student production and revision. This course builds on and extends skills in argumentative writing that students gain in the first-year writing program.

WRD 104 or HON 100 is a prerequisite for this course.

WRD 241 | THE ESSAY FROM PRINT TO NEW MEDIA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
An introduction to one of the most elastic of artistic forms, this course explores the history of the essay from its origins in alphabetic text to contemporary renditions in film, audio, and interactive media. With close attention to social, political, and historical contexts, students will consider how essayists join content with form to simultaneously meet aesthetic and persuasive ends. By composing their own essays in varied media, students will explore the essay as both a work of art and a work of social action.

WRD 260 | RHETORICAL ANALYSIS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will introduce students to methods for analyzing symbolic acts and artifacts in order to understand the perspectives and motivations which shaped them. Students will analyze a variety of rhetorical artifacts from several perspectives including classical rhetoric, argumentation, metaphor, feminism, dramatism, and ethics. Through analysis, students will learn how messages are constructed in order to produce certain effects as well as how to question and respond critically to communication.

WRD 261 | DIGITAL CULTURE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Digital information technologies proliferate in our culture, significantly impacting the rhetorical contexts in which we work and play. This course will explore a variety of topics related to the expansion of digital culture and rhetoric such as the development of the Internet; gaming; the construction of personal and group identity; media convergence; the distribution of work; community, group, and subculture formation online; political and policy issues; cyberterrorism; privacy, and the representation of technology in popular media.

WRD 262 | THE RHETORIC OF EVERYDAY TEXTS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
From transit signs to nutritional information, to tagging, to social media posts, we encounter “everyday texts” continually in our day-to-day lives. This course examines the social, rhetorical, and technological contexts that form and are formed by such texts, while examining how and why such texts can and do become notable or even extraordinary. The course considers print, digital, and hybrid platforms for both readers and writers. No prior experience with production technologies is necessary.

WRD 263 | READING BETWEEN THE GROOVES: THE RHETORICAL POWER OF POPULAR MUSIC | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
How do songs from rock, hip hop, R&B, country, folk, and other genres make arguments? How do performances by popular musicians offer perspectives on society, politics, and culture? This course takes up these and other questions as it analyzes the power of popular music, guided by the premise that it is both serious and rhetorically complex. The course explores the cultural work of diverse genres, and students may apply what they learn to artists of their choice in papers and projects.

WRD 264 | LANGUAGE, SELF AND SOCIETY | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will explore the way language fundamentally shapes culture and identity. The course will focus particular attention on how we use language and its relationship to thought and power.

WRD 103 (C- or better required) or HON 100 is a prerequisite for this course.

WRD 265 | SOCIAL MOVEMENT, SOCIAL MEDIA, AND AMERICAN IDENTITIES | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
From civil rights and black power movements to women’s liberation and gay rights judicial activism, Americans have participated in social movements to protest precarious conditions and achieve a more livable life. This course introduces students to the study of social movements from a rhetorical perspective and explores ways that social media has reoriented American political participation by democratizing access to information, disrupting old models of power distribution, and allowing for rapid, broad coalition building and immediate moments of multimodal protest.

WRD 103 (C- or better required) or HON 100 is a prerequisite for this course.
WRD 266 | LEVELING UP: THE SOCIAL RHETORIC OF VIDEO GAMES | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Since the 1980s, the culture of video games has evolved from the arcade to the Internet. So too has the way gamers communicate about themselves and their games among themselves. This course will explore video games as both a reflection and engine of culture, as seen through gamers’ rhetorical action. We will consider video games and identity, the rhetorical context of games and online spaces, games as artistic and persuasive texts, and the discourse communities surrounding various gaming genres. You will analyze games themselves, the writing that surrounds them, and the larger cultural moments games both occupy and create. WRD 104 or its equivalent is recommended as a prerequisite.

WRD 270 | ACADEMIC READING FOR INTERNATIONAL/MULTILINGUAL STUDENTS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course prepares international/multilingual students to become more efficient, effective, and critical readers. By developing a range of focused reading strategies, and a deeper awareness of how academic texts function rhetorically within scholarly conversations, students will strengthen their abilities to understand, analyze, and respond to academic readings. Students will practice applying critical reading skills to selected texts from their specific majors. WRD 103 is recommended.

WRD 280 | WRITING IN THE SCIENCES | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course examines the relationship between writing and knowledge-building in the physical sciences, exploring both the historical development of written scientific argument and contemporary genres of writing in the sciences. Students will read, analyze, and discuss a range of scientific genres, including scientific articles, policy reports, public science writing, and presentation formats, while also producing a variety of scientific writing styles. WRD 104 is recommended as a prerequisite.

WRD 281 | WRITING CENSORSHIP | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
An introduction to censorship as both a mechanism of social control and a fundamental element of all rhetorical situations. Explores the history of censorship in the West and engages theoretical questions about the power of language and its suppression as a force for violence. Affords students opportunities to experiment with effective strategies of resistance by writing under varied conditions of censorship.
WRD 103 (C- or better required) or HON 100 is a prerequisite for this course.

WRD 282 | ETHICS OF PUBLIC AND PROFESSIONAL WRITING | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course introduces a critical moral philosophical framework for the study of public and professional writing. Students will learn to critique historic and contemporary texts from an ethical perspective. Students will also explore contemporary ethical issues for writing in digital environments and varied professional contexts.
WRD 103 (C- or better required) or HON 100 is a prerequisite for this course.

WRD 283 | ENVIRONMENTAL WRITING | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
In this class, students will develop knowledge, critical thinking skills, and multi-modal literacies that define writing practices in the environmental community. In order to become more proficient writers, students will analyze and practice a range of genres relevant to environmental issues in the workplace and the larger public sphere, from professional documents such as proposals and reports to research articles aimed at the general public and published in traditional or electronic media. Students will also analyze various new-media genres as indicators of public interests and as tools for reaching and engaging diverse audiences. WRD 104 is recommended.

WRD 284 | SPORTS WRITING IN AMERICA: MYTHS, MEMORIES, HEROES AND VILLAINS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course explores the role of writing within and across multiple sports, viewed through historic, cultural, social, and economic lenses. Students will read, analyze, and discuss multiple genres, including reporting, memoir/nonfiction, and argument, and draft and revise their own writing in these genres on the sports of their choice. WRD 104 is recommended.
WRD 103 (C- or better required) or HON 100 is a prerequisite for this course.

WRD 285 | TRUTH IN DISGUISE: THE RHETORIC OF SATIRE | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Attention to satire as a rhetorical strategy used to persuade, convince, inform, and provoke change or action. Examination of the use of satire to comment on social and political issues across multiple modes and media through the study of particular satirical texts in contemporary and historical contexts. Through the study and composition of satire, students will develop a critical attitude toward satire and the capacity to use satire with rhetorical awareness.
WRD 103 (C- or better required) or HON 100 is a prerequisite for this course.

WRD 286 | WRITING WITH PHOTOGRAPHS | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course explores how writers can use photographs and photography in their writing process and in their texts. Students will use writing to engage with photographs from their personal archives and from public collections, as well as shoot their own photographs and write accompanying text. The course also introduces literary, documentary, and theoretical works that model how photographs and language can work together. No prior experience with photography is necessary, though students must have access to a camera or camera phone.

WRD 287 | THE COMIC BOOK AS VISUAL ARGUMENT | 4 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
This course explores the rhetorical interplay between text and image in the medium of the comic book. The study of the rhetorical art of graphic discourse and the various techniques used by authors and artists working in the medium. Students will examine how the genre of the comic combines text and image to introduce real social questions and argue for interpretations of historical events. Students will move from written analysis of texts to production of their own visual texts in the graphic medium using digital applications.

WRD 290 | WRITER'S TOOLS WORKSHOP | 2 quarter hours (Undergraduate)
Introduction to and practical engagement with specific digital technologies and/or multimodal environments. Two Credit Hours. Tools/topics vary. Can be repeated for credit as topics vary.
WRD 291 | THE SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH POSTER | 2 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
An introduction to the poster as a mode for presenting scientific research in conference settings. In-class workshops will step students through the poster writing and design process, including modules on project planning, the composition and organization of written content, data visualization, fundamentals of visual design and how to talk about your poster with conference attendees. Students will compose and design a poster on a timeline to present at DePaul's annual Natural Science, Mathematics and Technology Showcase.

WRD 300 | COMPOSITION AND STYLE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Advanced instruction in invention, arrangement, and style, toward developing clear and effective prose styles.
WRD 104 or HON 100 is a prerequisite for this course.

WRD 301 | WRITING IN WORKPLACE CONTEXTS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Students examine the roles of writing (transactional, informative, and persuasive) in professional contexts and learn common features of workplace writing situations (internal vs. external documents, collaboration, distribution of expertise and authority, content management, globalization) and strategies for responding to them. They will also learn about stylistic conventions common to workplace genres (building an effective professional persona through writing - tone, document design) and their typical formats. Theory and analysis will ground discussions of production and production-based projects.

WRD 306 | RHETORICAL TRADITIONS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
In this historical survey course, students examine a variety of traditions in rhetorical thought. Students will become familiar with key concepts in the Western rhetorical tradition, while also interrogating the centrality of that tradition by examining marginalized or resistant currents in rhetorical thought.

WRD 309 | TOPICS IN WRITING, RHETORIC AND DISCOURSE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
May be repeated for credit as topics vary. See schedule for current offerings.

WRD 321 | WRITING IN THE LEGAL PROFESSION | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course explores the role of writing, thinking, and problem-solving in legal contexts. Students will gain an understanding of the principles involved in writing effective narrative and persuasive prose for a variety of legal purposes, and be able to apply these principles to their own writing. Students who completed this course as WRD 320, Topics in Professional Writing, may not take the course as WRD 321.
WRD 104 or HON 100 is a prerequisite for this course.

WRD 322 | WRITING AND METADATA | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Writing in digital environments often involves layers of information beyond the written text itself, ranging from the markup languages that identify and structure the text, to hashtags and similar grouping data. Students in this class explore the way those additional layers shape meaning and rhetorical strategies in for both human and machine readers in digital environments; the semantic elements of markup languages; and cultural understandings of metadata, machine reading, and privacy.
WRD 104 or HON 100 is a prerequisite for this course.

WRD 323 | EDITING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Students will explore a range of practices associated with the revision of prose for publication. Students will learn to edit for style and consistency at the document, paragraph, and sentence levels. They will also compare and learn to apply differing style guides, learn technologies central to modern editorial practice, and examine related topics such as the Plain Language Movement and preparing documents for translation.

WRD 324 | WRITING FOR PUBLIC HEALTH AND HEALTH CARE | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course will explore writing in public health and health care. You will analyze contemporary writing produced by government and NGOs, research organizations, public and professional forums and related sites of action. You will apply what you learn to a health writing project on a topic of your own choice.

WRD 330 | LANGUAGE AND LINGUISTICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course introduces students to major concepts in and approaches to studying language, covering topics such as language structure, language acquisition, dialect variation, language and identity, language policy, and literacy. The course presumes no prior knowledge of linguistics and will be relevant to students studying in a wide variety of majors.
WRD 104 or HON 100 is a prerequisite for this course.

WRD 340 | WRITING AND REVISING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course operates on the assumption that the secret to strong writing is revision. Students will learn about theories of revision, studying how successful writers revise, and will then put those techniques into practice. The goal of the course is to develop strategies and understanding of the rhetorical situations of writing in different contexts. Students will work on developing voice, taking ownership of work, and creating strong, well supported arguments.

WRD 345 | GHOSTWRITING | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
This course explores the phenomenon of ghostwriting and affords students opportunities to develop ghostwritten projects. Considers the appearance of ghostwriting across historical and contemporary genres, in print and online, in academic, professional, and imaginative contexts. An introduction to interview as research method and attention to related ethical questions will inform students’ own ghostwriting.
WRD 103 (C- or better required) or HON 100 is a prerequisite for this course.

WRD 360 | TOPICS IN RHETORIC | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)

WRD 361 | TOPICS IN ALTERNATIVE RHETORICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
Women, ethnic minorities, gay/lesbian/transgender writers, and individuals with disabilities are forced to navigate the dominant culture through strategies that draw upon and transform dominant cultural practices. Courses in this topics category will consider questions raised by alternative rhetorics and examine the way rhetorical acts construct such categories and shape the ways in which people are included or excluded from social groups and movements through language use. Students will examine and assess these mediation strategies while also developing theoretical frameworks to analyze and understand them. May be repeated for credit as topics vary.

WRD 362 | SEMIOTICS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
The study of “the sign,” semiotics extends the notion of “text” beyond the written page to any artifact that can “stand for” something else—not only pictures, sounds, gestures, and body language, but also objects and even the spaces between them! Semiotics is therefore the study of making meaning (both “encoding” and “decoding”) in its widest possible sense. You will be invited to explore in course projects: drawing on the full range of media and signifying practices—the value of semiotic principles to your program of study and/or non-academic area/s of interest.

WRD 363 | VISUAL RHETORIC | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
As both consumers and producers, we engage daily with a variety of textual and graphical elements. Participation in this course encourages critical consideration of such encounters. Students will examine the assumptions and practices that inform the authorship and interpretation of both print-based and electronic texts. The course will explore cultural and rhetorical frameworks for understanding, evaluating, and composing visual elements in various media.

WRD 364 | CHICAGO WOMEN RHETORS | 4 quarter hours
(Undergraduate)
What is the history of women’s speaking in Chicago? How have women rhetors made their mark on our city? And how much of this history is widely known? This course asks these questions, looking at how women have made their voices heard, and how women have been remembered by the publics they spoke to. Students will learn about the past and think about how this past has been and can continue to be remembered and interpreted.

WRD 104 or HON 100 is a prerequisite for this course.
